Increase would include supermarkets, clubs, restaurants

Village asks: should more liquor licenses be issued?

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling residents are being asked whether they want the number of village liquor licenses increased to include supermarkets, private clubs and more restaurants.

Currently, there are 21 liquor licenses, including two licenses for not-for-profit clubs. Although the number of licenses issued to businesses has not changed for some time, Trustee Al Lang said he has received several requests from supermarkets and restaurants wanting to serve or sell liquor.

Lang said he decided to use the ongoing Wheeling Village Board accountability sessions to get feedback from the community on increasing the liquor licenses. He said he also would like residents to write to him at the village hall if they have any opinion on the matter.

"This way we can say we've gone to the people and this is what they want," he said.

ALTHOUGH LIQUOR licenses are controlled by Village Pres. Ted Scanlon, he only has responsibility for issuing or revoking those licenses created by the village board. Any new licenses have to be approved by the village trustees.

Lang said he wants feedback because an increase in licenses can both help and hurt the community.

While noting the increased revenue received by the village from liquor licenses, Lang said "Every place in town could have a liquor license and that's not so great either. I don't think any resident wants that kind of connotation to this town," he said.

Jaycee awards to be presented

The annual Jaycee Week awards for contributions in community service, law enforcement and education will be presented tomorrow at the Mayor's Prayer Breakfast.

Cook County Clerk Stanley Kusper will speak on the duties of his office at the breakfast, which begins at 10 a.m. at the Fireplace Restaurant, 604 N. Milwaukee Ave.

The Distinguished Service award will be presented to park board member Lorraine Lark, while Wheeling Patrolman Frank Murphy will receive the Outstanding Young Law Enforcement Officer award.

The recipient of the Outstanding Young Educator award will be announced at the breakfast, since the selection committee did not review nominations until last night.

Tickets for the breakfast cost $2.50 and are available at the door.

3 liquor licenses offered by village

The Village of Wheeling currently has three types of liquor license ranging in cost from $1,850 to $500 a year.

Only one restaurant in the village carries a Class A liquor license, which permits the sale of liquor until 4 a.m. To qualify for the license, a restaurant must seat at least 200 people in the main dining room and offer a full dinner menu. La Galerie, formerly the Union Hotel Restaurant, at 124 S. Milwaukee Ave. has the only Class A license.

Class B licenses allow for the sale and serving of liquor until 2 a.m. These licenses are issued to package stores, taverns and restaurants, and cost $650.

Class C licenses allow for the sale and serving of liquor until 2 a.m. These licenses are issued to package stores, taverns and restaurants, and cost $650.

Trustee Ed Berger said too many liquor licenses would also hurt existing liquor stores by "spreading it out too thin."

The 11 residents at this week's accountability session appeared to have no objections to increasing the number of village liquor licenses. Two of the residents, however, said they did not want beer and wine to be sold in the supermarkets.

ANOTHER RESIDENT said beer and wine licenses would "make it very easy for these kids to go in and drink."

"The state made it easy for them," Lang responded. He said he agreed that youngsters who are old enough to go into the army are also old enough to drink. Scanlon said one of the reasons for the review of present liquor license policy is that "laws have changed the drinking habits throughout the state."

According to Lang, the village board will review the request for increased licenses after the accountability sessions end next month.

Possible ways of expanding the number of licenses include adding a beer and Eighteen businesses in Wheeling have Class B licenses. They include Hackney's Restaurant, Lums Restaurant, Donovan's Family Pub, Le Francois, MacArthur Park Pub, Enrico Brothers Restaurant, Kilcoyne's Redwood Inn, Klem's Village Tap, Kristof's Wheeling Manor Restaurant, The Fireplace Restaurant, Hill Top Inn, Merit's Pub, Don Roth's Restaurant, Jeffery Lanes, Foremost Liquors, Mark Drugs and George's Place.

In addition, The Phillip Carpenter Armvets Post 66 holds one of two recently created Class C licenses. This license costs $500 and can be issued only to not-for-profit clubs.

Lang said all of the major chain stores in wheeling have requested this type of license.

The trustee said residents like Mr. Steak are seeking either a beer and wine license or a permit that would allow drinks to be served with food.

TRUSTEE WILLIAM HEIN also asked residents for their reaction to creating a separate license for private clubs, such as the LaCancha Raquet and Swim Club proposed for 1225 S. Wheeling Rd.

Hein said such private clubs now are allowed to serve liquor that is brought to the club by its members. He said that by issuing a license for the private club, the village could control liquor use as well as getting revenue from the license fee.

"If they are going to be doing this, perhaps the village should issue a license and have some control over it," he said.

Persons wishing to comment on the liquor licenses should write to Lang at the Wheeling Village Hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

Wife, son charged in conspiracy to murder husband

by STIRLING MORITA

A 31-year-old Schaumburg woman and her 13-year-old son were charged yesterday with conspiring to murder the woman's husband, U. S. Air Force Maj. Duane Swinley Sr., who reportedly is worth $500,000.

Charged with solicitation to commit murder were Darlene Swinley, 322 Meacham Rd., Schaumburg, and her son from a prior marriage, Joseph Enderle.

Mrs. Swinley was arrested at about 11 a.m. yesterday in the parking lot of the Woodfield Theatre in the Woodfield Shopping Center after a month-long investigation by Schaumburg police, police reported. The youth was arrested at a nearby school.

A COOK COUNTY State's Attorney's investigator, posing as a "hit" man, had arranged to collect a $500 advance on a $5,000 "contract" at a meeting outside the theater, according to Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy. He said Mrs. Swinley passed $100 to the investigator and promised more at a later date.

Schaumburg police uncovered the al-

Creativity colors their art classes

by JILL BETTNER

Inside these laboratories, familiar colors are mixed in strange concoctions, creating new colors. A hunk of pure white plaster is explored and striking shapes discovered. A knife is put to an ordinary block of linoleum and the kitchen flooring becomes a printing tool.

The experiments are endless in these workrooms because there are no limits to a child's imagination and no restrictions placed on his creativity in art classes in School Dist. 21.

Students are given the freedom to investigate media and materials to develop new uses for common items such as paper, paint, cloth, metal — anything available. Under their hands, they become unique art forms.

"I think the most important thing in teaching art to children this age — or any age — is that we're teaching them an entirely different way to think," said Myrtle Pitterer, art teacher at Cooper Junior High School in Buffalo Grove. "We teach certain principles, but they're encouraged to invent their own way of putting them together."

THE PROBLEM-SOLVING approach to art in Dist. 21 is intended to encourage students to use both their intellect and emotions to develop their own creations and evaluate the works of others.

"I guess you could say we're trying to teach kids how to see in a different way," said Len Presley, Dist. 21 art coordinator. "They have the ability — it's just a matter of bringing it out."

On the elementary level, part of the process of developing this awareness is to help students sharpen their senses, enabling them to take a closer look at their world.

Activities are designed to allow children to learn how experiences are interpreted through the senses and how they can be recreated in various art media.

IN BOTH ELEMENTARY and junior high classes, art is stressed as part of the total human experience. Frequently, for example, students study the art of a par-

Some firms offer matching service

More commuters make move to pools

by LEA TONKIN

Morning rush hour is no longer every man for himself. A new breed of commuters, with some encouragement from high gasoline prices and maybe from their employers, is getting together to pool it.

It's not unusual to see someone in the passenger seat of the car in front. Your headlights may even pick out a whole backseatful of poolers, crunched shoulder-to-shoulder in the pre-dawn ride to work.

"I told them right from the start, that we have to be flexible," said one pool member. "And we turned out to be very compatible."

There's the problem of Wally Phillips vs. Newsradio, the guy who likes a morning cigar vs. the non-smoker, and of course where to stop for a drink after work, but car poolers are finding in this time of energy crisis that riding with the guys isn't bad at all.

Figures are hard to come by, say Northwest suburban firms that now encourage cooperative commuting, but employee interest is growing. Top executives in many cases are leading the way.

AT THE MOTOROLA Inc. Communications Division plant in Schaumburg, a Ridefinder program has been in operation for three years. A computer is used to match up interested employees with others who live nearby and work the same schedule. "One man said he cut his gas bill by more than a third, by being in a car pool," said a Motorola representative.

No figures are available on how many employees recently joined car pools, but "quite a few executives and plant personnel" share rides. The company is discussing a possible joint car pool program with other firms in the vicinity.

At the Western Electric regional headquarters in Rolling Meadows, management offers car pooling information forms to interested employees. Some 125 persons signed up so far in the new Share-a-Ride program. "More will sign up, but they're waiting to see if new names are added to the lists," said a spokesman there. Employees can spot other workers who live in the vicinity through the use of a grid system on a map of the Chicago metropolitan area.

Manager Dick Lane at the Aristocrat of Chicago plant in Elk Grove Village reports car pooling and the use of mass transportation is boosted by the company.

AT THE KEMPER Insurance complex in Long Grove, heavy promotion of car pools brought a number of responses from employees. The personnel department works with potential car poolers to match riding habits. "We started last week to match up, so it will be another week before we can tell exactly how many people got into car pools," said a representative. Some 200 employees indicated interest.

William Krick, director of community relations for the Union 76 division of Union Oil Co. of Calif., said a number of people have signed up for car pools in the past six weeks. The company leaves it up to the employee to make arrangements. Economics and hopefully, patriotism, prompt car pooling, said Krick.

United Air Lines, Inc., Elk Grove township, signs up potential drivers and riders. Special decals are offered to car poolers with three or more members, allowing them to use reserved parking space near the office facilities. Approximately 80 employees are recent car pool members.

Henry Koehler, director of administrative services at Universal Oil Products Co. in Des Plaines, said the company is considering the use of reserved parking spaces for car poolers. "We circulated a questionnaire a couple of months ago which had as part of it, a question about car pools," he said. "The response was sufficient to lead us to display maps in the cafeteria area." Employees who signed up for car pools could arrange car pools on their own.

Rebates for gasoline expenses are offered to employees of Plymouth Minnesota, Inc. At the company's outlet in Arlington Heights, manager Roger Pegg said four out of six employees joined a car pool.

"VERY LITTLE response" was reported by Dick Reimann of FBK Realtors firm in Arlington Heights, to the company's offer of matching up area residents interested in car pooling. "We still

Police hunt Scouts for lead on arson

Two Boy Scouts rebuffed at the scene of a fire in Arlington Heights when they tried to tell police about two arsonists they saw running away, are being sought for questioning. Police hope the Scouts can provide some evidence in the hunt for two youths suspected of splashing gasoline in the basement of the 24-unit building and setting it afire.

26-cent gas? Not exactly...

Twenty-six cents for regular? That's what the pump says, but it's only for a half-gallon. "We aren't trying to mislead anybody," explained Dan Palenske, manager of the Phillips 66 station at Euclid Avenue and Northwest Highway in Arlington Heights. "The price is 52 cents a gallon and the pump computers only go to 49.9 cents. We have the signs up and if anybody looks confused, we explain it to them right away." The station's 1959 pumps will soon be remodeled for 1974 prices.

Most schools closed today

Most schools in the Northwest suburbs will be closed today for teacher institute workshops. The list of districts where schools will be closed includes districts 15, 21, 23, 25, 26, 54, 57, 59, and 211. Classes will resume at their regular time on Monday. In Des Plaines, schools in districts 62, 63 and 207 will remain open today. However, Dist. 207 will be closed Monday for teachers' institute.

No trading halt for silver firms

A Cook County Circuit Court judge yesterday refused to grant an injunction against Luigi M. DiFonzo and North American Trading Co. Attorney for NATCO creditors and a sister firm, North American Investment Co. (NAICO) had asked for an order blocking DiFonzo from making any further silver commodity transactions in an effort to protect the assets of both firms. Judge Samuel Epstein told the lawyers to file new motions requesting the injunction and said he will hear arguments Wednesday on the request. DiFonzo, who exercised his Fifth Amendment right and refused to answer some 25 questions at a bankruptcy hearing Wednesday, is under investigation by federal and state agencies.

Two injured in house fire

A house fire yesterday injured two men and did $10,000 damage to a house at 915 S. Braintree Dr., Schaumburg. Ken Fabbri, 27, suffered second-degree burns and a broken toe in the blaze and was reported in good condition at Alexian Brothers Medical Center after the blaze. His roommate, Kevin Bergman, 20, was treated for smoke inhalation. Fire Chief Lloyd Abrahamson said candles on semestereo equipment in the house may have caused the fire.

Hicks Road widening OK?

The Illinois Highway Department is ready to approve the widening of Hicks Road between Baldwin Road and Rand Road in Palatine. The road will be improved this summer to four lanes with a 16-foot median. Project cost is estimated at $1.9 million and will be financed by matching state and federal highway fund allocations.

'Our man in Elk Grove Village...'

Joel Daly, Chicago newscaster who covered the Jan. 6 ambulance death tragedy, was introduced yesterday as a reporter who's traveled from Egypt to Elk Grove Village in search of the news. Daly, who served as moderator at a panel discussion sponsored by the O'Hare Executives Club, then remarked that he'd feel safer in Egypt than in Elk Grove. Mrs. Jean Petree, 36, died after the village refused to send an ambulance to her home in a nearby unincorporated area.

Kusper denies voting-machine bribe charges

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

County Clerk Stanley Kusper denied yesterday that the sale of nearly $1 million in voting machines to the City of Chicago was influenced because he accepted $7,500 in yearly legal fees from the firm's local sales representative.

In a county building press conference "to end suggestions that I have done something wrong," Kusper admitted receipt of $35,000 in legal fees between 1968 and 1972 from the investment firm of Max E. Miller & Son Inc. of Chicago.

As local representative of AVM Corp., Jamestown, N.Y., the Miller firm negotiated the sale of 365 voting machines for $864,305 to the city in 1971 and 1972.

KUSPER WAS chairman of the Chicago Board of Election Commissioners from 1968 to 1973. He was appointed county clerk in March, 1973 and is the Democratic candidate for county clerk.

"I have not taken one cent of AVM money and I never will," Kusper said. "Suggestions that I have done something wrong are misguided and unfounded."

"Some people believe and charge that the money that I received from Miller was in the nature of a bribe from AVM to induce the Board of Election Commissioners to purchase voting machines. Nothing can be further from the truth. I have never taken a bribe from anybody," he said.

Kusper produced correspondence with Joseph Miller, president of the Chicago firm, that established a $1,000-a-month fee for legal work beginning April 1, 1966, nearly two years before Kusper became election board chairman. The fee was reduced to $625 a month, with quarterly payments, in 1968, another letter stated. Miller paid Kusper an additional $5,000 for handling three Chicago real estate transactions in 1968.

KUSPER SAID HE continued to receive the monthly fee as a "retainer" until 1972 when he halted the arrangement because of possible impropriety. "I did receive legal opinions that it was not improper to continue," he said.

The fees he received while election board chairman were for prior services or were a "retainer in case they wanted me to work for them again."

Miller became AVM representative through Kusper's recommendation and after the death of former agent Jerry Senninger.

"I've known Joe Miller since we were boys. It never occurred to me when I suggested the Max Miller Co. to Mr. (Morgan) Doolittle of AVM as a financial consultant, that there was anything wrong with recommending a friend who was in a financial business."

Both Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey and U.S. Atty. James Thompson are investigating the vote machine sales.

"The people in the community are entitled to have the investigation carried on without interference," Kusper said.

RECORDS OF the Miller firm and the election board were subpoenaed this week.

Former AVM president Lloyd A. Dixon Jr. and sales manager Morgan O. Doolittle Jr. are charged with bribery of officials in Arkansas and Texas to influence voting machine sales. AVM has agreed, as a corporation that is now under new management, to plead guilty to the charges. The investigation was started by federal officials in Buffalo, N.Y.

"I DO NOT recall that Mr. Doolittle's inquiry concerned a sales representative for AVM. My recollection is that I was asked to recommend a financial consultant and I mentioned a number of firms," Kusper said. "If they (AVM) happen to like a guy, that's not my problem."

Kusper said he had regular lunches with Doolittle "whenever he came to town." He claimed that Chicago saved $30,000 because of improved ordering practices for the machines.

KUSPER SAID he "was totally unaware of specifics of the agreement" between Miller and AVM.

"Why not order direct from AVM?"

Food basket price up again

The average annual cost of a typical American family's food basket rose in December to a near-record $1,650, or 23.3 per cent higher than it was one year earlier. Recent boosts in the price of wheat, potatoes and beef cattle are almost certain to push the market basket costs to new heights in January, officials said. In another money matter, the Cost of Living Council ruled hospitals, nursing homes and other long-term care facilities could boost their prices to offset higher energy costs.

SEN. HENRY JACKSON

Oil price rollback proposed

From Herald news services

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., Thursday proposed a rollback of prices for crude oil and other petroleum products, along with controls that would keep them from rising except on the basis of legitimate cost increases.

Jackson's legislative proposal came in the wake of his charge that the oil companies had not cooperated with him and he intends to pursue his investigation of the energy crisis until the oil executives are "there in their birthday suits."

The senator also said he will introduce legislation next week to require federal licensing for all major oil companies, with public directors appointed to serve on the big firms.

His proposal yesterday came as Senate Democrats, persuaded by oil-state members, backed away from a resolution by Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., which would have put them on record as favoring a price rollback to Nov. 1 levels.

The Jackson bill would set no specific level for a rollback, but would wipe out any increases that could not be fully justified by the oil industry as a pass-through of higher costs.

Jackson said whereas the oil industry was saying a year ago that crude oil prices of $4.35 to $4.55 a barrel would be sufficient to spur development toward self-sufficiency, crude oil from older wells has gone to $5.25 and "new oil" from fresh drilling is at $10.35.

"What seems to be at work is a continuing conviction that the way to eliminate the fuel shortage is to increase prices — by taxes or otherwise — high enough to limit demand by pricing gasoline and fuel oil beyond the reach of many Americans," he said.

Earlier, in an address to Consumer Federation of America, Jackson referred to a charge U.S. oil firms held back military fuel under pressure from Arab oil nations during last October's world-wide alert of American forces.

"We're not going to knuckle under to any tin-horn colonel or sheik over in the Middle East," he declared. "We have a duty and an obligation to put a leash on (the oil industry) before it gets out of control. I want to find out if their corporate loyalty is to the United States or to a sheik over in the Middle East. I know one thing, if their property is threatened they'll want the Marines to land there tomorrow."

Jackson said he was amazed at the alleged lapses of memory some oil executive displayed during his hearings this week when asked about corporate profits.

"They just won't come clean and lay the case out on the table," he said. "But before we get through these hearings, they're going to be there in their birthday suits."

Meanwhile, a group claiming to represent about 100,000 long-haul truck drivers called for a nationwide stoppage Jan. 31 unless the government acts to curb shortages and rising prices of diesel fuel. "We feel we can shut the country down," said a spokesman.

Senate stalls on tax cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate voted Thursday to cut everyone's income taxes at once, but then reversed itself and sent the proposal to committee and an almost certain demise.

After approving the politically irresistible proposal, and then approving a controversial tax increase on wealthy taxpayers — chiefly millionaires — the Senate was convinced to send the tax bill back for reconsideration by the Senate Finance Committee.

Almost certain burial awaits it there. In Senate practice, "reconsideration" usually means no further consideration. Finance Committee Chairman Russell B. Long, D-La., urged reconsideration.

He was joined by Nixon administration officials who were upset by the prospect of a $3.5 billion addition to the federal budget deficit. The reconsideration vote swept away the two controversial amendments.

One would have raised the personal exemption each taxpayer is entitled to claim for himself and each of his dependents to $850 from its existing $750.

The other would have sharply increased the "minimum tax" — a tax paid mostly by millionaires and corporations who benefit from tax preferences often called "loopholes."

The administration opposed both amendments which were offered by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Both amendments were offered as riders to a bill offering tax relief for the families of servicemen who had been POWs in Vietnam. The bill itself had become a vehicle for a number of minor riders decried by liberals.

"I suppose the jockey got too heavy for the horse," said Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine. He said he suspected that those senators in the majority in the 48-27 vote to send the bill back to committee "could see the next Kennedy amendment coming."

He said Kennedy had intended to offer another amendment which would have struck at three tax benefits enjoyed by oil companies.

The first Kennedy amendment, to raise the personal exemption, would have given every taxpayer an immediate tax cut. His taxes for 1973 as well as for his current earnings would have fallen.

For an average family of four with a gross income of $11,000, the tax savings would have been about $76 a year. The cost to the government in lost revenues would have been about $3.5 billion a year.

Then Kennedy joined a band of other liberals in proposing an increase in the "minimum tax" which would have increased taxes for the wealthy and corporations by about $800 million a year.

Opponents of the tax cut said it would add to inflation and to the federal deficit. But Kennedy said the deficit would grow even more if unemployment rises with accompanying rises in unemployment compensation and welfare payments.

Krogh gets six months; says he has no criminal information against Nixon

From Herald news services

Former White House aide Egil "Bud" Krogh — reported to be ready to "spill his guts" with new damaging Watergate disclosures — did almost the opposite Thursday after being sentenced to six months in prison.

Krogh, head of the so-called White House plumbers unit, said he had no information that could implicate President Nixon in criminal activities, and that he received no instructions from Nixon to break into the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist — the charge on which he was sentenced in a Washington federal court.

Krogh, in a 12-page statement issued to newsmen after his sentencing, did say he was authorized to "engage in covert activity" by Nixon's former adviser, John D. Ehrlichman, but declined to say if Ehrlichman actually approved the break-in.

Krogh said the secret unit which he headed was established to investigate Ellsberg's June, 1971, leak of the Pentagon Papers to the news media. The break-in at the office of the psychiatrist — Dr. Lewis Fielding — occurred the following Labor Day weekend in Beverly Hills.

Krogh said his only direct contact with Nixon on the job of the plumbers unit was on July 24, 1971, in which the President described the leak of the papers as "intolerable" and authorized lie detector tests for those involved.

"I received no specific instructions or authority whatsoever regarding the break-in from the President, directly or indirectly," he said.

He pleaded guilty last Nov. 30 to one count of violating the civil rights of Dr. Fielding, while Ehrlichman, and former White House aides David R. Young and G. Gordon Liddy remain under Los Angeles County indictment for the break-in.

Krogh was sentenced by U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell, who suspended all but six months of a 2-to-6 year sentence, saying he took into consideration Krogh's deep sense of remorse and the fact that his "wholly improper, illegal task . . . was assigned by a higher authority."

Krogh has expressed great public remorse since pleading guilty, and speculation grew that he had a lot to say about the Watergate mess. On Wednesday, a close friend — recently-resigned assistant Treasury secretary Edward Morgan — said Krogh would "spill his guts" after sentencing and damage the President.

In other Watergate developments:

• Sam Dash, chief counsel for the Senate Watergate committee, said President Nixon's close friend "Bebe" Rebozo definitely would be a witness when the committee resumes its hearings next week by probing a $100,000 Nixon campaign donation from Howard Hughes.

• Nixon will turn down a request from the Watergate committee for a personal meeting, according to presidential press secretary Ronald Ziegler. Ziegler declined to say specifically whether Nixon also would refuse to answer written questions from the committee, which it said it would pursue as an alternative.

Egypt, Israel seal accord — pullout from W. Bank begins

From United Press International

Israel and Egypt Thursday sealed an historic agreement to disengage their forces on the Suez front as the first step toward ending 25 years of bloody warfare in the Middle East.

Even as generals from the two countries agreed on final details in a U.N. tent at Kilometer 101 on the Cairo-Suez road, Israel started pulling men and equipment from the West Bank of the Suez Canal.

It was the first voluntary Israeli withdrawal from captured Arab territory in 17 years.

In Washington, U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said there have been fresh exchanges with Syria on the issue of troop disengagement with Israel on the Golan Heights. Kissinger, following testimony in closed session before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, also said chief U.S. peace negotiator, ambassador-at-large Ellsworth Bunker, had returned to Geneva for talks with Soviet representatives on the Mideast situation.

The Soviet Union and Egypt, meanwhile, called for full Palestinian participation in the Geneva peace conference in a statement issued after a four-day visit to Moscow by Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmi. Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko was reported to have also called for Syrian inclusion in the talks.

$7.6 billion for education sought

From Herald news services

President Nixon told Congress Thursday that his new budget would call for total spending of $7.6 billion on education. He said he wanted "advance funding" by spring so school officials would know how much federal aid they could have when classes begin the following September.

Nixon told Congress in a special message that for the fiscal year beginning July 1, he still wanted to consolidate 30 "great Society" programs from the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, pushed through Congress by President Johnson in 1965, so local officials could have greater flexibility and control over how their federal education money is spent.

Conservatives have criticized strict guidelines which accompanied funds for elementary and high schools and vocational and adult education programs under the existing program. "School which must respond to detailed and elaborate red tape will be hindered in responding to the demands of students, teachers and parents," said Nixon.

The President said he would send Congress a request next week for a $2.8 billion appropriation beyond the money Congress provided for this fiscal year and that he hoped the request would be approved by spring. This additional money could not be spent until classes begin, but school officials would be able to know how much money will be available in the fall instead of waiting until appropriation bills pass, usually after the school year is well under way.

The proposals include:

• $1.3 billion in grants to needy students for college and other post-seconddary education such as vocational school. • A supplementary program of guaranteed student loans for others who need financial assistance.

• Continuing the impacted aid program for school districts where 25 per cent or more of the students live on federal property and providing only 90 per cent of the money where the figure is under 25 per cent. Funds would be cut off for children whose parents do not live on federal property.

• A new grant program designed to solve school segregation problems.

HIGHJACKERS OUTLAWED. The new state vehicle code has banned cars with highrise rear ends. Cars with more than a three-inch lift or "rake" can no longer be operated on the streets. A hot rodding era passed with the new year.

Sad news for hotrodders

Cars with 'raked' front ends illegal

by JOE SWICKARD
The hotrodders can start crying in their malts at the local drive-in.

The revised Illinois Vehicle Code, effective Jan. 1, has banned cars with the "raked" front ends and the jacked-up tails.

According to the Illinois Secretary of State's office, cars with modified suspension systems that raise the body more than three inches from its original position, or cars with more than a three-inch difference between the height of the front and rear bumper cannot be legally operated on the roads.

As a result of the new code, those hot cars with the high-rise rear ends that look like fuel-injected bloodhounds sniffling the pavement will be confined to garages, custom auto shows or the dragstrip.

Sgt. Jack Weber, of the Arlington Heights police traffic division, said his department was unaware of the new ruling. He said there may be some trouble enforcing the new law until the department receives formal notification.

OTHER POLICE departments said they were holding back until they received notification from the state.

Mount Prospect police said they "knew about the law," but no tickets were being issued until they received the revised statutes.

Lt. Thomas Conte of the Wheeling police, said his men were not going to stop the raked cars until they get it in writing from the state.

However, the streetrodders had better steer clear of Buffalo Grove, because police there are aware of the law.

The law is being enforced "whenever we see them," said Sgt. Ronald Gozdecki, of the Buffalo Grove police. Palatine and Rolling Meadows police are aware of the new law. Rolling Meadows policemen each have a copy of the statute and are on the lookout for offenders. SCULLY'S Kustom Shop of Wheeling does body customizing, but the manager said the raked fronts and jacked backs have fallen from favor.

"You'll see those in 'American Graffiti' when you go to the movie. They're not doing that too much any more. It was a fad and it's pretty much died out. You may see a couple like that once in a while, though," he said.

He said the extreme rake was "impractical."

"It would affect the steering and your visibility was messed up. It also threw your braking system out of line. On a damp day if you had to hit the brakes hard, you'd find your rear end in front of you," he said.

Scully's assessment of the custom-car scene is accurate. The February issue of Hot Rod magazine shows the only cars with the extreme profiles roaring down the dragstrip in the "funny car" class. Those drivers probably figure they would rather take their chances on the strips than battle the commuter's daily double.

Accountability topics: safety, traffic, hospital

by LYNN ASINOF
The 11 Wheeling residents attending the second village board accountability session appeared most interested in public safety, traffic problems and the proposed Wheeling hospital.

Several residents questioned Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon about Franklin Boulevard Community Hospital's plan to build a satellite facility in Wheeling. The hospital is negotiating for the 10 acre Childerly Retreat House property at 506 McHenry Rd.

While many of the residents agreed that a hospital is needed in Wheeling, several questioned the background of Franklin Boulevard and whether the historical buildings on the Childerly site would be preserved.

SCANLON DID NOT have information on the hospital's background, but said this information would be released during hearings before the state hospital licensing board. He added that the hospital has agreed to preserve the Childerly chapel if it purchases the site.

One resident asked if statistics have been gathered showing a need for a hospital in Wheeling. Scanlon said a recent survey conducted by the hospital showed a need for a medical facility based on anticipated growth in the area.

Village Mgr. George Passolt is investigating several safety and traffic problems brought out by the residents. He is planning to talk to Commonwealth Edison Co. about the cost of installing new street lights along Elmhurst Road, Milwaukee Avenue and Wolf Road.

The residents were most concerned about lighting by Wheeling High School, noting that many youngsters spend time in the area both before and after regular school hours.

TRUSTEE Ron Bruhn agreed that the street by the high school is quite dark, and suggested that the village might hold a referendum to finance the installation of new street lights throughout the village.

Residents also asked the trustees to contact county and state highway departments about the lack of coordination in street improvement programs. One resident noted that work will begin this spring on the intersection of Hintz Road and Milwaukee Avenue, without the construction on Dundee Road being completed.

"Isn't there some way we can finish one thing at a time," he said. "Why don't we as the village tell them to get things straight so we can move around this town."

The village trustees explained that they had complained about the situation, but said they have no control over state and county roads.

ANOTHER RESIDENT asked that village bus schedules be revised so that school children can use the bus to get to school. Passolt said about 30 children from Meadowbrook West now take the bus to Walt Whitman Jr. High School, and noted that the bus schedule is being revised.

Passolt said he would also investigate ways of having Wheeling police patrol Brian Lane, a private street just east of Wolf Road. Currently, the police cannot patrol the street since it is not village property.

The third of six scheduled accountability sessions will begin at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 18 at the Sandburg School. The sessions are designed as an alternative to the town meetings promised in the 1971 village elections.

Two charged in murder plot

out the parking lot and took videotape film from an undercover truck, Conroy said.

THE VEHICLE described in the telephone conversation — a black 1972 Lincoln Continental Mark IV — drove in and passed the theater a couple times, the chief reported. The car stopped, and Saladino entered the vehicle, Conroy said.

The woman driving the car handed over $100 and promised to pay $400 of the advance today.

The woman reportedly said, "It's worth $5,000 to kill my husband."

Swimley was reported to be in Germany. Police contacted the Air Force base in Rantoul, Ill., for a message relay to him.

AUTHORITIES DID not immediately know the motive for the alleged plot, but said Mrs. Swimley told Saladino Swimley was worth about a half million dollars.

The man in New York is from this area and called his friend in Schaumburg, who relayed it to police because "he did not know at the time who the victim was," Conroy said.

Mrs. Swimley has two other sons who were brought to the Schaumburg police station temporarily until police could find a place for them.

Joseph was taken to the Audy Home pending a hearing in Family Court.

Mrs. Swimley was being held in Cook County Jail in lieu of $15,000 bond pending an appearance 9:30 a.m. Feb. 23 in Cook County Circuit Court, 26th and California streets.

Students learn about creativity

tical period they are exploring in social studies class.

Sometimes, art activities are even done in other classes to illustrate how the same principles apply to more than one discipline. A fourth grade music class at Hawthorn School recently studied the concepts of contrast and rhythm. After a discussion of the way the two principles function in music, the class made ceramic bowls featuring designs that reflected contrasts and rhythms.

"We're trying to say that art is not a separate subject, nor is music a separate subject, but all areas are interwoven," Presley said. "It's the idea that we live with art."

ANOTHER OBJECTIVE of the art program is to acquaint children with the art of various cultures that have contributed to the American melting pot of art.

As part of the bilingual program in the district, Spanish children are studying the art in their cultural heritage. Currently, a group of bilingual Spanish students at Twain School in Wheeling is constructing a large paper mache bull in connection with culture studies.

The over-all goal of the entire art program is to develop in students a lifelong appreciation of all art forms, according to Presley.

"We're not training students to be artists, but intelligent consumers of art," he said. "By trying to do things themselves, I think they really learn what's involved and it increases their respect for artists and their work."

Suburban car poolers, with employer encouragement, make cooperative commuting work.

Some firms offer matching service have the service available," said Reimann. "But people want to know who they'll be driving with. Possibly it's fear or caution in their minds," he said.

Car poolers should check with their insurance firm to make sure they're covered for added passengers, advised the Kemper representative. Exclusionary clauses could affect coverage.
A seminar on car pooling programs will be offered Feb. 7-8 in Chicago Heights by the Federal Highway Administration regional office.

A Pool-It program will be held Feb. 25 in Chicago's McCormick Place to give companies practical advice on car pools. It's sponsored by the Highway Users Federation, the Illinois Highway Users Conference and the Chicago Metropolitan Committee. Radio station WIND has a car pool matching service.
THE CENSUS Department encourages more workers in Chicago and other metropolitan areas to take up car pooling, as a fast, efficient and cheap way of doing things. According to the Department, some 87 per cent of workers in the Chicago metropolitan area travel to work by car, compared to 19 per cent using public transportation. Only 16 per cent of the people who travel by auto are passengers. The department is promoting its computer CARPOL plan to help companies or municipalities set up car pool systems.

Added information from the Census Department on its CARPOL program is available by writing Users Service Staff, Data Users Office, Bureau of the Census, Washington, D.C. 20233. A single reel of computer tape for the program costs $70 and the documentation can be purchased for $3.

Wheeling students urged to cut back on driving

by KATHERINE BOYCE

The Wheeling High School student forum has become one of the first student groups in the area to take action against student driving to and from school in an effort to conserve gasoline.
A resolution prepared by the forum, asking students and teachers to form car pools or ride buses instead of driving, was accepted by the student body and presented to the Wheeling Village board this week.

Although student groups in several other area high schools have taken steps to conserve energy, none has been as formal or as active as Wheeling.

THE WHEELING resolution refers to a recent statement by President Nixon's energy chief, William Simon, urging high school students to reduce unnecessary driving to school.

Lou Nettelhorst, director of student activities at Wheeling, said, "We know that students are definitely car pooling." Student council members are talking to students individually asking them not to drive to school and they are setting an example by not driving themselves, he said.

The student council will ask the village to allow village-operated shuttle buses to stop at the school during the lunch hour for students who leave the building during their lunch period. They are asking coordinators of school work programs to form car pools for students who leave school early for jobs and want all students to ride the spectator bus instead of driving to sports activities held at other schools.

The student council also has been collecting scrap paper in classrooms for recycling and has asked the school to do away with disposable paper lunch trays in one of the cafeteria lunch lines.

Committees for energy conservation have been formed by student councils at Hersey, Forest View, Arlington, and Prospect High Schools in Dist. 214 and in Conant High School in High School Dist. 211.

AT HERSEY HIGH School, student council members have been encouraging students to ride buses instead of driving to school, but as Student Council Pres. Barry Weinberg put it, "I don't think enough of them really want to not drive to school."

Student council adviser Boyd Saum said about three-fourths of the students at Hersey now ride buses anyway and three-fourths of the 400 parking places at school are taken up by students who are in cooperative work programs and have to use their cars to get to work.

Student groups at Schaumburg and Elk Grove high schools have been discussing student driving but have not taken any action to curb it as yet. A few students and teachers at Fremd High School have formed car pools.

Students in Prospect, Hersey, and Hoffman Estates high schools are collecting scrap paper in the school for recycling.

Viewing can affect child's attention span

HOLLYWOOD — Does television shorten the attention span of children?

It seems to me that this is a question at least as important as whether video violence affects youngsters.

Furthermore, it is a question that can be answered by simple, everyday observation of children rather than having to rely on experiments and statistics that are subjectively interpreted.

My own conclusion is that the length of a child's attention span is affected by the amount of television that he or she watches.

IN MY ADMITTEDLY non-scientific way, I have noticed that the longer a youngster stares at video programs, the foggy and less alert the child's mind appears immediately afterward.

It appears that such a child's attention is more apt to wander, for the mental energy has been sapped, its grain saturated with a multitude of quick visual and verbal impressions.

One can say, of course, that a long period of concentration on many things will have a similar effect on the mind of a youngster, or adult.

However, when you consider the quality of the television material that most

children watch, the matter of mental impact becomes much more significant.

IT IS ONE thing if a youngster is a bit worn out from working hard at school assignments, and quite another if the cause of the foginess is a parade of stupid Saturday morning video cartoons.

The very nature of television presentation — in most areas, and not just cartoons — can have an unsettling effect on the attention span of children, it seems to me.

Video is, in general, a medium that depends on highly rapid transmission of pictures and thoughts. It is fast-fast-fast, almost constantly going-going-going.

Interruptions are the rule, rather than the exception. Aside from non-commercial stations, continuity of thought is almost unheard of. Advertisements and rapid-fire techniques assault the senses.

A PATTERN is established for the youngsters: Watch some quick-moving action. See some cute characters. Look at the commercial.

More action. More cute characters. More ads. Zap! Pow! Bang!

So young minds are conditioned in the critical years of growth to a very hyped-up method of passing time. And, I think, the more they experience this hyped-up style, the more addictive it becomes.

Watch the young video addicts in your neighborhood. Notice the shortness of their attention spans as they talk to their friends.

The possible impact of television violence on children gets a lot of publicity. But my own view is that overlong watching of video shows by youngsters may be far more damaging to their mental processes.

South manages to make six

North's one-diamond response is an example of modernistic bidding. Modern experts tend to use step responses. Thus, when they respond to a club opening they bid the lower of any two four-card suits. With two five card suits they still bid the higher one.

South actually managed to make six when the defense forgot to lead diamonds.

He won the heart lead with dummy's ace because he wanted to keep entries to his own hand. Then he led a club and finessed his jack. West won with the queen and led a second heart to South's king. Now South played out his king and queen of trumps; led a third trump to dummy's ace and played dummy's last club. He then finessed his 10 spot as a safety play to guard against the possibility that East held all missing clubs.

South's contract was safe if the finesse lost. When it won he received the added bonus of shutting out East's ace of diamonds, since he was able to discard dummy's three diamonds and one heart on the good clubs. He made the last two tricks by ruffing his diamond and dummy's last heart.

You tell us (Black's move)

Even a grandmaster can overlook a winning move

Top chess players rarely blunder. Perhaps they monitor possible error in a way similar to Tigran Petrosian, who is reputed to check the safety of each of his pieces before he proceeds with analysis.

International Master Edmar Mednis told me, after leaving a piece en prise in an important game, that he had only made one other blunder on that scale in previous tournament games (in over 20 years). It is not surprising that Boris Spassky should be haunted by egregious errors he made against Bobby Fischer in their title match. "Two of the mistakes I made were the sort which would not be made by a fifth class player," Spassky told an interviewer. "It's been like playing a movie through backwards."

IN CASUALLY playing over random games, I have found the same combinational theme overlooked by grandmasters four times, twice by the victims and twice by the potential perpetrator. I am referring to the not obscure theme involving queen and knight, in which a queen sacrifice is followed by a cataclysmic knight fork.

Two such examples of this theme have appeared in previous columns.

(Diagram 1)
They are given in Diagrams 1 and 2. In the first position, Savon (white) has played 1. Q-Q4? He is hoping to use the time Browne (black) will need to meet the threat of 2. Q-B6 and 3. B-R6 followed by mate to play 2. RxN and be ahead in material. But he missed Browne's jubilation 1... QxN! and in the face of NxP check the Russian champion was finished.

(Diagram 2)
Our next position shows Bobby Fischer making the same thematic oversight.

Shelby Lyman on chess

Here he played 1. Q-QR1, evidently overlooking 1. Q-KR5. He would then win at least the KRP. For if 1... K-N1 (protecting the pawn), 2. QxN! and 3. N-K7 check would have been lethal.

Familiar with these positions, I was surprised to come across our third position. Alekhine (white), an outstanding tactician, played 1. P-QR3? (defending the NP). He missed (did you guess?) 1. Q-R8 check, KxQ; 2. NxP check etc.

Only recently I stumbled on another example given in our last diagram.

(Diagram 4)
The young English phenom Tony Miles played the combination overlooked by his opponent Alberic O'Kelly de Gahway, who had just played a suicidal N-K2?? Miles (black) came up with (you did guess it) 1... Q-R7 check and 2. KxQ, NxP check... etc. Black, a pawn ahead, will march his king up the center and win easily.

Who's next? Let's hope it's your opponent.

Two deaths in Elk Grove: readers view all sides...

EDITOR'S NOTE: Because of the intense interest in the recent Elk Grove ambulance controversy, The Herald has received a landslide of letters on this topic. We're running a selection of them today, and we'll run as many as space permits in the future.

Because of the number of letters, Al Messerschmidt's County Line column will appear Monday.

After reading Thursday's Herald giving the stories of Gary Pettee and of Fire Chief Allen Hulett, my heart goes out to both persons.

It seems to me that they both made regrettable decisions. Gary Pettee made the decision some time ago to contract ambulance service that could not reach him as quickly as could the Elk Grove ambulance. Mr. Hulett, believing he was doing his job, recalled the Elk Grove ambulance on that tragic day.

I am very sad that Mr. Pettee must live without his loved one and hope that he can truly live with a forgiving heart over this situation.

I am also very sad that Mr. Hulett and his family are being harassed and threatened.

It is difficult for me to understand how people can show and feel compassion towards one but not the other. Both lives have been deeply affected and I pray that both persons can find God's peace in this tragic situation.

Kimena Thiessen
Arlington Heights

We, the homeowners of Itasca Meadow Farms Homeowners Assn., wish to take this opportunity to thank publicly the Roselle Rural Fire Dept. for the assistance given us in our most recent tragedy. The prompt, efficient service given the Pettee family, one of our members, in their time of need should set an example that other towns will find difficult to live up to.

With Roselle, it has never been a question of weighing the value of dollars against the value of human life. With Roselle, it has always been humanitarian considerations first and monetary considerations last. You are a credit to the village and to the communities you serve. We are proud and grateful to be associated with you, the Roselle Rural Fire Dept.

Mrs. Mary Ostrowski, Sec'y.
Itasca Meadow Farms
Homeowners Assn.
Elk Grove Twp.

Last week I read in our Wisconsin paper the article about the death of Mrs. Jean Pettee on Jan. 6. Right away I was angry because of the lack of facts and over-abundance of half-truths and assumptions the paper reported. I had hoped that your papers and television were more truthful but soon found out differently. I sincerely hope by this time you people have learned the facts or at least will go out and find them out now.

My father has been in the fire service for over 20 years. In that time he has seen fires, accidents, tornadoes and floods. More, I'm sure, than most people experience in a lifetime. He has saved countless lives and property with the aid of a good fire department, which is what you people of Elk Grove have. You should be proud of this man for helping to develop one of the best fire and rescue services in the world, instead of so quick to criticize something you don't know the facts of. If you only knew the many times my father has been hospitalized because of smoke inhalation and seared lungs to come to the aid of those in need.

A few years ago my father told me of the families who lived outside the village limits who refused to pay for fire and rescue protection. I was appalled to think that people value their lives and property so little.

It was an unfortunate tragedy that happened to bring these facts into the open. Hopefully, legislation will be passed to protect these people in spite of themselves through mandatory payments of fire and rescue protection.

You people who have paid for this fire and rescue department would be awfully upset if when you called for an ambulance or fire truck that they told you that they couldn't respond because they were busy with someone who hadn't paid for their protection, wouldn't you? Your fire department is only as good as the people who stand behind it and to do this you have to support it with your money, through taxes and paid protection and your confidence that what they do is for the good of the village.

Mrs. Fay (Hulett) Gaukel Daughter of Fire Chief Allen Hulett
Madison, Wis.

The recent tragedy adjacent to Elk Grove Village has been upsetting to all. Also disturbing is the hate mail and threatening phone calls directed at our fire chief.

Because of his position, Chief Hulett has to make more life and death decisions than the average person. My encounters with the chief make me believe him to be very humane and that he would never make a decision which may cost a life "just to prove a point."

I believe putting the blame on Chief Hulett is a cop-out. The people in the unincorporated area have been approached on numerous occasions to subscribe to the Elk Grove services. Each time they have refused and gone with the cheapest coverage possible for one reason or another.

When making their (the homeowners') decision, I would presume they weighed the possibility of an emergency in which minutes could mean the difference between life and death. In arriving at their decision to go with Roselle, they had considerable time to weigh the advantages and disadvantages of each service, one thing the chief did not have.

One last point. If we were all to pay for services only after they have been rendered, who is going to help defray the original cost to set up and maintain the services we demand?

David L. Forster
Elk Grove Village

Thank you for your coverage of the Pettee-Elk Ambulance story. I feel your articles and editorial were fair and presented both sides of the story — in direct contrast to the one-sided "hatchet job" Channel 7 did on Chief Hulett, and Elk Grove.

I have been impressed in the past with your (Fred Gaca's, and others') informative, noninflammatory coverage of various Elk Grove meetings and concerns, and I certainly am this time. Thank you again.

Jennifer W. Killian
Elk Grove Village

Mr. Daly and Mr. Smith, WLS-TV:

Irresponsible. To me that word describes your news reporting concerning the recent Elk Grove ambulance story. After listening to commentaries by Mr. Daly and news stories by Geoff Smith, I am outraged.

Concerning the January 10 commentary of Mr. Daly, it's quite obvious that you wrote your commentary on hearsay evidence. You claim that Mr. Pettee called the Elk Grove Fire Department "several" times pleading to the department that his wife was dying. Only did we find out later that Mr. Pettee called the central dispatch the first time and the Elk Grove Fire Department the second time.

After attending the January 17 news conference, and listening to the fire department tapes, why didn't you reveal the true facts to your television audience? Why didn't you tell them what was really on the tapes? Why didn't you tell your audience how many calls Mr. Pettee really made? Could it be that because the true facts differ from what you said in your commentary? I think so.

Concerning Mr. Smith's coverage of the story, this made me even more upset. His remark that Elk Grove must put a $21 price tag on life was sickening. Why didn't you ever state that the Pettee family had contracted with the Roselle Fire Department for $21 annually and for a mere $21 more a year could have had Elk Grove protection. How much then do you think Mr. Pettee valued life?

Mr. Smith also stated something to the effect that some of the tapes might be missing. You said that Mr. Pettee said that he thought he made more calls than were on the tape, obviously implying that some of the tapes were missing, purposely, from the news conference. Did it ever occur to you that maybe it was Mr. Pettee who's wrong and not the village? Probably not.

Allen

I think, gentlemen, that from now on you should not let your emotions enter your news reporting — which they obviously have. And you should find the true facts to a story before you write a commentary on it — which you obviously don't.

Scott R. Scholten
Elk Grove Village

It saddens my heart to read about the incident involving Mrs. Jean Pettee. How one human being can deny another the right to live is hard to understand, especially in this day of modern equipment.

I am writing this letter in hopes that at least one human being might understand and try to help another, rather in action or word. I can no longer just sit around doing nothing about these inhuman acts.

As of this day forth, I shall sustain from eating meat and ask God for the forgiveness of this selfish act.

Please give my regards to Mr. Gary Pettee and tell him that his companion is now safe.

May God be with you.

Dear Dorothy Oliver, Elk Grove Herald City editor:

I would like to compliment Paddock Publications and, in particular, your reporter, Mrs. Jerry Thomas, for the fine objective news coverage Paddock Publications has given to the recent Pettee tragedy. You have presented both sides of an intensely emotional situation with unusually fine objectivity. At a time when the news media is under heavy criticism and attack for their "reporting" methods, Paddock has shown that objective news reporting still exists. Keep up the good work.

...news coverage didn't tell everything...

There was grief enough in the recent death of Mrs. Jean Pettee and her infant child without having the atmosphere clouded by half truths and inaccuracies in the news media.

Judging from a number of letters received from area residents, we find that many readers who are sharply critical of Elk Grove Village Fire Chief Allen Hulett and other village officials unfortunately gleaned their "facts" from coverage by Chicago network television stations.

Mrs. Pettee was dead on arrival at Northwest Community Hospital from a blood clot in the lung after Hulett recalled an ambulance summoned by her husband and dispatched the Roselle Fire Department ambulance, with which the Pettees had contracted for emergency service. The baby died after being delivered by Caesarian section.

Having come upon those tragic facts belatedly, the TV stations, notably WLS-TV, Channel 7, proceeded to blame the entire misfortune on Chief Hulett and the village board before taking the trouble to uncover the full story.

Channel 7 commentator Joel Daly erroneously and repeatedly declared that Mr. Pettee had told the Elk Grove Fire Department that his summons was a "life or death emergency." On one occasion, Daly added: "Those calls, incidentally, should be verifiable on the fire department tape."

Indeed, they are, and they were played for reporters, including Daly. They show clearly that the distraught Mr. Pettee gave the fire department no indication that his wife's life was in danger. Daly never has bothered to correct the false impression which he reported as fact to thousands of viewers.

Daly compounded this irresponsibility by accusing Chief Hulett, with no supporting facts, of political motives and a secret smug satisfaction that two people died because the family did not have a contract with his department.

Such "reporting" is a disservice to the community which needs facts, not half-baked sermonizing, in such a tragedy.

We recognize that the metropolitan mass media are generally professional and reliable. We also recognize the difficulties they encounter in attempting to cover the news in the sprawling suburbs from a Loop office building.

We have in the past been readily willing to defend the rights and the competence of our colleagues in the news business, and we will continue to be so. Likewise, we feel called upon to point it out when the news media stumbles.

Credibility is a precious asset to the press. To preserve it, all news media owe an obligation to their public and the profession to be sure of their facts.

...human life must come first

There are numerous ways to prevent a recurrence of the Pettee tragedy in Elk Grove Township.

One popular bill at this point, from State Sen. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, would give townships taxing power to raise funds to contract for ambulance service to unincorporated areas.

Townships aren't necessarily the best devices for assuring ambulance protection. But we aren't opposed to the idea simply because it would give townships an added function.

The critical point is that ambulance service shouldn't evolve from competition between governing units — a point which all legislators should keep in mind when legislation is considered.

Other alternatives — such as, forced annexation of property to the nearest fire district, rewriting insurance laws or putting departments on a respond-now, billable basis, as is now the case with the Elk Grove Department — are available.

Whichever course the legislature, or local residents, take or support, political considerations should come last. Human life, as demonstrated by the tragedy in Elk Grove Village, should always come first.

Benefit concert will help local social agencies

Residents of the Northwest suburbs will have an opportunity Saturday night to hear one of the nation's outstanding choral groups and at the same time provide urgently needed financial support for two local social service agencies.

For the second year, the widely-acclaimed University of Tulsa Modern Choir will present a benefit concert for Northwest Opportunity Center and The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center.

Radio personality John Doremus and TV weatherman Harry Volkman will co-host the program at 8 p.m. in St. Viator High School Auditorium, 1213 E. Oakton St., Arlington Heights. Tickets at $2.50 will be sold at the door.

It is appropriate that such a benefit focus on these two organizations. Both are committed to meeting the special needs of suburban families. Both face continued problems of finance, often struggling with insufficient funds and deficit budgets.

The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center is concerned primarily with the stability and emotional well-being of the family, dealing with the whole range of family problems — crushed marriages, failing child-parent relationships, personality difficulties, unwed motherhood, alcoholism, old age, drug abuse and others.

The Northwest Opportunity Center focuses its attention on the family's economic health and security, providing help to disadvantaged suburban families in such key areas as jobs, housing, health, adult education and legal aid.

Tomorrow night's concert benefits the two local agencies which deal directly with the suburban family, to strengthen it, to make it well, to bring it back to the community whole.

There is no worthier cause

Is Oakton any different when it comes to money?

We are now entering into that happy season when teachers and school boards sit down across tables and begin bargaining over salaries.

During the next two months, negotiations will be getting under way in almost all area school districts (except those fortunate enough to have negotiated multi-year contracts last year.)

The format of negotiations, with the formal agreements on procedure, the stylized roles and even the stylized threat of a strike, have become a ritual familiar to almost anyone who has been even passingly familiar with a school during the last few years.

That's why it will probably come as a surprise to many that there is actually a place in the Northwest suburbs where a board can cheerfully assure its teachers that its heart is in the right place — and tell them that "nit-picking" over exact wording of negotiations procedures isn't important.

EVEN MORE astonishing is the fact that the teachers, upon hearing these statements from the board, very nearly agreed entirely with them.

The place where this extraordinary turn of events occurred this week was Oakton Community College, the four-year-old two-year college that serves students in Maine and Niles townships.

Nuclear power station plan told

Commonwealth Edison Co., Interstate Power Co. and Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Co. announced Wednesday that a decision has been made to build a jointly owned 2,200-megawatt nuclear power station near Savanna, Ill.

As disclosed earlier, feasibility studies regarding the building of an electric generating facility in the area were started last summer. The nuclear station will consist of two 1,100 megawatt units for service in 1983 and 1984. The station will cost in excess of $600 million.

According to preliminary plans, Commonwealth Edison will assume responsibility for building and operating the plant while owning two-thirds or about 1,465 megawatts of the facility. The remaining 735 megawatts will be shared by the other two Iowa and Illinois companies.

The station is to be built on a previously announced 2,500-acre site in Carroll County — about 2½ miles south of Rte. 64 near Savanna and 2½ miles east of the Mississippi River. About four-fifths of the required land is under option or acquired.

Education today

by Wandalyn Rice

The scene, as the board presented a proposed formal statement acknowledging the faculty and staff "right" to "participate in discussions" of salaries and format for how the process will work this year was curiously removed from the realities of teacher bargaining elsewhere.

In Niles Township, after all, teachers belong to the AFL-CIO American Federation of Teachers and went out on strike this fall. In Maine Township, Illinois Education Assn. locals harassed three school boards, demanding greater teacher voice in school affairs.

BUT AT OAKTON, Ann Hastings, president of the faculty executive committee, was sweetly and most unambiguously explaining to the board Tuesday that the faculty would like the phrase "participate in discussions" changed to "negotiate." The change, she said, would make sure everyone understood that the salary and fringe benefit package would be mutually agreed upon — not unilaterally set by the board.

Board members professed that they weren't sure they should make that change without talking to their attorney — just to make sure they wouldn't be opening a "Pandora's box." And they kept assuring Mrs. Hastings that they had every good intention of being fair.

In the middle of the discussion, Board Pres. Paul Gilson even said, "I didn't think words would be such explosive issues."

The question, of course, is how Gilson could ever have missed the fact that, when faculty salary negotiations (or discussions) are at issue, words almost always end up being explosive. Most boards face carefully drawn up legal negotiating contracts — contracts in which every word is chosen for what it means or what it doesn't mean.

Part of the reason for the atmosphere during the Oakton discussion may be that, just as the board believes it can assure the faculty of its good intentions, the faculty has not yet decided that it wants to be "impolite" in forcing the issue of negotiations.

That attitude is summed up in a statement made by a teacher when the faculty salary issue first came up this year. "We all get along so well except for salaries," she said.

OAKTON, AS A young, idealistic college filled with idealistic (if not always young) people, still operates on the belief that if everyone just has his heart in the right place, life will be simple and conflicts will be resolved.

History shows that at least where "labor-management" or board-faculty relations are concerned, things seldom work that way. Misunderstandings and bickerings tend to crop up between even the most understanding and reasonable people where paychecks are concerned.

Today, however, many Oakton officials turn pale at the mention of the term "collective bargaining" in connection to faculty-board "discussions." One administrator told me the term "collective bargaining" is not accurate when applied to Oakton because "it implies an adversary relationship we're not like that. We're different from other people."

It will be interesting to see, as time goes on, whether that statement is correct.

Clean-air backers try to nudge back into spotlight

by LEA TONKIN

Sorting out environmental issues in the midst of energy shortages is getting tough, federal and state environmental watchdogs concede.

But the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency proudly announced this week that it has hit upon a super contribution to energy and environmental goals: clamp down on electric utilities that haven't made good-faith agreements to install stack gas scrubbers at oil- and coal-fired plants.

The EPA says the sulphur dioxide removal systems would enable utilities to meet deadlines for compliance with Clean Air Act provisions, avoiding conversion to scarce, costly low sulphur fuels. One flaw in this plan is widespread resistance by electric utilities. They contend that the scrubbers are unreliable, costly and that they require too much time for installation.

THE QUESTION OF conflict with Federal Energy Office plans to allow some conversion to higher sulphur fuels during the energy shortage period also comes up. But Dave Kee, chief of the air section in the enforcement section of the regional EPA office in Chicago, sees the stack gas scrubbers as a boon to utilities and energy goals.

"We have high-sulphur coal in Illinois which could be used, where they now have to use low-sulphur coal and fuel oil," said Kee. "This could free low-sulphur fuels for use in autos, and industrial boilers." The technology for sulphur dioxide cleanup is available and has been proven out in certain locations, he contends.

"We see this as one solution to energy problems without sacrifice to the environment," Kee continued. "The power-plant issue is one of the most closely tied to the energy crisis, because power companies are the biggest users of the fuel in the U.S."

Good-faith agreements to use low-sulphur fuels and alternative cleanup programs already have been announced by utilities such as Commonwealth Edison Co. But the low-sulphur fuels are in short supply in many areas. This will cause problems for utilities that haven't made long-term commitments for low-sulphur fuel.

JOHN R. QUARLES, EPA deputy administrator, announced this week that criminal proceedings may be undertaken against utilities that have not made commitments to comply with mid-1975 Clean Air Act provisions through installations of stack gas scrubbers.

Meanwhile, Edison, which has proposed a number of actions to meet the deadlines, has problems of its own. "It's pretty obvious we're not going to make some of the deadlines," an Edison spokesman said of Clean Air Act standards. Pilot coal gasification plants are in the works at Pekin and near Springfield, and Edison does have contracts for low-sulphur coal from Western states.

The utility has two experimental installations using the available stack scrubbers, but "neither has proven satisfactory for any length of time," said the Edison spokesman. The utility contends that the EPA is wrong in enforcing the use of scrubber technology, which it says hasn't been successfully proven.

The hullabaloo about development of clean-burning coal technology probably won't have a significant impact on electric utility operations until 1983, according to Kee. This emphasizes the need for the use of fuel scrubbers in the interim, he said.

101 ways to cut bills

Energy conservation gets another boost from area utilities. A booklet on 101 ways to cut electric power bills is available from the Commonwealth Edison Co. in Chicago (One First National Plaza, Chicago, 60600) and from the Northern Illinois Gas Co. NI-Gas recently distributed copies of the Citizen action Guide to Energy Conservation compiled by the Citizens Advisory Committee on Environmental Quality. Kusper denies voting-machine bribe charges

Kusper was asked.

"There always has been a local representative," Kusper answered, although the city has ordered direct from Jamestown since his appointment as county clerk.

"Was he (Miller) necessary?" a reporter asked.

"You'll have to ask the people at AVM," Kusper said.

Miller received an estimated $115,000 commission for processing the two Chicago orders which were signed by Kusper. AVM has sold nearly $9.4 million in machines to the city since 1948.

"AVM is the sole source of supply of these machines," Kusper said. "What was in the minds of the people at AVM nobody will know. If they thought they were getting me, they were sadly mistaken."

KUSPER REFUSED to disclose his net worth or to release copies of his income tax statements since 1968. The income tax forms contain "personal information" and would not indicate who his legal clients were, he said.

The county clerk did tell reporters that he owns a 14-unit apartment inherited from his father, a house, a summer home in Indiana, a lot for sale at 1808 S. Ashland Ave., Chicago, and a $70,000 apartment in Acapulco, Mexico. The apartment was financed with an inheritance from his father and is owned in partnership with another family.

"Do I have any business ventures with Mr. Miller?" he said. "The answer is no."

"I guess it is just the climate of the times that a public official is to be subjected to such intimate scrutiny," he said. "I have every confidence that with the truth being known I will be exonerated."

Countryside honors the woman artist

"The fault lies not in our stars, our empty eternal spaces or our menstrual cycles but in our education and our institutions. Women are making it today because they are making the system work for them."

Originating with a female Vassar art professor, the thought was reiterated by Cella Marriott as she concluded her slide lecture on "Women in Art" that marked the opening of Countryside Art Center's commemoration to women artists, "The Sense of Woman."

Beginning her program with a slide of an ad from Cosmopolitan magazine showing a fashion model merrily sculpting away clad only in lace bra and bikini panties, the art historian and lecturer from the Art Institute of Chicago continually made her audience laugh as she cited numerous instances of frivolous, negative attitudes toward women artists.

FROM VICTORIAN era to present day, Miss Marriott showed the work of women artists who, if not taken seriously in their own day, are now beginning to be rightfully judged on the merit of their work rather than sex.

As a commemoration to the accomplishments in art by women, Countryside is currently focusing on the work of 20 invited artists from Artemisia, a women's cooperative which was recently formed in Chicago "to explore the roles of women in contemporary art and history of art and also encourage women in their future artistic endeavors."

Artemisia, located at 226 E. Ontario, is symbolically named for Artemisia Gentileschi (1593-1652), a woman who specialized in painting famous women.

The current contemporary exhibit at Countryside, which will continue through Feb. 28, includes a variety of media and perspectives in art. Construction pieces as well as paintings and collages are part of the exhibit representing current work of female Chicagoland artists.

WORKS WILL ALSO be selected Monday from area artists for a juried women's show that will open next Friday to coincide with the invited exhibit.

The combination of family and individual profession will be discussed prior to the opening next Friday by a three member panel including Stella Pesner of Palatine, an author of numerous children's books; Donna Read of Itasca, printmaker and president of Countryside Art Gallery; and Betty deGroot of Arlington Heights, actress active in community theater.

Also scheduled for Countryside's current focus on women in the arts is a poetry evening with Elouise Bradley Pink as guest poet. She will read some of her own work and also poems which have been submitted by women in the area. They will later be available in booklet form.

Just call him Manuel

Armenian singer came to U.S. for adventure

by GENIE CAMPBELL

During one mild evening last week when most people were enjoying a welcome relief from freezing temperatures, Armenian singer Manuel, the current entertainer in the Top of the Towers, followed up many of his songs with a tribute to the winter weather.

He was smiling all the while ... said he prefers coming to Chicago during the dead of winter. That's because of the snow. It's the first he's seen since his tour of Russia in 1968.

Though not very well known in this country ("yet" he carefully distinguishes), Manuel, who prefers going by just one name (his last is too hard to pronounce anyhow), has toured throughout the Middle East and Europe primarily performing concert engagements instead of club dates as he is now doing.

WHY LEAVE IT all to come to the United States? "For an adventure," he answers. "It would become dull otherwise."

Over lunch of eggs and fries Manuel jokes and smiles, breaks into a line from a song occasionally and sometimes offers compliments to himself — which might appear conceited if he did not always follow them with impish smirks.

He doesn't refer to his profession as work at all. Nor does he ever tire of the continual traveling involved.

If he is not on a tight schedule, he even prefers driving to his next destination, stopping often along the way to sightsee.

Born in Beirut, Lebanon, Manuel is familiar with almost every city named Lebanon throughout the country and is now even beginning to distinguish his cows, Jersey from Gurnsey and Black Angus.

BUT ON STAGE Manuel is all professional with a strong, dynamic voice that immediately takes charge. A sincere and romantic style individualizes such powerful numbers as "Impossible Dream,"

"For Once in My Life" and "A Time for Us."

He enjoys kicking up his feet to "Rich Man," attempts to interest some of the men in the audience to join him in an all-male Russian dance, but settles instead for a

In 1969 he was named winner of the Athens International Music Festival, his first big recognition.

While on tour Manuel has learned to fluently write, speak and, of course, sing in seven different languages including English, Armenian, French, Italian, Spanish, Arabic and Turkish.

To him it doesn't matter what language he is singing ... "If it is a pretty melody, it's a good song."

Almost four years ago Manuel packed up and came to the United States and headed directly for Las Vegas not wishing to work nor really intending to double his savings either.

"I WANTED TO be sure of the taste of the public, sure if what I had to offer would be acceptable," explained Manuel. "In Las Vegas I could watch all the big performers. Then I knew what I could do."

Manuel sang the theme song for the motion picture "Stepmother." It was one of five selections nominated during the 1972 Academy Awards for Best Song.

He also starred in the foreign film, "Tears of Happiness," a musical drama concerning the life of an entertainer which is being released in the U.S. for the first time with English subtitles Feb. 24 in Los Angeles.

"I enjoy acting," said Manuel, who hopes to have the opportunity to do more in the future but adds, "Of course I don't get up and just sing. I act on stage with all my songs."

WHEN MANUEL closes at the Top of the Towers Feb. 9, he will go directly to San Antonio, Tex., his next engagement. Though he has little spare time for recreation or vacations, he doesn't seem to mind. His favorite pastime is watching television ... old movies, quiz shows and even comedy reruns. It doesn't really matter to him.

"I watch as much as I can to learn new words and meanings," he said. Manuel even enjoys all the commercials.

"YOU HAVE TO be sure of yourself in this field," said singer Manuel, current entertainer in the Top of the Towers.

pretty senorita who doesn't hesitate to leave her steak and greet the handsome singer on stage.

Manuel can kick his leg higher than most chorus girls but claims it's because of inborn natural exuberance rather than professional training.

HE DECIDED "to make the stage his life" at the age of 9, after landing a bit part in a school play. Manuel quit school at 14 and upon turning 18 went to Paris to study music and work.

'Peter Pan' takes to arena circuit

In a way NBC is competing with itself in its new role as producers of arena entertainment.

For four years now, NBC's subsidiary, NBC Entertainment, has been in joint partnership with Disney in producing "Disney On Parade," which has successfully toured the nation's arenas with its lavish production. Now, beginning Jan. 3, NBC is going it alone with a new show, an arena version of "Peter Pan."

This tells the old story of Peter and his friends (and enemies), done in a big way — music, dancers, acrobats, the whole works.

Thomas W. Sarnoff, who is NBC's West Coast vice president and president of NBC Entertainment, says the big network has gotten into arena shows because "we felt there was considerable need in the country for good family entertainment. I know I have trouble figuring out what movie to take my kids to."

"DISNEY ON PARADE" is still touring. Next spring it will go to South America, then Europe. Another unit is on the road in Australia and the Far East. "Peter Pan" kicked off its tour in San Antonio, Tex., and there is a 70-week tour planned so far.

"If 'Pan' works," Sarnoff says, "we'll look for other properties. If it doesn't, we'll have to take a long look at the whole arena concept."

Sarnoff says they tried to get the exciting Russian gymnast, Olga Korbut, to play Pan, but negotiations got too complicated. They decided against using any name performers.

Cincinnati's Rookwood distinctive art pottery

Many people have told me, after reading one of these columns, that they have found the very thing I wrote about in their cupboards. After an article appeared some time ago about Ohio art pottery, I received a call from a woman whose mother had lived in Cincinnati in the 1940s and had bought some of the Rookwood pottery because the store was going out of business. She thought it might have interest for her grandchildren, because Rookwood was made in Cincinnati.

The original price tags were still on the pieces, in the neighborhood of $5 each, and they would now be offered in an antique shop for about $50. According to my shaky math, that's a thousand per cent profit.

You will note that the Rookwood shown includes three animal designs, two of "rooks" or crows and one paperweight turtle. These are the most desirable of all, and many collectors specialize in animal designs only.

ROOKWOOD POTTERY was started by a Cincinnati woman, Maria Longworth Nichols (later Storer). Her father, Joseph Longworth, a man of considerable wealth and also a patron of the arts, purchased an old abandoned schoolhouse for his daughter, who was interested in experimenting with pottery. The schoolhouse was converted into a pottery and the first kiln was drawn on Thanksgiving Day, 1880. Mrs. Nichols named the pottery after her father's estate, which was heavily wooded and habited by rooks.

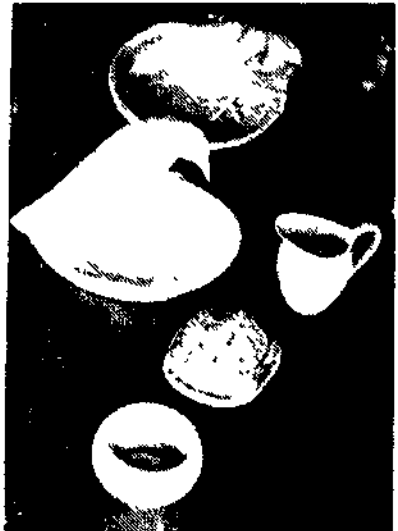

From the beginning Rookwood pottery was well marked, at first with the year in Arabic numerals, then later with a monogram of a backward R and a P and a series of small flames to indicate the year. Still later, the date was added in Roman numerals. It is said that every single piece of Rookwood is identified by some marking, which has added to its interest and collectibility.

The clays used were entirely American, mostly from the Ohio Valley. Most were blends of brown, yellow and red. Much hand art work was done in the early days, with subjects painted in slip of yellow, red and green in the manner of oil painting, then covered with a transparent glaze which is known today as "standard" glaze Rookwood, even though many other potters copied the method.

MUCH ROKWOOD has an Oriental flavor, for the artists were greatly influenced by the Japanese, and the factory even hired Japanese artists to migrate and work. One of the most famous, whose name on a Rookwood piece insures its immortality (if you don't drop it), was Katano Shiyamadani. He worked for Rookwood from 1887 to 1948 and was a guiding influence on the other artists.

Early in the 1960s Rookwood began to produce ornamental wares cast in molds rather than turned by hand. The production of these increased in volume as the years passed, and since they were less expensive to produce, they were made by the dozens in such forms as classic vases, paperweights, bookends, ashtrays, teapots, candlesticks and bowls.

Although they are commercial pieces, they are marked on the base, but never artist signed. Such pieces should be called "marked Rookwood" rather than "signed Rookwood." Many dealers refer to any sort of mark on a piece of pottery as a signature, when it is actually a factory mark. Signed pieces, of course, being individually identified, bring higher prices.

THE ORIGINATOR of Rookwood, Mrs. Storer, widowed twice, lived to the age of 83 and died in 1932. Her successors carried on the work with diminishing success until 1959, when the company was sold and moved to Mississippi. Since so many thousands, perhaps millions, of pieces were made by Rookwood during its long history, there may very well be a piece of this distinctive pottery in your family possessions. Look for an "RP" monogram surrounded by little flame shapes on the bottom, and give it an honored place — it's pure Americana.

If you have questions about any collectible, please write Grace Carolyn Dahlberg, in care of Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

Land selling in Southwest a series of horror tales

"UNREAL ESTATE," BY ANTHONY WOLFF Sierra Club, $7.95

The land peddlers are out in force, armed with twin weapons of press agency and promises, and individuals with a few spare dollars to invest had better watch out.

The author, a former magazine editor, tells an assortment of horror stories about individuals buying, at inflated prices, home sites with no resale value, or with little likelihood of connection with waterlines or other necessities that make the land habitable.

In discussing land development in the Southwest, he writes, "There are some subdividers who defer any disturbance to the surface of the land, not out of ecological fastidiousness, or love of beauty, or respect for the integrity of the desert environment, but rather out of respect for the fact that disturbing the land costs money."

In extreme cases, the result is a subdivision consisting wholly of a vast grid of bladed dirt roads, fronted by nothing more substantial than an elaborate sales campaign.

One of his best chapters describes the land sales dinner, a technique favored by such biggies as AMREP, General Development and TIT. Prospective buyers are

Carly Simon's first album captivating

Carly Simon's first album in 14 months came out a week after the birth of her first child, a girl named Sarah Maria. The album is "Hotcakes" and it could be her best even though it lacks a smashing single, such as "You're So Vain."

More than half of the album's 11 songs are well written and performed with an engaging style that captivates the listener. In fact, only the very brief title song, written by husband James Taylor, fails to hit an acceptable level. But I think the song was included just for fun and wasn't meant to be taken seriously anyway.

As usual, many of the songs are personal statements from Miss Simon (she wrote all but two of the tunes). The two most charming of these are "Older Sister" and "Grownup." The first outlines the advantages of the first-born and the second is a delightful image of grownups and growing up as seen by a child.

ONE OF THE BETTER written songs — because of the strength of its disdained imagery — is "Misfit." On the other hand, "Safe and Sound" delights because of its catchy and twisty tune. The song is the first of several in which Miss Simon sings a duet with herself. It is also the first of a half dozen with a string and woodwind arrangement by the inventive and entertaining Paul Buckmaster.

Husband James makes the first of his seven appearances on the album's second song, the gentle love song "Mind On My Man," which was certainly written for him. He plays guitar in his distinctive style on the track.

Taylor does not get in all the good guitar licks, however. David Spinozza's guitar, with a fine vocal by Miss Simon, helps make "Think I'm Gonna Have a Baby" the bouncy success it is and the album's potential single hit.

Playback

by Tom Von Malder

Richard Perry's production is the usual super gloss job and the musicians are all fine. Dr. John and Robbie Robertson (the latter of the Band) aid on Taylor's rocking adaptation of the old tune, "Mockingbird."

WITH BITS OF Bob Dylan's and Lou Reed's style, a lot of originality and much suburban catharsis to work through, Elliott Murphy has created a brilliant debut album. It is an album that has almost every reviewer tripping over words in their haste to praise it.

Yet it is Murphy who has the knack for throwing words out in quick, pithy phrases that land machine-gun style on the ears. While sometimes glib, most often those phrases are thought-provoking and meaningful.

Murphy talks about suburbia (middle class Long Island to be precise) throughout "Aquashow" (Polydor records), an album named after his late father's famous showplace. Good examples of his sometimes jaded view are "Hangin' Out" and "White Middle Class Blues." He gets in his licks at the over-protective suburban family in the suburb, "How's the Family" (a sort of song version of the public television show "An American Family").

THE OPENING SONG, "Last of the Rock Stars" (which in part is about Jimi Hendrix, but more generally about each rock star who replaces the last), is the album's best — perhaps a classic song. It starts with harmonica and strumming guitar up front and band going full force in backup. The viewpoint is that of a high school or neighborhood rock band member yearning for big-time stardom — yet throughout is a sense that not much great has been happening in rock lately.

The first few times, it is Murphy's music that grabs your attention, then you concentrate on hearing the words. After the sixth or seventh hearing, a balance is formed and you listen to the work as a whole. It is then you appreciate the moments of greatness and the moments of weakness (such as the line "Marilyn Monroe died for our sins"). Murphy seems to have a wide open future, depending on which road he decides to take. We can only benefit if the choice is along the lines of "Last of the Rock Stars."

GRAHAM NASH's second solo album since the breakup of Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young is "Wild Tales" (Atlantic). Musically and lyrically, it offers no surprises and should be enjoyed by his fans. For those not already on his side, the politics of some songs may seem a little rough and the emotions of other songs may seem too obtuse.

As a whole, the album is pleasant to listen to, but the parts are hard to remember. The best song is "And So It Goes," which owes a heavy debt to the music of Neil Young. Among the friends helping on the album are David Crosby and sometimes artist Joni Mitchell, who also painted the back cover.

Snowflake Slush

Kids' Corner
Marilyn Halperin

Freshly-fallen snow is lots of fun. You can turn it into a roly-poly snowman, make snow angels or pack it down for a sled run. But did you ever eat it? Here's how to make chocolate snowflake slush:

With an adult's help, put one slightly beaten egg, two cups of milk, one-half cup of sugar and a dash of salt in the top of a double boiler, over boiling water. Stir and cook about five minutes — until the mixture starts to thicken.

Stir in, until melted, a six-ounce package of chocolate bits and one-half teaspoon of vanilla. Remove the pan from the heat and let it cool to room temperature.

Find a big pile of fresh snow. Scrape off the top layer. Quickly stir clean snow into your chocolate mixture. Keep adding snow until your slush starts to freeze. Dig in! (Store any leftovers in the freezer.)

A Paddock review

Good leads in 'Butterflies' but supporting actors weak

by PAT ADAM
Seeing a play for the third time can be a problem for a reviewer since the material is no longer fresh and there's a tendency to compare productions.
This more likely occurs with lighter plays, like good books, good music, good art, may be enjoyed over and over again, often improving with age.
"Butterflies Are Free" falls into the light category, but fortunately it offers such interesting characters that it still can entertain third time around provided the acting measures up. Without strong characterizations, however, "Butterflies" is just another boy-meets-girl comedy, even if its hero is blind.

Music On Stage currently is presenting a cocktail theater version of Leonard Gershe's comedy at the Holiday Inn on Algonquin Road in Rolling Meadows. It's only a part-way successful production.
THE SETTING'S all right, a more intimate one in a large Holiday meeting room, bar near the door so you can buy a cocktail if you're so inclined. Seating is such that everyone can easily see the actors. And there's no problem hearing.

Elena Ruane as Jill Tanner and David A. Schroeder as the blind Don Baker turn in convincing performances, but Betty Kandlbinder as the caustic yet vulnerable Mrs. Baker, Don's mother, and Vince Bonanata as the avant-garde director, Ralph Austin, fall short.

The story of "Butterflies Are Free" is a touching one about a blind young man who wants to make it on his own after having been protected all his life by his mother and a young woman who would rather run away than take the risk of falling in love and making a commitment to anyone, least of all a blind man. They live in adjoining apartments, separated only by a locked door, and that proves a flimsy barrier indeed.

ELENA RUANE'S Jill comes off as a delightful and kooky young woman. She's attracted to her personable neighbor and after the initial shock of learning he's blind, she's not the least hesitant to share his bed. The part demands that an actress have no inhibitions about showing her physical attributes, and Elena plays it carefree as a butterfly.

Dave Schroeder handles the role of the blind Don Baker with ease. He gives only subtle clues that the hero cannot see except for the final scene after Jill has walked out and the disappointed Don momentarily gives in to panic, thrashing about an apartment he supposedly has mastered. Schroeder slightly overplays this scene.

Mrs. Baker is a strong woman who loves her son deeply and while encouraging him to disregard his blindness as a handicap, nevertheless tries to keep him from being hurt. Her biting wit has seen her through trying times (she's now widowed) and it serves her well when she discovers her son enchanted with whom she dubs a "worldly" woman — the 19-year-old Jill, already once wed and divorced. Betty Kandlbinder fails to develop this character till the final moments of the play when she begins to ring true. Some of the play's funniest lines are hers, and yet they're often wasted.

VINCE BONANATA needs a little more real life experience before he plays another character like Ralph Austin, whom Jill seizes as excuse to avoid a love affair with Don. Ralph's a brash young man, more wind than substance, but with a certain sophistication. As Bonanata plays him, Ralph comes off more like a teenage braggart. His body-scratching and pawing of Jill are crude and would better be eliminated if he can't polish them up.

Still for those who've not seen "Butterflies Are Free," it can be an entertaining evening. The play will be staged again Friday and Saturday nights with curtain at 8:30.

'Cuckoo's Nest' to return

JAMES PARENTINO is returning to ARLINGTON PARK THEATRE to again portray McMurphy in "ONE FLEW OVER THE CUCKOO'S NEST."

The powerful drama that takes place inside the ward of a mental institution will open March 7 and play for five weeks through April 7.

The production first played at Arlington last January and established a record for the number of Joseph Jefferson awards presented to a single Chicago production.

Parentino received one for best guest artist, and Norman Rice of Palatine received one for best actor in a cameo role. The play also received awards for best production, best ensemble and best director. Harvey Medlinsky will again stage and direct "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest." The rest of the cast has not been announced although it is hoped that most of last year's members will also return.

David Lonn, managing director of Arlington Park Theatre, has also announced a three-week extension of the theater's current production, "DANCE ON A COUNTRY GRAVE." The folk musical will now play through Feb. 17.

Next Wednesday "TOM SWIFT AND HIS..." a light-hearted satire concerning America's obsession with mechanical solutions to human problems, will be performed by the LUTHER BUR-BANK DINGLEBERRY FESTIVAL at Barrington High School with an 8 p.m. curtain. Tickets are available through the Performing Arts Department at the high school.

Closed for a two-month hiatus, MILL RUN THEATRE will be opening its fifth season of live entertainment March 1 with ENGLEBERT HUMPERDINCK.

Meanwhile, the children's theater is active at Mill Run. "HANSEL AND GRETEL" opens tomorrow and will be staged every Saturday at 1 p.m. through March 2.

SECOND CITY is moving into its 15th year and 47th revue with "TAKE 47" or "ET TU, KOHOOTEK" which officially opens next Thursday.

Snow permitting, cross-country skiing is possible for gas-starved sports enthusiasts who participate in CARSON INN NORDIC HILLS' "SNOWBIRD SPECIAL" weekend package.

The resort complex is situated on 104 acres of woodland. For those who don't own their own equipment, there are skis, boots and poles available for a nominal rental fee. Nordic Hills is located in Itasca, just off Route 53 between Routes 19 and 20.

For a look into the future, the place to be this Sunday is the Holiday Inn in Des Plaines, Routes 12 and 45, when psychics, hypnotists, astrologers and tarot card readers will be on hand for "PSYCHICS UNLIMITED."

MIKE SIMS plays Henry David Thoreau, the famous 19th Century dissident, in Des Plaines Theatre Guild's production of "The Night Thoreau Spent in Jail," which has two more performances at the Guild Playhouse, 620 Lee St., Des Plaines, tomorrow and Saturday, Feb. 2. Curtain is at 8:30 p.m.

Newlyweds make home on East Coast

The new Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Gerasimow are at home in Chicopee, Mass., following their wedding Dec. 29 at Christ Lutheran Church in Palatine.

The bride, Marcia Ann Lemke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lemke, 244 S. Plum Grove Rd., Palatine, chose for her wedding a white silk organza gown with an empire waist, high collar and long sleeves bordered in Chantilly lace. A matching train fell from the waist and her fingertip veil was held by a Juliet headpiece covered with Chantilly lace.

A bouquet of white crystal roses, stephanotis and baby's breath completed her ensemble.

Maid of honor, was Marcia's sister, Sandra, in a red velvet halter dress with matching cape. She carried a cluster of red roses on a white fur muff.

Susan Moscinski, Palatine, was bridesmaid. She was attired identically to the maid of honor.

RING BEARER for the 3:30 double ring service was the bride's cousin, Tim Colonius, 8, of Bloomfield Hills, Mich.

Alexander, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonid Gerasimow, Springfield, Mass., was attended by Bruce Hildebrand, Schaumburg and Bill Hestrup, the bride's cousin from St. Charles.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Gerasimow

A reception for 80 guests was held at the Brass Rail, Arlington Heights. Marcia is a graduate of Palatine High School and was employed by the Square D Company, Park Ridge, where the couple met. Her husband is currently a law student at Western New England College, Springfield, Mass.

Owen MacBride takes a bride in Christmastime ceremony

A Christmastime wedding in Schoharie, N.Y., united Owen MacBride, son of the Milton F. MacBrides of Mount Prospect, and Karen Muller, daughter of Mrs. Peter Muller of Schoharie. The Dec. 29 afternoon ceremony was performed in the United Presbyterian Church.

The bridal couple are associated with Yale University in New Haven, Conn., Karen employed in the university library as catalogue librarian for the Paul Mellon Center for British Art and British Studies and Owen attending Yale Law School.

Both are graduates of the University of Michigan, where Karen earned her master's in library science, and Owen is a graduate of Prospect High School. Karen has her bachelor's degree from Mount Holyoke College, South Hadley, Mass.

THEY WERE married in a holiday setting of red poinsettias and a Christmas tree decked with white lights and red bows. Karen was given in marriage by Robert W. Given of Schoharie, who with his wife hosted a reception at their home afterwards.

Karen entered the sanctuary in an ivory peau de sole gown, simply styled with round neck, long narrow sleeves and a chapel train. A pillbox headpiece with a short bouffant veil completed her attire. She carried a bouquet of white roses and mums with holly.

THE BRIDE'S sister, Mrs. Arlene Given Price of Malibu, Calif., was her only attendant, gowned in deep coral peau de sole styled like the bridal dress. Arlene carried pink mums and roses with holly.

Owen's brother, Donald MacBride, was his best man, and Robert Price of Malibu ushered.

After their return from a New England honeymoon, the newlyweds are living in New Haven.

Bachelor contributes his bit

Dear Dorothy: I make it a point to read your column every day and have gotten many good tips. It's my turn to contribute something. About those little pests that get into the flour and meal — just put a piece of broken china (a piece of cup, for instance) down into the flour. You can also use a dry, clean corn cob — either one will do the job. Thanks for all the hints from a grateful bachelor. — W. Bruce Hutchins

"Thank you for the tip, Mr. Hutchings, but what I want to know now is why this works? Can you help?"

Dear Dorothy: We, too, had oil motes in the weave of prefolded diapers several years ago. We finally discovered they were caused by using petroleum jelly on my baby's bottom. This combined with the soap or detergent. After stopping the use of the petroleum jelly, the motes stopped forming. After many washings, those in the diapers finally disappeared. — Janice Witt

Dear Dorothy: When I take my draperies down for cleaning, I make a spot to mark the place where I took out the removable pleater pins. Then, using marking ink, I mark on the curtain on which window the drapery hangs. Windows are irregular so often that draperies vary enough in length to be quite noticeable if hung incorrectly. — Mrs. J. T. Gilbert Jr.

Dear Dorothy: Is there any treatment necessary before using a new Teflon-coated skillet? — Joyce Fugere Wash it with hot, sudsy water, then rinse thoroughly and dry. Then give the nonstick surface a bit of conditioning by wiping with a paper towel soaked in cooking oil or shortening.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

No Fords 'til running water; their slogan of 50 years ago

Fifty years ago when the Illinois Homemakers Extension Federation was first organized one of its goals was to have electricity in every home. One of its early slogans was "No Ford car until running water!"

Homemakers was conceived as an organization for homemakers interested in a better life for their family and their community. Federation interests now include a better life for all homemakers of the state, the nation and the world.

Illinois Homemakers, with 98 units and a membership of nearly 43,000 celebrated its golden anniversary Jan. 10-11 on the University of Illinois campus with an annual meeting, workshops and a banquet at which Dr. John E. Corbally Jr., university president, was speaker. Using the homemakers' theme for '74, "Education Is Forever," he complimented the homemakers for their theme and suggested that education is not only forever but everywhere.

A PAGEANT, "50 Exciting Years," with homemakers wearing costumes depicting the five decades of the Federation's existence, closed the anniversary meeting.

Among area homemakers at the meeting were Mrs. Marvin Dunteman, suburban Cook County Homemakers Council president and a member of the Hanover-Schaumburg Unit; Mrs. Wilcox McFadden, Mrs. W. L. Kelly and Mrs. Leonard Dwelle, Cook County officers and members of Des Plaines units.

Low-sugar diet can cause bowel trouble

Last December I had a three-hour tolerance test for diabetes. It was 303, 281 and 214. The doctor told me to lose weight. I weighed around 140 and went on a sugar-free and low carbohydrate diet and lost about 20 pounds. My blood last February was 139 and in June it was only 100.

Now my trouble is I've always been one who has a problem with constipation. I used to eat a lot of bran flakes and prunes, lots of fruit and juices. I had to eliminate these on the diet. So, now I really have a problem. About twice a week I have to take something. I get a lot of gas pains, gas that just seems to go around and around and I can't seem to get rid of it. What can I take so I can have a better bowel movement without taking fruit and bran? The doctor says I have to stay off sweets.

I also have high blood pressure. The last reading was 138 over 84. I have been taking medicine for this. But lately, I've had a very slow pulse. I wonder if it is because of the blood pressure medicine? When I take it the pulse is between by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

55 and 66. I'm 58 years old.

Most diets that eliminate carbohydrates cause the kind of problem you are experiencing. After all, the natural bulk in our diet is dependent upon such good natural foods as cereals, vegetables and fruit. These are important to normal bowel function. Some authorities think their absence leads to many colon problems, including an increased likelihood of having cancer of the colon.

So, you have a special problem. I wonder if your doctor would not be willing to try letting you include some cereal and unsweetened fruit and vegetables in your diet as long as you didn't gain your weight back? With your blood glucose sugar level at 100 you are in very good control and he has accomplished a lot for you.

If you can't do that, I would suggest you take a bulk expander to replace your natural food bulk. These should be agar-agar or psyllium seed products. A good one that you can get is Metamucil. These are not chemical laxatives, which I disapprove of because they can be harmful to your bowel function. Your colon will not function normally until you have a reasonable amount of bulk in your diet or replace diet bulk with a bulk expander.

ABOUT THE blood pressure. The medicine is responsible for helping to lower your pressure to the levels you now have. Those levels are all right. If you stopped your medicine, it might go back up, although some people continue to have lower pressure after they have lost weight. The slow pulse rate can also be from the medicine. However, the rates you describe are all right. I have seen many healthy, young athletes with slow heart rates, even slower than yours. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

U.S. shortages are 'purely relative'

by LOUIS CASSELS

From a moral viewpoint, the most important thing to remember about the current "era of shortages" is that our deprivations are purely relative.

Americans are "short" of energy and other things only in the sense of having a bit less than they used to have or would like to get.

We still are, by a long margin, the warmest, best fed, most mobile people on the earth. Even if our standard of living should drop during the coming year to a far greater degree than economists now anticipate, we'd still be compared to most of the rest of humanity — very fat cats indeed.

This point needs stressing at the start of a new year because it may help forestall all kind of self-pity that would cause Americans to feel justified in being stingy toward other peoples of the world who are really poor.

THE MYTH PERSISTS that Americans are generous givers to the needy of the world. But it just isn't so.

During the Marshall Plan years following World War II, we did give about 3 per cent of our national income to help other countries get back on their feet.

But our present "foreign aid" programs — although a constant target of taxpayer gripes — are on a pathetically small scale. They represent about one third of 1 per cent of our national income.

This means we are giving today only one-ninth as much as we gave two decades ago to relieve hunger and suffering in other countries.

Nearly every industrialized nation in Western Europe now gives a larger portion of its national income to overseas relief than America does. The only countries that give less than we, on a percentage-of-income basis, are Spain, Portugal and Italy.

IT IS NOT LACK of need that has caused U.S. aid programs to dwindle. Two-thirds of the world's children still suffer malnutrition of sufficient severity to retard their mental and physical development. In Africa, south of the Sahara, creeping drought threatens more than 6 million people with starvation. In India, some 200 million people live on incomes of 10 cents a day or less. Nigeria's per capita income is even lower than India's.

One could go on indefinitely citing facts and figures to demonstrate that the poor and hungry of the world still need help from America as desperately as ever they did. The only change is that we've stopped sending them very much.

What can one individual do about it? Well, he might write to his congressman and say that he's for a substantial increase in foreign aid appropriations.

And he needn't wait for Congress to provide aid with tax funds. Private contributions can be channeled to the hungry abroad, efficiently and with low overhead, through such agencies as CARE, Church World Service, Catholic Relief Services and Lutheran World Relief.

ALL OF THESE agencies conduct periodic campaigns for public contributions. But too many Americans shrug off the appeal. One survey indicates the average U.S. church member gives less than a penny per month to overseas relief organizations.

In a parable recorded in the 25th Chapter of Matthew's gospel, Jesus tells of the final judgment at which a key question God will ask of the condemned will be:

"Why didn't you feed me when I was hungry?"

And the condemned will reply in puzzlement, "When did we ever see YOU hungry?"

And God will say: "Whenever you closed your eyes or turned your back to a fellow human being in need."

It wouldn't be a very snappy answer to say at that point:

"Gee, Lord, did you really expect me to worry about a starving child in Bangladesh when I was having to pay $2 a pound for my own steak?"

(United Press International)

Roman Catholic Church dates from 1634

The largest single group of Christians in the United States is the Roman Catholic Church, under the leadership of Pope Paul VI. This group dates to the priests who accompanied Columbus on his second voyage to the New World. A settlement, later discontinued, was made at St. Augustine, Fla. The continuous history of the church in the colonies began at St. Mary's Md., in 1634.

UPI religion writer Cassels dies at 52

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Louis Cassels, United Press International senior editor and prize-winning religion writer who covered nearly every major religious and social welfare story during the turbulent 1960s, has died at his home in Aiken, S.C. He was 52.

Cassels, who had a history of heart trouble, apparently suffered a coronary attack Wednesday evening shortly after finishing dinner at his home, his wife Charlotte said.

A veteran of 32 years service with UPI, Cassels was the author of numerous magazine articles and more than a half dozen books on religion and ethical problems in contemporary America — the field he regularly covered for UPI.

HIS WEEKLY columns, "Religion in America" and "World of Religion" frequently appeared in The Herald. He was the first wire-service reporter to write regularly and in depth on religious news of interest to every faith as a topic of continuing importance to secular newspaper readers.

Although best known for his coverage of major religious events, such as the Second Vatican Ecumenical Council, he wrote penetratingly on topics other than religion. Noteworthy was a 4,600-word report for UPI in 1967 titled "The Negro in Revolt — What Now?"

An active Episcopalian churchman, Cassels was keenly interested in the problems of youth. He was in Ohio on a survey assignment in May, 1970, when the shootings occurred on the Kent State University campus. He went immediately to the scene to help with the spot coverage of the event.

CASSELS WAS born Jan. 14, 1922, in the small town of Ellenton, S.C., where his family operated a village general store. After graduation from high school, he enrolled at Duke University with an inclination to study for the ministry.

But he found himself devoting most of his time to working on the student newspaper, The Duke Chronicle, and decided instead on newspapering as a career.

Cassels commented years later: "I would have made a lousy preacher — and we've got enough of that kind already."

Cassels worked summers on the Augusta, Ga., Herald, became editor of the Chronicle in his senior year and was graduated from Duke Phi Beta Kappa.

In 1942 he was hired as a radio news writer in UP's New York bureau, but a few months later entered the Air Force, becoming a lieutenant, and serving in administrative and intelligence assignments.

MUSTERED OUT in 1945, he returned to UP in New York and two years later was transferred to the Washington bureau. He was overnight news editor for three years and assistant day news editor for two before being made general assignment reporter, feature writer and columnist in 1956.

He became a UPI senior editor in 1967. Among his awards was the Supple Memorial Award of the Religious News-writers Assn. for outstanding coverage of religious news in 1967.

Besides his wife Charlotte, he is survived by a son, Michael.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete but Mrs. Cassels said he would be buried near his Aiken home in a private ceremony.

HAPPY TWISTERS

Happy Twisters and their friends face a very busy square dance weekend. Their intermediate (plus) dance tonight at the Congregational Church, Graceland and Marion streets in Des Plaines, will be preceded as usual by the "new figure workshop," 8 to 8:30 p.m.

Sunday the Chicago Area Council on Aging presents its "Fun and Friendship Frolic" at the Boy Scouts of America Building, 1622 N. Rand Rd., Arlington Heights from 2:30 to 5:30 p.m. Many of the caller members will participate, and all the calling will be limited to the first 50 basics, especially to be within the range of experience of the newcomers to square dancing. The number of tickets sold has been limited, so there should be no overcrowding.

Also this Sunday night, Jan. 27, the Twisters "experimental workshop" will be held as usual for the more experienced dancers at the Trinity Lutheran Church, 875 Algonquin Rd. in Des Plaines from 7 to 9:30 p.m. The "easy round of the month" for February will be taught, preceding the workshop from 6:30 to 7 p.m. Callers for the Twisters are the Char-Lee Wellers. For more information call 324-1164.

ARLINGTON SQUARES

All area square dancers are invited to join the Arlington Squares at their dance tonight at St. Simon Episcopal Church, 717 W. Kirkcuff Rd., Arlington Heights. Special visitors will be outer space "persons" from Beyond Johnsonville. Dancing with them will entitle members and guests to a special luncheon. Gerry and May Holberg will teach a round at 8 p.m. and club caller, Larry Ross will call the squares beginning at 8:30 p.m. Sandwiches, cake and coffee will be served at 11 p.m. More information regarding the club's activities can be obtained by calling 255-1527.

RAND RAMBLERS

Jim Stewart, the club caller will be calling the squares tomorrow night for the Rand Ramblers at the Boy Scouts of America Building, 1622 N. Rand Rd., Arlington Heights, beginning at 8:30 p.m. Rounds begin at 8 p.m. with Art and Ruth Youver, and dancing will continue until 11 p.m. All area dancers are welcome. For club information call 773-4157.

BUCKS AND DOES

Bucks and Does Square Dance club of Mount Prospect will welcome Randy Daucherty from Monominee, Wis., as their guest caller tomorrow night. He has called for the International Convention in Winnipeg, Man., Canada, as well as Chula Vista, Wis.

Square dancing will begin at 8 p.m. at the Holmes Junior High School, 1809 W. Louisa Blvd. in Mount Prospect. Please note that this is a change of location for this dance only. Rounds will be called by Lee Simpson and Shirley Kenick throughout the evening.

All area square dancers are cordially invited. Donation at the door is only $2.00 per couple and includes refreshments with dancing continuing until 11 p.m. For more information, please call 629-3574 or 439-1559.

MCASD MEETING

The next meeting of the Metropolitan Chicago Area of Square Dancers (a non-profit organization for the promotion, enjoyment and unification of square and round dances) will be held Sunday afternoon, Jan. 27, 1974, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. at the Devonshire Recreation Center, 4100 W. Grove St., Skokie.

The MCASD represents 40 clubs in the Chicago and Suburban areas. Information about the MCASD or square dancing may be obtained by calling 517-5527.

JUST 4 KICKS

Just 4 Kicks Square Dance Club of Hoffman Estates will be celebrating their "first anniversary" on Tuesday evening, Jan. 29, 1974, at the Hillcrest School, Hillcrest Blvd., beginning at 8 p.m.

There's something to take note of at this special dance... What are the colors? Ask your friends... Maybe they know.

Club caller Cliff Benson will be on hand with some fine calling and a new "almatuck tip" will be a first for Cliff. All area dancers are welcome, and refreshments are served.

NOTE

A reminder to all square dance clubs... Square dancing news should be directed to Tommie Schmitt, and the deadline for the weekly Friday column is Tuesday.

Red-hot North race in league spotlight

A HERALD STAFF REPORT
Mid-Suburban League basketball is starting to get interesting, what with a hot race in the North division and an undefeated leader in the South.

Another slate of crossover games comes up tonight following last week's inter-division action which saw the North and South split a half dozen contests.

Wheeling, on top of the North with a 6-1 record, will defend its position at Elk Grove (3-4), while North pursuers Arlington and Hersey (each 5-2) tackle Prospect (5-2) and Schaumburg (1-6), respectively, on their opponents' home courts.

Forest (3-4) will travel to Forest View (4-3) for a game to be broadcast on WMM-FM, and Palatine (2-5) will visit Buffalo Grove (0-7).

Finally, Conant, the only team in the league without a loss, will host Rolling Meadows (1-6). The Cougars, 13-1 overall, will try to keep their 7-0 conference record unblemished.

In Saturday nonconference action, Hersey will entertain Willowbrook, and Elk Grove will host Elgin-Larkin.

Summaries of tonight's games — all to start at 8:00 — along with the coaches' comments, follow.

ARLINGTON AT PROSPECT
The stage is set. The principles are in high gear. And the observers should be prepared for a wingdinger of a basketball hookup in Prospect's fieldhouse tonight.

The Knights will be taking on Arlington in what has to be considered a do-or-die game for both parties. The irony of it all, as pointed out by Cardinal coach George Zigman, is that on the same site these two teams last year battled for the conference crown, one will come away this evening with only a slender chance of a repeat opportunity.

A year ago it was hosting Prospect turning back the Cards to grab the MSL crown. While there is a remote chance of the title playoff featuring both teams again, it is more likely that tonight's loser will be staying at home.

Prospect has two setbacks already and can't really afford to lose any more ground to undefeated Conant in the South. Arlington could also drop two games off the pace in the North by losing this encounter. "Winning is everything tonight," observed Zigman. "It's a shot in the arm to beat a strong team and it's a means of keeping pace in the conference. I'm sure they share this game's significance with us."

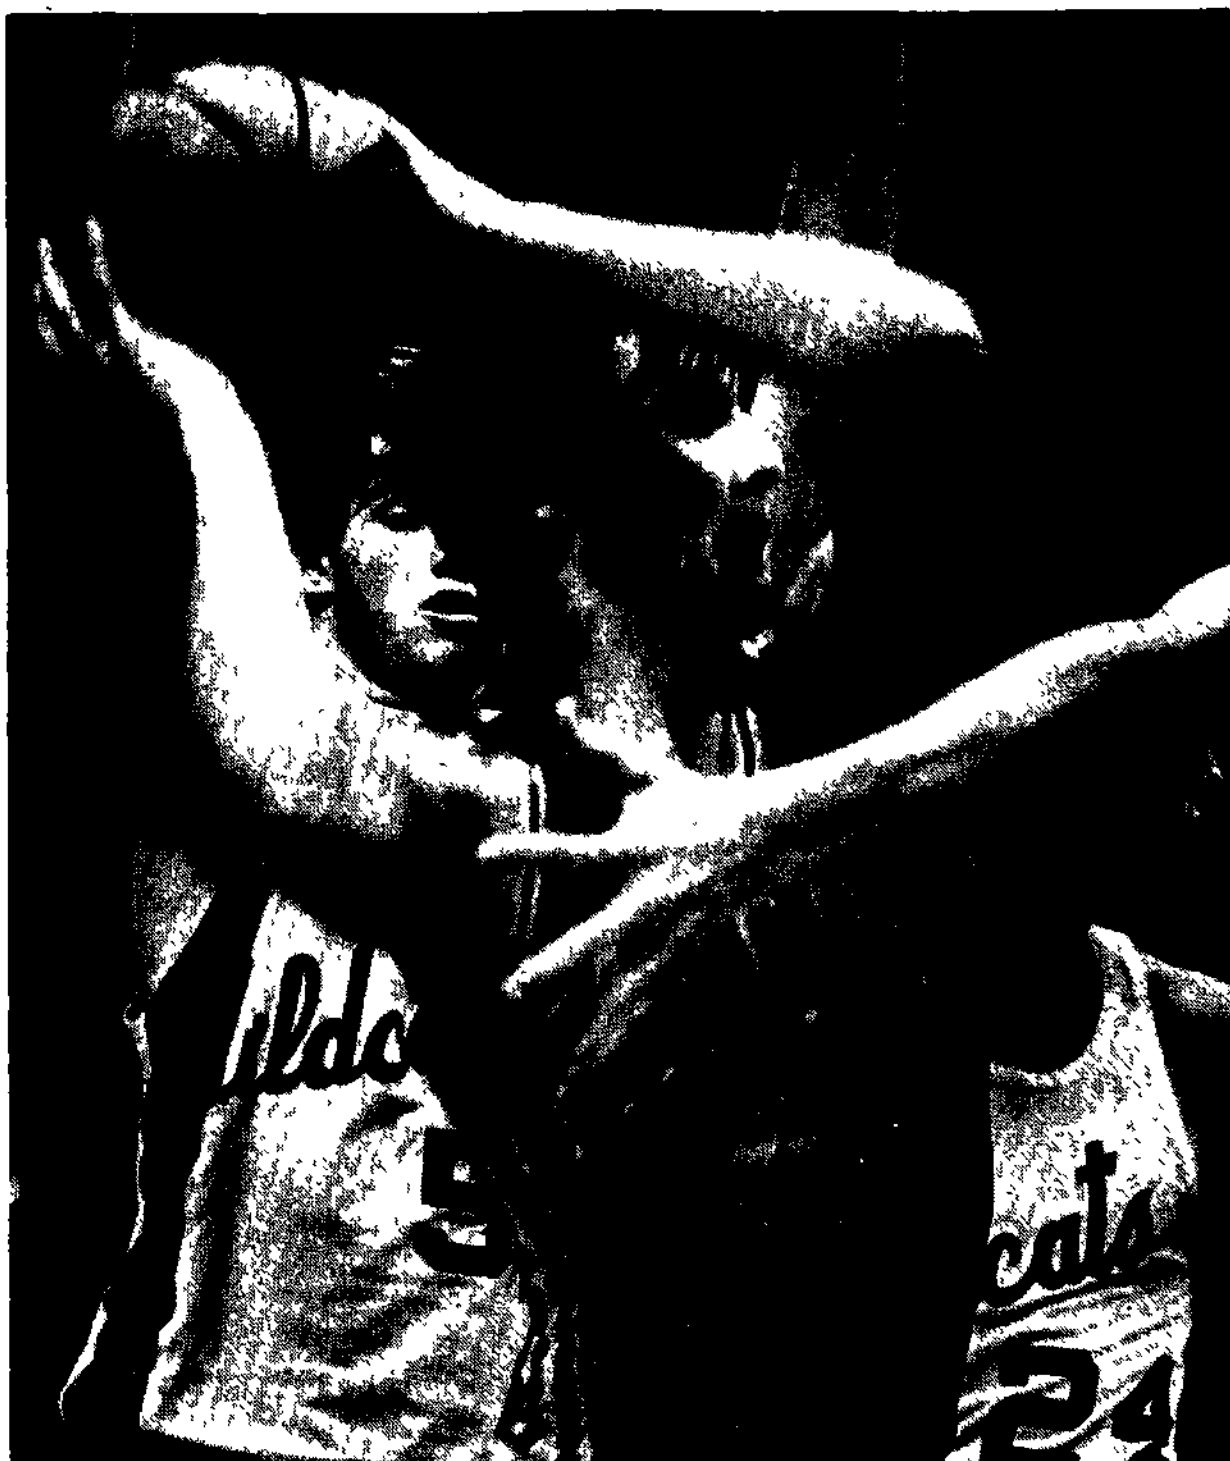

The Cardinal coach is also approaching the game with considerable respect for the enemy. "They're tough to beat on that court of theirs even with a so-so team. Unfortunately, they've been coming on tough since the holidays and are most likely playing their best ball of the year about now."

Arlington isn't doing that bad itself lately. After losing their last couple of Christmas tournament outings and then falling to Hersey, the Redbirds have reeled off four straight victories.

Zigman credits this in a large part to a bench which has been picking up in tempo through exposure and with the addition of previously injured Dennis Gaare.

Zigman plans on using former starter

ROADBLOCKING FOREST View's Larry Monroe from behind is Wheeling's big George Kaage. Monroe's desperation shot hit the rim Friday night, but rolled off as the Wildcats pulled out a squeaker, 57-55.

Two Paddock tourneys on weekend schedule

The scene shifts to Rolling Meadows Fairlawn Bowl... and two more Paddock Publications bowling tournaments.

While the men had their fun at Buffalo Grove Striker Lanes, the women and mixed leagues march into the spotlight this weekend.

The Champagne Tournament for Mixed Leagues will be staged in two squads Saturday, starting at 6:15 p.m. The women will roll in three squads Sunday, starting at noon.

See page 6 for the complete list of starting times and lanes at the Rolling Meadows site.

Team captains are reminded any sanctioned bowler is eligible to substitute providing necessary documentation of average is provided, either by calling tournament headquarters at 394-2300 today, or reporting to officials at the tournament this weekend.

Handicaps included in the paper are unofficial, subject to change after competition has begun.

Williams resigns after 10 seasons as Prospect coach

by JIM COOK

Prospect High School's varsity football team will be under new command this fall.

Don Williams, 10-year head coach of the Knights, submitted his resignation for the post early Thursday morning. The resignation was accepted by Principal Edward Spacapan.

"I felt it was time to get some new blood into the system," Williams explained. "I think my move will prove best for the school."

"My decision had nothing to do with our 6-8 record last year. I was as proud of that team as any other I've coached. I ball coach and assistant varsity football coach for one year before coming to Prospect.

In 1962, his first year at the Mount Prospect-based school, he guided his freshmen "B" team to a 7-0 record and the "A's" to a 4-4-2 mark.

The following year, his sophomores cruised through the conference unbeaten and never tasted defeat in eight outings overall.

Williams succeeded Prospect's original head man J. O. Jackson, who now is the head football coach at LaGrange High School.

With his new appointment in April, 1964, Williams, in his first varsity campaign, paced the Knights to a 7-1 record and a share of the Mid-Suburban League crown with Glenbrook South.

Prospect went on to register seasons of 1-4-3, 0-8-4, 4-4-4 and 4-4 before striking it rich in 1970. Prospect was the South Division's undefeated champion and butted arch-rival Arlington in the Mid-Suburban's first Super Bowl playoff.

In his last three years at the reins, the Knights registered marks of 3-4-1, 4-4 and 0-8 for a composite ledger of 34-43-4 over the span of a decade.

"Don certainly carried the father image at Prospect," said a member of the Prospect coaching staff. "He'd listen to everyone's problems. If one of the kids was having trouble getting into college, Don would try to find him one."

"His whole life was football. After a game, he'd wait for the films and then spend half the night analyzing them. His philosophy was always that the kids win the games and the coaches lose them."

Besides his full-time duties as Prospect's head football coach, Williams was also actively involved in the Knights' Booster Club organization and had a hand in the sports program during the year.

He served as the official scorer during the basketball season and was an assistant scorer when Prospect hosted the state gymnastics meet in seven of the past 10 years.

His versatile coaching ability permitted him an assistant's role in the golf, wrestling and baseball programs.

Williams will remain a part of Prospect's faculty as a classroom instructor.

thought we did the best with what we had to work with."

Since the resignation was for a non-teaching position, the acceptance by Spacapan made it official. "I've known Don for the 12 years he's been here," Prospect's Principal said. "We've gone through the system together."

"I think that in everything he's done, he's always had the best interest of the boys in mind," Spacapan indicated that applications for the post will be accepted from outside the district.

In his high school football playing days, Williams was a key member of the team that won the imaginary Indiana state title his senior year.

Williams graduated from Evansville, Ind. College in 1956 and coached for five years at Bosse High School in Evansville. In his final year there, his freshmen posted an 8-1 record to win the conference championship.

From Bosse, he journeyed to St. Louis County, Mo., where he was head base-

Some shots you just never forget

It was one of those shots you had to see to believe.

I saw it and I still don't believe it.

Conant's Roger Sander fired in a shot from about 75 feet away last Friday evening at Hersey.

For a better overall picture, consider that he wound up from around one free throw line and whipped the basketball almost the entire length of the floor.

The desperation toss came in the closing seconds of the first half — remarkably — ripped through the net without first touching the backboard or rim. That in itself is amazing.

It obviously would have made a better story if Conant had won by these two points, or if the basket had come at the end of the game, but the shot itself is something I'll never forget.

Conant did win Friday — by eight points — and it is difficult to evaluate just how much of a lift they received from this desperation basket. They went into the dressing room at halftime trailing by only one point.

Sander's basket did prompt some memory work. There obviously are certain shots from the past in area high school basketball that stand out more than others. Roger's long-range heave didn't win a game, but it certainly will be a shot fans won't forget.

I didn't have the time — or the inclination — to spend days poring through the microfilm, examining the thousands of basketball games played through the years, but there's always that other source — my memory. That used to be one of my best sources, but I'm not so sure anymore.

There are some moments, some shots, that I'll never forget. Sander's shot is one of those. There are others. Some brought cheers. Some were painful. The painful memories seem more vivid.

It was a March night in 1961 when Bob Falkenberg of Crystal Lake took a pass in the corner of the Arlington gym. He was hounded closely by a Prospect defender with five seconds left. Highly regarded Prospect, a choice for the state title, had a 57-55 lead in a sectional tourney battle.

The Crystal Lake star jumped and threw up a desperation one-hander at the buzzer. If he missed, Prospect would have marched into the title game, one step closer to the dream of a state tourney berth.

Falkenberg was off balance as he shot. He was shooting from a poor angle. He was pressured on defense. There was no way he could make the shot.

He made the shot. An overtime was necessary, and Prospect wound up losing in sudden death on two free throws.

Memories. I still can see Falkenberg maneuvering for position with the seconds pounding by. I still don't see how he got off that shot with so much defensive pressure.

That superb Prospect team provided another memory — unfortunately, another painful one. You remember the losses because there were so few.

Coch Dick Kinneman's powerful Knights of 1960-61 carried a 17-0 record and second-place statewide ranking when they played unheralded Wheaton in late January.

The visiting Tigers scrapped and battled and capitalized on every Prospect mistake in the Knight fieldhouse. They had control of the basketball with a 60-60

Kickin' it around

by BOB FRISK Sports Editor

deadlock and the final seconds ticking off Wheaton's Al Lange, who was starting his first varsity game, dribbled at the top of the key. And then it happened.

The ball left the boy's hand 24 feet out, arched softly, and sliced the net just to the left of center. No one saw it hit the floor.

The clock read :00. The scoreboard read 62-60. Young Lange was mobbed. He was smothered in the great bear-hug of a stunning victory over the state's No. 2 team.

Falkenberg and Lange. Those really hurt memories.

Go back even earlier. Go back to the first time Arlington and Prospect battled on the basketball floor.

It was in the championship game of the 1960 Palatine Regional. Arlington won in overtime, 57-56, but there were two shots that I'll always remember. One went in. One didn't.

Roger Sander

Trailing 50-43 in the final period, Prospect took out after Arlington The Cards had a shaky 53-51 lead with just seconds left.

The Knights were in control and they worked the ball to Fred Lussow, now Forest View's head football coach. With the noise deafening, with everyone standing, with incredible pressure, Lussow calmly fired in a 15-foot jump shot at the buzzer to send the game into overtime.

Arlington took control in the overtime and had a 57-56 lead when Lussow whipped the basketball to George Pomey with two seconds remaining. Another shot to remember.

Pomey fired a semi-hook from 15 feet in front. As the ball sailed toward the basket, the gun went off. Silence reigned as Pomey's shot hit the back of the rim, bounced three feet in the air, and then skidded off.

It's easier to remember dramatic moments, pressure shots, from recent years, and two stand out Arlington Coach George Zigman will never forget the night of March 9, 1971.

North Chicago held a 69-68 lead over Arlington with 18 seconds left of a sectional tourney game at Fremd. Ken Peters had just rebounded a missed North Chicago free throw.

Peters moved down the left side of the court as the seconds ticked off. He passed to John Brodhan with about 10 seconds left, just in front of the Arlington bench.

Brodhan looked for an open man underneath. There was no one. He had no opening for a drive because two defenders were on him. He had to shoot — then.

Zigman recalled the moment: "When he shot it I had a good look and it appeared it was in all the way. I was praying that it would go in and it did. It wasn't fluky either — the basket popped."

Chet Pudlosky Remember the name? Remember the shot?

This time it was March 7, 1972 and Conant was playing touted Elgin in the Barrington Sectional.

With 18 seconds left Conant's Rick Pearson drove and scored to cut the Elgin lead to 64-63. Elgin had a chance to put it away but missed on a one-and-one free throw attempt, and Dick Redliger's Cougars controlled.

Pudlosky took the ball up the right side. The seconds ticked off. There was not enough time to move it any closer. He had to shoot. He was 25 feet out.

The desperation shot found the mark. Pandemonium. Conant had a dramatic 65-64 success, and one victory later they became the first area team ever to achieve "Sweet Sixteen" status.

There have been other games won and lost at the buzzer, games won and lost in unusual circumstances. There have been other desperation shots.

Memories do fade with time, but there are some moments, some shots, that I could never forget.

Going to state on an incredible shot!

There have been many spectacular shots in the history of high school basketball in Illinois.

However, considering the circumstances, there may never have been anything to rival the shot by all-starer Bryan Williams of Danville Schlarmann in 1961.

Schlarmann was playing Clinton for the sectional basketball championship and the right to advance to Huff Gym and the state tournament.

Clinton had a one-point lead and was shooting a one-and-one free throw with four seconds left. They missed the shot and Schlarmann rebounded, quickly releasing the ball to Williams at the free throw line.

Williams, who already had 40 points for the night, unloaded a two-handed chest shot (yes, you read correctly) that sailed the length of the floor and into the basket without touching the backboard or rim. The length of the shot was similar to the basket by Conant's Roger Sander Friday, but Sander threw the ball. Williams actually shot it.

Danville Schlarmann won the game and a spot in the state tournament on that amazing shot.

Paul Shebby, who was the coach of that Schlarmann team and now is the Danville High School Athletic Director, recalled that incredible moment this week in a telephone interview with the Herald:

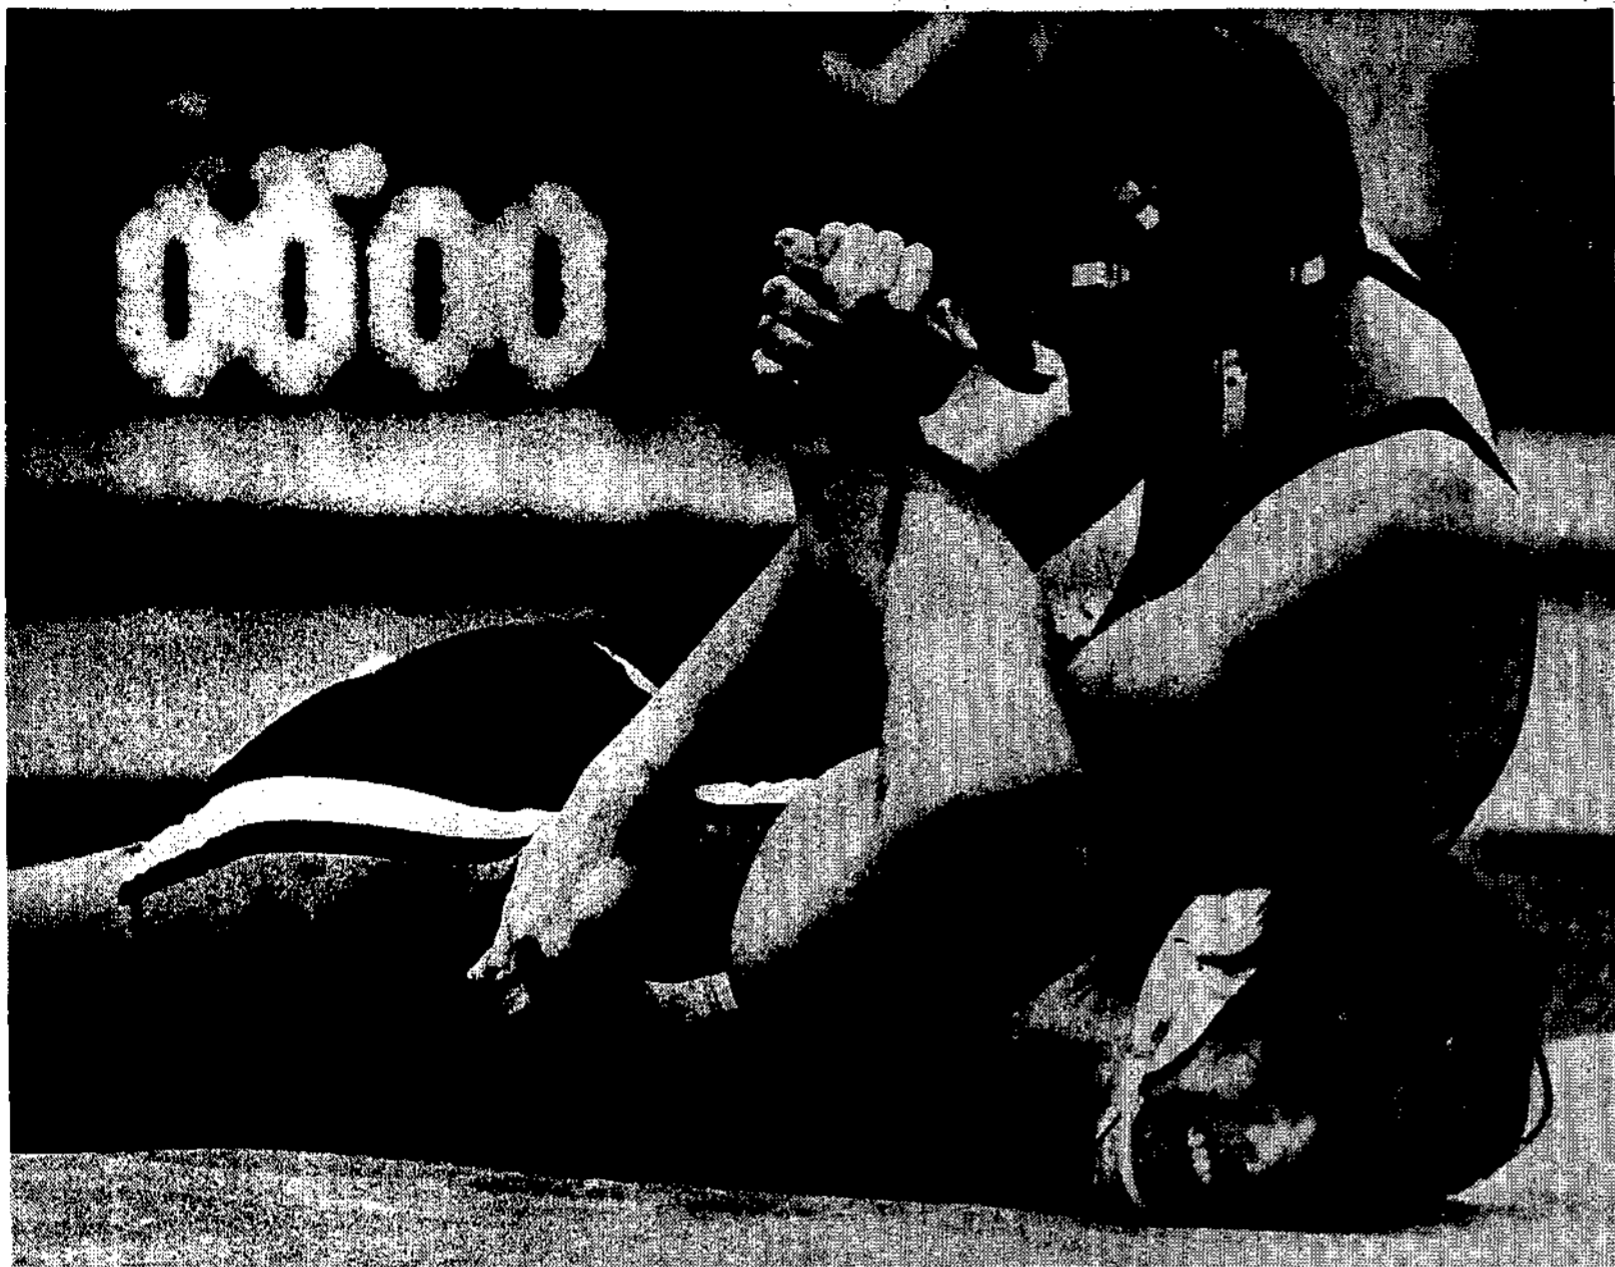

"I've never seen anything like it before or since," Shebby said. "I think the most amazing aspect of the whole shot was that when all the excitement had died down, and the place had cleared out, about an hour or so later, we brought Bryan back to the gym to see if he could even shoot it that far again.

"He couldn't. The adrenalin must really have been flowing at that particular moment in the game, because no matter how hard he tried, he could not get that two-handed chest shot that far again. It was quite an experience, certainly something I will never forget. The ball didn't touch a thing all the way through."

"Just getting to a state tournament is a tremendous thrill," Shebby summed up. "Getting there on a shot like that is incredible."

Schlarmann lost its first game in the state finals, but nothing could detract from the night that Bryan Williams fired the shot heard 'round the state of Illinois.

NOT MAULTIN' DAULTON. Although the hold applied by Jim Carlstrom of Rolling Meadows appears to have Buffalo Grove's Bob Daulton all wrapped up, it didn't stick for long with Daulton rallying to take the 98-pound bout 9-6. Carlstrom still had the last laugh though as his Mustang team edged out a 24-23 decision over the Bison in the conference dual meet last Friday. (Photo by Bob Strawn)

Grade school cage highlights

The Eagles (St. Emily's) and Saints (St. Raymond's) were the only undefeated teams in the Mount Prospect 6th Grade Basketball League after the second week of play was completed last Thursday evening at the Holmes Gym.

In the curtain-raiser, the Wildcats (Dempster) beat the Warriors (St. Zachary's) 45-37, as nine players broke into the scoring column. Jeff Miller paced the victors with 14 points. Mike Martinski and Doug Meyer connected for six apiece. Jim Holan and Steve Anderskow each bagged five. Scott Burton added four.

Tom Scolari led a much-improved Warriors squad as he dropped in 17 points, a league high so far this season. George Suarez rebounded well and contributed eight. Greg Woodall and Scott Luschen swished five and four points respectively.

An aggressive defensive battle ended with the Eagles (St. Emily's) downing the Lions (St. Mark's) 25-14, after leading 12-2 at intermission. John Frugo and Dan Florey were the high point men for the Eagles with 10 and seven points respectively. Jim Lazarski and Bob Svec sparked the defense with numerous steals and breakaways.

The Lions couldn't seem to get started in this game. Scott Dix put in an all-out effort with his rebounding and four points. Tim Anderson led the team in scoring with five. Mark Heuer hit for three points and Steve Hartner two in a losing cause.

A last quarter rally enabled the Saints (St. Raymond's) to defeat the Hawks (Holmes) 35-24 in the spirited nightcap. Jim Neugebauer and Frank Apuzzo scored most of their points in this period and finished with 11 and 13. They made nine free throws between them. Vic Citro and Ed Conlon helped the cause with four counters apiece.

The hustling Hawks had a one-point lead at half-time and were only behind 22-20 at the end of three quarters. Angie Vivirito and Jeff Ashbury ripped the ropes for seven and six respectively. Joe Natola got five and Kevin Maloney a pair of baskets.

No games will be played on Thursday, Jan. 24 because the gym will not be available. First place will be at stake when the Eagles (St. Emily's) and Saints (St. Raymond's) meet in the opener on Thursday, Jan. 31.

Highlights of Schaumburg hockey

GOLD DIVISION

Kings Mites (ages 6 & 7)
Schaumburg 7, Streamwood 3
Vince Russo and Brad Sterling led a pack of hungry Kings on a rampage against Streamwood. Russo and Sterling each clipped a hat trick from Streamwood in a game that saw the Kings slap 41 shots on goal. Scott Dunne added to the damage with a goal of his own. The strong Schaumburg defense held Streamwood to only 13 shots on net.

McArthur Realty Squirts (ages 8 & 9)
Arlington All-Stars 4, Schaumburg 3
Squirrels 5, Schaumburg 2

Schaumburg 5, Des Plaines 2
And the roof came tumbling down. The Kings, who have been known for their habit of winning, had a week full of surprises. First came the Arlington All-Stars, a team handled easily by the Kings earlier. But Arlington was ready, and Schaumburg wasn't. Bill Dunne was able to chalk up two points for Schaumburg, and Mike Rudinski came through with the third. Dan Slaven and Jody Horn assisted for the Kings who outshot Arlington 12 to 9. But Arlington had their day.

Still burning from Arlington, Schaumburg quickly had the Spartans down 3-0, and it looked like a cake walk. But just as quickly, the Spartans struck back leaving the Kings in a cloud of dust to the tune of 5-2. Jody Horn scored for the Kings on an assist from Mike Rudinski and Bob Melkerson. Rudinski scored the second King goal with help from Steve Chlack.

In their third outing, within a week, Schaumburg managed to hold on to squeak by a very solid Des Plaines team 3-2. Bill Dunne, Jody Horn and Mike Rudinski tallied for Schaumburg. Horn also earned an assist, and Dan Grudis earned a point.

Arrow Street Metal Peewees (ages 11 & 12)
Schaumburg 5, Des Plaines 3

Schaumburg couldn't break away from sticky Des Plaines until the third period. First period score was 2-2. Second period score was 2-3. In the third period, Chuck Linkenhead put the game away for Schaumburg with some help from Bob Vuglar. Mitch Dorske added the frosting on assists from Glen Fancutt and Chuck Linkenhead.

Other scoring for Schaumburg was by Frank Gourley, Vuglar and Jon Melkerson. Mike Gynor, Scott Ross and Leo Provoost earned assists. Melkerson left the game early for some repair work at Alexian Brothers. X-rays revealed nothing more than a badly-bruised knee.

Schaumburg 7, Des Plaines 3

The Kings had a head of steam, and wouldn't be denied. Rod Wade and Curt Dempster led Schaumburg with four of the seven goals. Kurt Klauer, Todd Vuglar and Mike Weber also pumped in Schaumburg goals.

Dunbar Realty Midgets (ages 15 & 16)
Schaumburg 12, Des Plaines 9

Massacre! The walls of the Woodfield Hockey Center are still rattling. The Kings blasted the Des Plaines goalies 49 times, and held stylized Des Plaines to only five.

Mike Wachorne and Cary Dickson each accounted for three assists. Mike Fabry seemed to be having a good time with his two goals and three assists, while Mouse Pollard was quietly tucking away three assists of his own. Barry Kuksinski picked up a goal and two assists. Bob Payson and Dan Culvert scored and assisted, and there were two assists by Jim Wilson. Brian Donaldson had an assist.

Campanelli, Inc. Juniors (ages 17-20)
Schaumburg 3, Streamwood 1

Another one for those Kings! Schaumburg has no respect for the other team. In another shooting fest, the Kings fired away 45 times on a very good Streamwood goalie. Meanwhile, the Schaumburg defense was shielding their own goalie Greg Tatarski who was assaulted only 15 times.

Scoring for the Kings were Steve Bird, Steve Gorfinski and Joe Vuglar. Assists went to Bird, Gorfinski, Glinar (with two), Dan Weiss and John Bohrer.

PURPLE DIVISION
King Mites (ages 6 & 7)

Dundee 6, Schaumburg 1

Leave-taking Dundee never let up the pressure. Stacey Sherwood was the lone goal scorer for those Kings on an assist from Nick Cloan. Dundee peppered John May with 18 goals, while Schaumburg managed only seven shots on the Dundee net.

King Squirts (ages 9 & 10)
Schaumburg 1, Lake-in-Hill 0

A sensational Lake goalie prevented a King runaway, as the Schaumburg crew unloaded 16 times and held the Lake to only four. Tom Anderson made the difference as he blasted the one that counted. Mike Malawski assisted Anderson. Goals: Scott Gorman chalked up another shutout for Schaumburg.

King Peewees (ages 10 & 11)
Schaumburg 3, Elk Grove 1

The Purple Division Peewees have winning fever. Coach Rich Aulich has his team on fire!

Elk Grove was loaded with some high power talent, and drew first blood.

But Ted Elitzroth, unassisted, responded to the challenge. The second period was hard and fast, but the game went into the third period tied 1-1.

Elk Grove put on pressure in the third period, but they couldn't overpower the King of defense and defense, as Eric Olson put the winning goal away, with assists from Mike Gorman and Ted Elitzroth. The fired-up Kings kept pouring it on, and Pete Ladas put away the insurance goal, with the help of Mike Clah.

Goalie Mike Olaszewski took 16 shots on goal, while the Kings applied 31.

Skating on lake ice in low temperatures was a new experience for the Kings. The game was slow because of rough ice. However, constant pressure by the Kings took home a win and 15 pairs of very cold feet! Bob Corbel scored the first goal, followed by two goals from Tony Clutten. Eric Olson assisted twice, and Jerry Holinski assisted on another. Schaumburg outshot Tower Lakes 26 to 15.

Elk Grove 14, Schaumburg 2

It's tough to overcome 70 shots on goal while you're only getting away eight. But that's the way it was as Elk Grove combined their A & B divisions to swamp the Kings. Ken Bailey and Mark Vuglar managed to get by Elk Grove's defense.

Drew Skarwas was the outstanding player of the game, stopping 56 of those 70 shots.

Schaumburg 3, Elk Grove 2

The Kings won this tight contest against Elk Grove with team effort and hustle. Jim Newman, Todd Zariko and Joe Ducote, with the breaker, each contributed a King goal. Assists were credited to Jim Perella, Ray Cody and Paul Rie. Sergio Faldstein stopped some difficult shots to earn the win for Schaumburg.

THE HALAS MEMOIRS

Dear Fans Forum:

Is George Halas getting his memoirs in order, like I've heard? I know he must have an interesting story, but I've never seen an actual book on his life.

Carl Haynes

The septuagenarian Papa Bear has finally consented to tell it all, collaborating with Chicago columnist Jack Griffin. But the problem is getting Papa Bear to sit down. Even a hip operation didn't slow him up last year.

FRIDAYS FOR PREPS

Dear Herald:

I read somewhere that the new professional football league might even consider playing on Friday nights. If they do, I for one won't bother to ever pay any money to see them. Friday is high school football night, and the pros should keep away. Let the kids have their one night of the week without any problems from the big money boys.

IS THIS OUR YEAR??

Dear Fans Forum:

I've never seen this area have a better chance at getting a basketball team downstate. Conant, Wheeling, Arlington and possibly even Hersey look like they have chances. Let's hope our high school teams don't miss again what could be a tremendous experience for the community involved. This area could really use something like the excitement of a team in the state tourney.

'SEMI-TOUGH'

Dear Fans Forum:

Whatever happened to the Broadway musical that was supposed to be made from Dan Jenkins' funny sports book, "Semi-Tough"? I haven't read anything about it?

Terri Woods
Des Plaines

As far as we can determine, it's still in early production. Actually, producer Robert Merrick has been so tied up by his movie, "The Great Gatsby," that he hasn't paid much attention lately to "Semi-Tough." As for Jenkins, he's half way through another novel — based on the golfing life.

NEIGHBORLY BATTLE. Struggling for the ball are a Sacred Heart High School player, left, and a Rolling Meadows High basketballer during action Tuesday night at Sacred Heart's gym. The hosts won, 35-26. It was the first time these across-the-street rival schools had met in a non-conference game.

FLAMES 4, DEERFIELD 2

The Flames were victorious over a fine Deerfield team, 4-2. The first period was a fairly even contest with Bob Zombo, assisted by Tom Colne and Glen Fredrickson, scoring the lone goal for the Flames. The second period found the Flames leading, 3-1, on goals scored by Paul Stork and Tony Aiello with assists being credited to Joe Anderson, Aiello and Dan Porowski. Finally, in the third period, the Flames erupted for three goals. Scoring in this final period were Mark Myers, Bill Ceas, and Stork with assists to Reed Behnke, Porowski, and Myers. A fine defensive effort was shown by Porowski, Steve Pluckett and Jim Murphy, sharing goaltending duties, did an excellent job against the hustling Deerfield team.

FLAMES 6, OAK PARK 5

In a back-and-forth contest, the Flames were winners at Oak Park, 6-5. Reed Behnke scored the first goal for the Flames, assisted by Bill Ceas. A few moments later Behnke again tallied on an unassisted goal. Ceas led off the scoring in the second period on an assist by Tom Glanis. Drake gets Harper star

John Herter, a two-year letterman for Harper College, has accepted a full ride football scholarship to Drake University in Des Moines, Iowa. The former Maine West High School lineman played offensive tackle for the Hawks, acting as one of the team captains this past season. "They were real happy to get him," said John Eliask, Harper's head football coach.

—Bob Mellin of Palatine and Craig Combs of Arlington Heights are mainstays of the Indiana State University gymnastics squad. Mellin's specialty is floor exercise and Combs competes in floor exercise and vaulting.

—Linda Angeleff of Arlington Heights is one of two advanced fencers listed on the Illinois State University roster eligible for intercollegiate competition. IUS opens its fencing season this Saturday in a triangular meet at Iowa.

Keehan continues to shine in agonizing Lion season

by ART MUGALIAN

The St. Viator Lions are in the throes of perhaps their most discouraging basketball season ever.

Coach Steve Antrim's boys have lost 15 straight games, and every team coming up on the schedule has already done it to the Lions at least once already this year.

There is one bright spot in St. Viator's gloomy picture. There is one subject that Antrim can discuss with enthusiasm.

That would be Terry Keehan.

The senior Lion this year is to his team what Wally Chambers is to the Chicago Bears. He is bringing home individual honors when team honors are not forthcoming. He is making a name for himself even though he and his teammates cannot put together a winning effort.

And the Lions, certainly, are not as weak as the Bears in their chosen game. Antrim has built a young team around the nucleus of Keehan — a group of sophomores and juniors around the talented upperclassman. They have performed well on occasion and they have made their share of mistakes.

But Keehan has done it all. The versatile 6-foot-2 redhead has played guard and he has played forward. He grabs rebounds and he sets up the scoring. And when he can, he does the scoring himself.

In 15 games, Keehan has a 21.5 average, placing him among the leaders in the Chicago area. He has failed to make double figures only once, when he fouled out in the third quarter. Nine times he has hit for 20 points or more, and three times he has made the 30-mark.

Keehan's deadly outside shooting and his aggressive inside penetration have kept the Lions close in games when they otherwise might have been routed.

Antrim can't say enough about his steady college prospect. "Attitude-wise, he's the best," said the coach. "And he's the kind of kid who will improve a lot. Terry may get an inch or two bigger before he stops growing. He's going to get better."

The college recruiters so far have come from the smaller schools, although a few major colleges have had a look at Keehan.

"Terry's not sure where he wants to go yet," Antrim noted, "but he'd definitely be a good small college player. He's got a couple real important assets — he's coachable and he's willing to work. He'll never be a problem."

The Lion coach has helped Terry improve his game this year. "At the beginning of the season, he was pretty weak on defense, but he's gotten better. He still needs work defensively, and he has to work on handling the ball."

Keehan and his teammates take their 0-8 conference record to Holy Cross Friday night for a rematch with the Crusaders. The first time the two teams met, the Lions fell by 10. To win, St. Viator will have to get physical.

"They're real big and strong," Antrim said of Holy Cross, now 3-6 in league play. "If we can get (Glen) Girard to play a little more aggressively, and if we can keep them off the boards, we'll be okay. This is one of the games within reach."

"We zone-pressed a little over the last weekend and we did pretty well. We'll have to pressure these guys if we want to win."

And Terry Keehan and his mates certainly want to win.

Waycinden boys' baseball sets Saturday registration

The Waycinden Boys' Baseball League will hold registration for its instructional league from noon until 2 p.m., Saturday, at the Mount Prospect Park District Country Club.

Boys must be seven or eight years old and have been born between Aug. 1, 1965 and July 1, 1967. Birth certificates or acceptable notarized documents will be required as proof of age.

Waycinden League boundaries are as follows: Golf Road on the north; Mount Prospect road on the east; Route 72, from Busse Road to Touhy, on the south; plus the connecting combination of Goebbert, Route 62 and Busse Roads on the west.

All boys accepted into Waycinden baseball will receive a Waycinden shirt and cap plus six weeks instruction in basic baseball fundamentals. Each boy will play a minimum three innings and bat at least once in every game.

Registration costs $35, is deductible on federal income tax, and includes a benefit drawing book or $10. Options on the book include keeping it, and becoming eligible for one of three fine prizes, or selling it to pocket the $10.

First prize will be expenses for a two-person trip to Las Vegas, Nev. Second prize is a color television and third prize a black-and-white portable television.

Only families who live within the Waycinden boundaries may register their sons. Names will also be taken for boys nine-to-16 years old who have been previously affiliated with the program. Any new registrant must show proof of age.

Hoffman handles Hersey

by MICHAEL McMEKIN

The Hoffman Hawks celebrated a 62-44 win at their home game last Saturday morning against Hersey.

Joe Gajewski, usually one of the top scorers, was back on the court after missing a game due to a bruised heel. His bruised heel didn't seem to bother him because he chalked up 16 points for the Hawks.

The scoreboard flickered in the first period as Hoffman dived into the game, leaving Hersey in the background. This was reflected by a Hoffman lead of 18-5 at the end of the first period.

Hersey's scoring began to accelerate in the second period, but it couldn't equal the Hawks. Hersey was at a dormant point when the Hawks scored a run of 10 points before the Huskies scored one basket. The same thing happened in the first period. The second period was better for Hersey, but they were still left behind, 34-14.

Hersey outscored the Hawks in the third period, but Hoffman remained in front, 50-31.

The Hawks slowed down at the end of the game but not slow enough for Hersey to recover.

Coach Segebrecht stated that one of the reasons the Hawks won was that they "just got a hold of a good lead and sat on it for the rest of the game."

The Hawks will pay a visit to Wheeling Saturday morning.

Boat show to drop anchor Feb. 15

The Chicago area's first 1974 boat show will drop anchor for a 10-day stay on Friday, Feb. 15, at the Arlington Park Exposition Center.

"The fifth annual Midwest Boat Show will give boating buffs and outdoor aficionados a head start obtaining the latest in marine, water sport and fishing equipment," says Edward P. Hansen, Midwest Boat Show president.

"Our show is traditionally a boat buyer's market place where people come to shop for and buy their boats and boating equipment," according to Hansen.

Hansen says boating is one of America's most popular activities and that more than 47,000,000 persons participated in recreational boating last year. They used $435,000 pleasure craft and spend more than $4 billion for boats, motors, accessories, safety equipment, fuel and related items.

Some 100 exhibitors from all over the Midwest will "dock" in the 125,000-square-foot exhibition area, displaying cabin cruisers, outboard motors, sailboats, houseboats, iceboats, rowboats and canoes, pontoon cruisers, paddle boats and rafts of all types as well as trailers and docking equipment and boating accessories.

Water sport and fishing buffs, according to Hansen, also will find plenty of new items including the latest in skis, scuba diving and snorkeling gear, underwater photography equipment, fish detection gear, rods, reels, lures, bait and tackle boxes, scalers, nets, hooks and lines.

Highlights of the show will include the Resort Hotel Association's $100,000 "Holiday for Two" Vacation Drawings, hundreds of daily door prizes, and nautical fashion shows.

The "Holiday for Two" drawings' grand prize is a seven-day six night Disneyworld vacation for two, including transportation, deluxe hotel/motel accommodations, tickets to Disneyworld and $100 in "Holiday Dollars." Hundreds of other vacations for two will be awarded in any one of 28 U.S. cities, including some in Hawaii. Entry forms for the drawings, limited to adults 21 years or over (one entry to a family), will be available at the show.

Daily door prizes will include boating accessories and water sport and fishing gear, with a grand door prize of Modar's Triton VHF-FM 25 watt Marine Radio-telephone with 12½ channel capability, delivered with channels 6, 16, WX and both offset crystals. Entries for door prize drawings will be available to every person visiting the show, including children.

Nautical garb for men, women, teens and children from Montgomery Ward's Randhurst Shopping Center store will be modeled in six fashion shows held on weekends in the Exposition Center's dining room. Shows will be given at 7 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 2 p.m. Sundays.

Boat show hours will be 6 to 10 p.m. opening day, Friday, February 15; noon to 10 p.m. Saturdays; noon to 7 p.m. Sundays, and 4 to 10 p.m. weekdays.

Admission will be $2.50 for adults and $1.00 for children.

Buck's goals boost Harper to hockey win over Morton

Two third period goals by Paul Buck provided Harper College with the insurance it needed to defeat Morton, 4-2, in Tuesday night hockey action at the Wil-low Chalet Ice Arena.

Buck, whose seven goals in four games leads the Hawks, scored twice in the first 3:38 of the final period to give goalie Carl Della a 3-0 margin to work with. Dave Connely had registered his fifth goal of the campaign in the first period, assisted by Steve Bird.

But Morton College fought back with markers by Dan Covella and Terry Smith within a 39-second span, and the Hawks had to hold on. In desperation, Morton pulled its goalie and Harper iced the game with an open-net scored by John Ribora. Harper, 4-0 in hockey action this year, plays its next game Jan. 28 at Madison Technical College. The next home game will be against DuPage, Feb. 2, at Rolling Meadows Sports Complex, starting at 4:00 p.m.

St. Joe tops rival

St. Joseph of Wheeling defeated rival Holmes Jr. High of Wheeling at both the 7th and 8th grade levels. In the 7th grade game the Chargers routed Holmes, 41-8 as the tough Charger defense held Holmes to just four field goals in the whole game. David Glueck with 13 points and Mark Begrowicz with 12 points led St. Joe. In their last conference game St. Joe defeated Santa Maria, 36-26 behind a 20-point performance by Begrowicz. The victory gives the Chargers a perfect 9-0 conference record. Overall they are 19-1.

The varsity routed Holmes 58-29 behind the 20-point performance by Steve Mulford. Steve Mulford chipped in 12 points. The varsity lost its second conference game against seven victories as Santa Maria defeated them, 40-35. Mulford with 10 points and Jim Lock-efer with nine points led St. Joe. Overall the Chargers are 10-6.

St. Joe will play St. Joseph of Libertyville Sunday at Holmes Junior High at 1 p.m.

At Fairlanes Bowl

Terry Carson potted a 224 middle game toward a 608 series in pacing action in the Rolling Meadows Park District Teenage Junior Mixed League. Terry carries a 389 average. Joey Carpinio hit 487. Tony Locascio rolled 30 pins over his average with a 150 game and Kim Williams fired 444 for 80 pins over average. Todd Koczmar notched 481. Keith Ten Brook clicked for a 481 and Jeff Corey blasted 490.

Kaczor followed with a 474 series the following week while Mark Hunsenbarger rolled 76 pins over average with a 427. Carpinio hit 478. Ed Reed rolled 202. John Devlin hit 188. Corey fired 470 and Brad Anderholm contributed a 417.

SPEED SKATERS from the Mount Prospect Skating Club work out at the Randhurst Metro-Sports Ice Arena in preparation for coming meets. Competitive speed skating requires long hours of hard work and practice.

Speed skaters have fun but also have problems

by ART MUGALIAN

If you are a speed skater and you live in the Mount Prospect area, what do you do?

Most likely, you join the Mount Prospect Speed Skating Club.

That has always been the thing to do if you had 10 dollars and wanted to develop your skating talents. For years, the amateur organization has provided an inexpensive way for kids to skate, learn, and compete under expert tutelage.

Now, the club faces problems — problems involving money and others having to do with skating space. Bob Vehe, president of the club, is the man who must deal with the difficulties.

"The number one problem in speed skating is facilities," Vehe said. "That's the most difficult thing."

Indoor speed skating requires a hockey-sized elliptical track. "Mount Prospect has never had such a thing," Vehe said. "Finally, they built the Metro-Sports arena."

The new Randhurst Metro-Sports Twin Ice Arena seemed to be a godsend for the club and its members, but that is not the way it turned out.

"We had a deuce of a time getting ice at a reasonable time," said Vehe. "We finally got one hour a week at 8:30 on Tuesdays. We had to take it at this time and we're on the hook for it, even though now it's cold enough for the kids to be outside."

The club pays $70 per week for the ice time at Randhurst and Vehe figures they lose about $30 a week. "If we could come close to breaking even, if we could get somewhere near rental cost, we'd be okay," he said.

"Our problem is we can't afford to get too big a club," Vehe noted. "The ice gets too crowded for reasonable coaching."

The president mentioned one alternative. "We could get in at 5 a.m. or midnight or something, but we used to do that, and after awhile it gets to be too much for the kids and the parents. What new people can get interested at five o'clock in the morning? No, we found it was hurting us with the less expensive hours."

"But we were only able to get this one hour. Our goal is to get two or three nights a week, or perhaps move in with some other club."

Vehe suggested that his club might join with the Des Plaines club next season in renting time at the Randhurst complex. Such an arrangement would give them more ice time at a cheaper cost.

"The whole sport in the United States is dependent on facilities," Vehe said. "You can't really depend on natural ice anymore."

Fortunately, the Mount Prospect Park District cooperates with the club by letting them use Lions Park for practice sessions. "We're willing to go over there at dinner time and other off-hours," Vehe mentioned. "We'll take inconvenient times and we don't ask for exclusive use of the ice. It just takes a little cooperation."

Vehe, whose own son is a top skater with the club, describes the group as a cross-section of the community. "It's made up of white collar, blue collar, just about every kind of people. It's five-year-olds and up. The kids go up into their twenties now. We've got some guys in their twenties who have been skating since they were seven or eight."

"We're completely independent," Vehe continued. "We do all our own fund-raising."

Besides the cost of rink rental, the club pays for the uniforms it furnishes the skaters. All coaching is provided by the club, and a banquet is held every year at which an award is given to the best skater in the club. All this comes with a $10 membership.

Expenses can run high. The special speed skating uniforms are made in Europe and must be imported. "There has never been a demand for them here," Vehe sighed. "You have to go to Norway to get them, and, of course, you have to get new ones every couple years. Uniforms are one of the really big expenses."

Vehe, aside from his duties with the club, sells real estate. In the past he handled all the club's publicity, but he doesn't have the time for that anymore. He still keeps abreast of the skating end of the operation, though.

"We look for the person who doesn't mind very, very hard training," Vehe said. "You know, years ago, nobody thought about skating until it was very cold. That's probably why the U.S. didn't do very well in the Olympics. Now, the kids have to train almost all year. The gung-ho ones are out there through the summer and fall five days a week doing what they call dry training. They'll run if they can't skate. When it gets cold, it's out on the ice. All this training pays off when they get out there on the ice. Conditioning pays off in the longer races."

"Skating may appear simple to some people, but it's an involved sport. Coordination and form are important."

Vehe feels his club will weather the hard times they are experiencing, and his boys, some of whom may be of by saying, "If you dog it on the ice, the club's president summed up the excitement of speed skating competition by saying, "If you dog it on the ice, you won't make it."

It's that kind of attitude that should keep speed skating alive and on its feet against the odds in Mount Prospect.

Wheeling visits Elk Grove; Conant to host Meadows

Gaare as a swing man, spelling members of the Arlington front line. His reserve guards, Doug Doppeke and Jay Colton came into their own at last week's Taylorville tourney and will probably be seeing increased action.

"Right now I feel we have eight players who can supplement one another as the moment dictates. And we'll probably need them all to contend with this hot Prospect club."

Despite its non-conference woes (Prospect is 0-7 outside the league), the Knights are riding a five-game MSL win streak. The key, according to head coach Bill Slattery, is his team's scoring balance and recent display of overall consistency.

"We're not going to any one guy to carry us," Slattery said. "In our last four games, we've cut down on our mistakes, but we've still got the tendency to hurt ourselves. There are times when we just sputter around and then all of a sudden get going."

"We have a lot of respect for Arlington (Dan) Donahue has improved, (Doug) Betters does a lot of things well, (Jeff) Cleveland doesn't appear to have any weaknesses, and with the guards out in front, they're tough. I guess (Dennis) Gaare is ready to come back for them, too."

Slattery will counter with center Paul Whitney, forwards Al Black and Bob Thompson and backcourt men Jim Anderson and Mike Quade in the clash that matches the highest scoring teams in their respective divisions.

WHEELING AT ELK GROVE

Ted Ecker's hoping his team is through learning the hard way.

"Last weekend was kind of a valuable experience for us," said Wheeling's head basketball coach. He was referring to the 57-55 victory over Forest View.

The Wildcats should have found out that no one can be taken for granted the rest of the season if they are to achieve their lofty goals. For this reason, they'll be playing Elk Grove as if it were a Hersey or an Arlington.

Since they're presently one game ahead of their closest rivals (who appear on the schedule once each next month), they have to maintain that edge against the likes of the Grenadiers. However, aside from the slight advantage Wheeling enjoys, Ecker isn't too excited about being in first place right now, as he explains:

"It doesn't mean a whole lot to me right now. It will if we complete the circuit and are still there."

Elk Grove presently enjoys a three-game bulge over the .500 mark (10-7). When you consider that the Grenadiers have never really been out of any game they've played, you can bet the Wildcats will be taking them seriously.

"We've got our work cut out for us," said Ecker. "I feel the kids can accept the challenge."

Wheeling will be going with its usual lineup of George Kaage, Scott Keenan, Bill Pickler, Bob Westrich and Bill Kenney.

Starting tonight against Wheeling, the Grenadiers have four games in eight days with a quartet of tough opponents. With Elgin-Larkin, Prospect, and Forest View coming up, coach Bill Parmentier sees rugged sledding ahead for his Greens.

But the head man also sees a chance to re-establish the Grove's basketball esteem. "We've done well outside the league," Parmentier noted. "We've beaten some teams that I thought were pretty good. Now, it's a matter of how many really good teams we can beat in the next two weeks."

The Grenadiers, 3-4 in league play, will have their hands full of Wheeling Wildcats tonight. Parmentier discounts the possibility of a Wheeling letdown: "They didn't get on top by taking it easy on anyone and I don't think they'll play any differently against us. They are a good ball club and they play well."

Elk Grove's top scorer, Ken Pollitz, will be the key. If he can come up with a superb performance, the Greens will have a chance.

"I don't change our game plan from week to week," Parmentier offered. "We'll try to play good defense — our regular defense — and we'll run if we can. Nothing different."

"It's Wheeling's outside shooting that impresses me," the Gren coach continued. "Especially Keenan. And they've got an awful lot of depth. It doesn't help to stop any one part of their attack. We've just got to play good defense."

Elk Grove's starting five — Don Weadley, Bill Prince, Greg Kelley, Steve Car-

WM radio visits Forest View

WWM-FM of Arlington Heights will have its sports microphones at Forest View tonight for the Falcons' meeting with Fremd.

WM Director of Sports Bud Kelly will call the play-by-play and Herald Sports Editor Bob Frisk will give the color commentary with air time set for eight o'clock at $2.7 FM.

This will be the station's first look at the Falcons and Vikings. Forest View has a 4-3 record in the Mid-Suburban South and 11-5 standard overall. North entry Fremd is 3-4 and 7-10.

There is a full slate of Mid-Suburban games Tuesday evening, but WM's Mid-Suburban coverage will not resume until Friday, Feb. 1, when Kelly and Frisk will handle Wheeling's visit to Arlington.

son, and Pollitz — will have to contend not only with the outside firepower of the 'Cats, but also the inside marksmanship and rebounding talents of Kaage, Pickler and Westrich.

ROLLING MEADOWS AT CONANT

Cougar coach Dick Redlinger has watched his team develop into an area-wide power, ranked high in the state polls, and undefeated in the conference. Conant's victory over Hersey removed most of the doubt the critics may have harbored concerning the Cougars' talents.

But Redlinger isn't going to take the rest of the schedule lightly, even with seven wins in his hip pocket. Regarding upcoming Rolling Meadows, the Conant coach said, "We could not put that club away when we played them in the Grant tourney. They were very determined. They are a good ball club. If (John) Hogan has a good game, they'll give us trouble."

But the Cougars have what might be regarded as a complete team, as complete as can be expected in the MSL. With last week's emergence of Tom Bowen as a scoring threat, Redlinger has a potent backcourt to go along with his devastating front line.

"I know what we have to turn to, for whatever we need," the coach said. "I may move (Ron) Sulaski to forward and play (Dave) Sutherland at guard. I'll play (Lindsey) Rose against the press because he has shown that he can bring the ball up against anybody. Depending on how they play us, I know what we have and how to use it."

Conant must rely on 6-foot-7 center Steve Irion and 6-5 forward Roger Sander for most of the rebounding work. Irion fouled out in the Hersey game while covering 6-11 Dave Corzine, but ordinarily his contribution is crucial.

As for the 235-pound Sander, his coach again was full of praise: "In the Hersey game, Roger had some unbelievably key rebounds. It seems the longer the game goes on, the stronger he gets."

Although it lost to Conant, 64-42, at the Grant round-robin, Rolling Meadows did give the Cougars fits through three quarters.

"We got off to a terrible start," Mustang coach Ken Arneson remembered. "We were down 17-6 in the first quarter, but outscored them in the second quarter and drew within two during the third quarter before they pulled away. If we can get off to a better start, I think it can only help us."

Arneson will go with Pat Geegan, Hogan, Steve Breitbeil, Dave Thorstensen and Tom Holl against Conant with an eye on the murderous schedule that includes Hersey, Fremd, Wheeling and Arlington in the next three weeks.

"Through all of this, the kids have maintained a good attitude and are working hard. Conant will give you one good shot, but you'd better make it because you can almost forget about the rebound with that front line of theirs," Arneson added.

"They showed us a 2-3 and a 1-3-1 zone at Grant, so in our offense, we'll be looking for our pivot shot and feeding the weak side."

Defensively, the Mustangs limited Conant's guards to just eight points. A repeat performance tonight is a must.

HERSEY AT SCHAUMBURG

The Schaumburg Saxons are getting it from all sides lately. Joe Breault's boys faced tough Arlington last week and lost, 101-56. Next Tuesday, they will host division-leading Conant, a team that has already beaten the Saxons by 19 this year.

And tonight Hersey moves into the Schaumburg lair. The Huskies, led by 6-foot-11 Dave Corzine, have the potential to ruin the Saxons' evening, but good.

"If we don't stop Corzine, it will be a long night," Breault said. "We'll have a hard time keeping him honest."

The job of meeting Corzine head-on will fall to Saxon senior Ray Kralicek, a 6-4, 225-pounder. "Ray will probably play the center spot and cover Corzine man-to-man," Breault offered, "but we'll give him a little help. I don't think two guys could do the job."

The Saxons' coach has a game plan that calls for drawing Corzine and his tall Huskie teammates away from the basket. "We don't expect to be able to control the boards, but we don't want to let them get any cheap baskets down courts," Breault noted. "We have to bring them out a little if we're going to have a chance. We'll try to go for the percentage shot."

The Saxons are 5-10 overall, but 1-4 in the league, and Breault feels they can win a few more. "I could see two, maybe three more wins," the coach predicted. "We're going to work the rest of the year — it's not going to go out the window. In terms of kids coming back — we've got a couple of sophomores and a junior — we're getting some experience."

Breault plans on starting Kralicek, Dave Hill, Wayne Morgan, Gary Merchant, and John McIlraith, with Steve Bengston in a reserve role.

With four games in eight days, Hersey head coach Roger Steingraber is looking to launch the endurance test on the right foot.

"I'd really like to see Dave (Corzine) bust loose," Steingraber said of his sometimes sleeping giant. "We'd like him to become the all-time scorer in the league."

Corzine is just 26 points from complying with his coach's wish, having accounted for 724 points in over three years of varsity competition. Wheeling's Roger Wood heads the elite list with 750.

But aside from individual goals, Steingraber will enter the contest with cautious optimism. "Kralicek is a good shooter and Bengston and McIlraith are good rebounders. We saw Schaumburg against Arlington and we noticed that Kralicek doesn't drive that much, but he hit about 10 bombs. He's their best outside shooter."

Steingraber is also expecting a diamond-and-one full-court press from the Saxons — a strategy that worked well against the Huskie subs two years ago, cutting a 20-point lead in half within two minutes.

While injuries have forced Steingraber to employ a patchwork lineup through most of the season, the veteran coach admitted that he'd like to stick with Corzine at the pivot, Rich Madison and Clyde Glass at forwards and Tim Conard and Mark Krause at guards.

FREMONT AT FOREST VIEW

Time is running out for the two clubs scheduled to face off on the Forest View court tonight. The game will be broadcast at 8:27 PM, starting at eight o'clock.

The Falcons and visiting Fremd occupy positions in their respective South and North Division standings allowing for little leeway if either expects to be in consideration at the end of the season when championship playoff berths are handed out.

Fremont is 3-4 in conference action and it's quite conceivable that the number one team on that side will absorb four losses by the time it's over. A serious three-team dogfight has developed in the North Division which could allow for another unit, like Fremd, to slip in the back door.

And in the South the Falcons (4-3) can still have a say in the title chase if they, along with Prospect and one other unnamed squad, can undermine the undefeated, highrolling Conant outfit.

It will undoubtedly be the end of the line for the loser of the Falcon-Viking clash, however. With that in mind, both sides will be pulling out all stops to add this game to the win column.

The Vikes will enter the action fresh from a cakewalk past Buffalo Grove and hopefully ready for a long stretch run of steady ball-playing, although coach Leon Kasuboske will be facing the test with one, and possibly two, of his regulars on the sidelines.

Guard Steve Dwyer is a definite non-player this week after rejoining another ankle again. "He's had problems with both of them since football season but we thought we'd have him back for good after he sat out the holiday tournament."

"Now I don't know," Kasuboske shrugged. "The only certainty is that we'll miss his steady play through at least another week, and possibly longer."

At Beverly Lanes

Eight bowlers achieved 200-games with handicup in the Arlington Heights Lanes league recently. They were: Davis Kelly 203; Evelyn Wilkins 202; Virginia Thielander 201; Ellen Kramer 200; Bette Hennessy 200; Pat Greiner 211; Ester Alldorff 203; and Beverly Smith who rolled three such games — 202, 201 and 217.

Nancy Schiller picked up the 4-7-10 split.

The other question mark is Bob Frank, hopefully recovered from an eye injury sustained in practice. Frank is an important part of their scoring tandem and would be sorely missed.

Kasuboske will be going with Randy Weber and Ken Hanks at guard slots, with Doug Mize at center and Tim Gross and Frank at forward positions. Weber will move back to forward and Jeff Hamsch will come in at guard if Frank has to be replaced.

Fremont and Forest View are not familiar rivals in basketball. They last met two years ago on the View floor and the hosts collected a one-point overtime decision. The Falcons have not visited Fremd in five years.

Kasuboske is familiar with the opposition though. "They like to keep a lot of man-to-man pressure on you. After seeing them play, I'm particularly impressed with a couple of individuals like this (Mike) Meyer kid who's a real explosive leader-scrapper type and (Kurt) Haaland who appears to be a very complete ball player."

The Falcons saw their record drop to 4-3 when they lost in the final seconds to Wheeling last Friday, and Ted Wissen's team is now three full games behind Conant.

But there is no sense of panic in the Forest View camp. Wissen admitted that his boys have little chance of catching Conant, but he's not tossing in the towel.

"I don't think Conant will lose even two more games," the Falcon coach ventured. "It'll be tough for us. We'll just go along now and try to put together a decent season and then play well in the regionals."

The Falcons will have to be ready for the visiting Vikings tonight. "Fremont certainly is a pesky team," Wissen remarked. "We're concerned about them — we won't have an easy time."

The Forest View coach will start his usual fiveosome — Larry Monroe, Kurt Haaland, Mark Russo, Mike Meyer, and Craig Brinkman — against the Vikes.

"I think we're about the same physically as they are," said Wissen. "It should be an even matchup."

The Falcons' mentor recalled that a subpar 7-for-13 free throw performance cost the team the Wheeling game. "I don't know why we have so much trouble with free throws," Wissen said. "We've always put a lot of emphasis on them. I guess, a lot of it is a psychological thing. And the pressure has a little bit to do with it, too."

The pressures, some might say, are now off the Falcons, at least in the South division race, as they take their 10-5 record into the final quarter of the schedule.

PALATINE AT BUFFALO GROVE

One game does not a season make. But it can offer encouragement and that is the state of belief at Buffalo Grove this week as they prepare for their Friday tussle with visiting Palatine.

The Bison are in the throes of a losing streak so lengthy that coach Paul Grady doesn't even bother keeping track anymore. His hopes have been lying in the future all along anyway and now he's beginning to think that future is approaching the present.

"Of course, I'm encouraged right now. We started off playing reasonably decent ball but we quickly hit a lull, and by last week I was starting to wonder if we'd ever shake it off."

Losing to Fremd 68-53 might hardly be classified by most coaches as snapping out of a lull. But in view of the setbacks the Grove had been suffering through, and bearing in mind that this is a super-youthful club with plenty of growing pains to get out of the way, the Fremd setback could produce optimism.

"For the time being I'm just interested in respectability and that's what we showed signs of rising to last week. If we can get the same kind of effort out of our kids again, I'm reasonably sure we can be competitive with Palatine."

Grady sees some other hurdles too, of course, with respect to the Pirates. "I don't think they're as physical as some of the teams we've faced but they certainly have to be rated among the quickest and possibly the quickest team we've come across."

"I'd have to say the big key for us will be in how we react to their pressure defense," the Bison pilot added.

Palatine coach Ron Finfrock was non-committal when it came to questions concerning his team's plan of action for the Bison game. "We'll stick to our usual game," the Pirate head man said.

Finfrock's main worry is that his boys will be thinking about next Tuesday's match with Wheeling instead of zeroing in on Buffalo Grove.

"Buffalo Grove is a competitive team," the coach noted. "Last week they gave Fremd a real good fight. We're not going to look ahead."

Starting for Palatine will be Steve Haley and Steve Robbins at guards, Jim Arden and Jim Maycan at forwards, and Scott Cole at center. Mark Mara, who has averaged 21 points in his last two games, again will be on the bench for the opening tip-off.

"We're happy with the way he's been coming into the game," Finfrock said of Mara's reservist role at both forward and center.

The young Bisons will have a slight height advantage tonight, but that doesn't faze the Pirate coach. "The season started out with people saying we were a small team, but that's not so," Finfrock said. "Cole is 6-2½ and he can jump as well as a 6-5 kid, and Maycan (6-2) can jump just as well, and he has that breadth. And when Mara is in there, he gives us some 6-4 height."

"I think we'll be able to board okay," he continued. "Our experience will help us."

Finfrock hopes that his boys can work on their consistency and concentration in the Bison game. "I think that's what we'll need in the Wheeling game," he said.

NOW... for some of the reasons why now is really a Very Good Time to buy a new 1974 car!

A message of importance from your Northwest Highway Auto Dealers in Arlington Heights.

Discount Savings:

If you've heard that we're loaded with lots full of new standard size cars, you've heard correctly, but such a condition forces us to slash the prices and offer you a once-in-a-life time opportunity to buy a car at tremendous savings . . . savings that will far overshadow the possible increase in so called "gas mileage" gas consumption, but more about that later.

Family Safety:

Small cars are obviously more economical to operate, but, how can you honestly equate questionable economy with peace-of-mind safety that you give yourself and your family when you drive a heavier car. Small car economy is important, but one serious accident could make that economy look very questionable.

Performance:

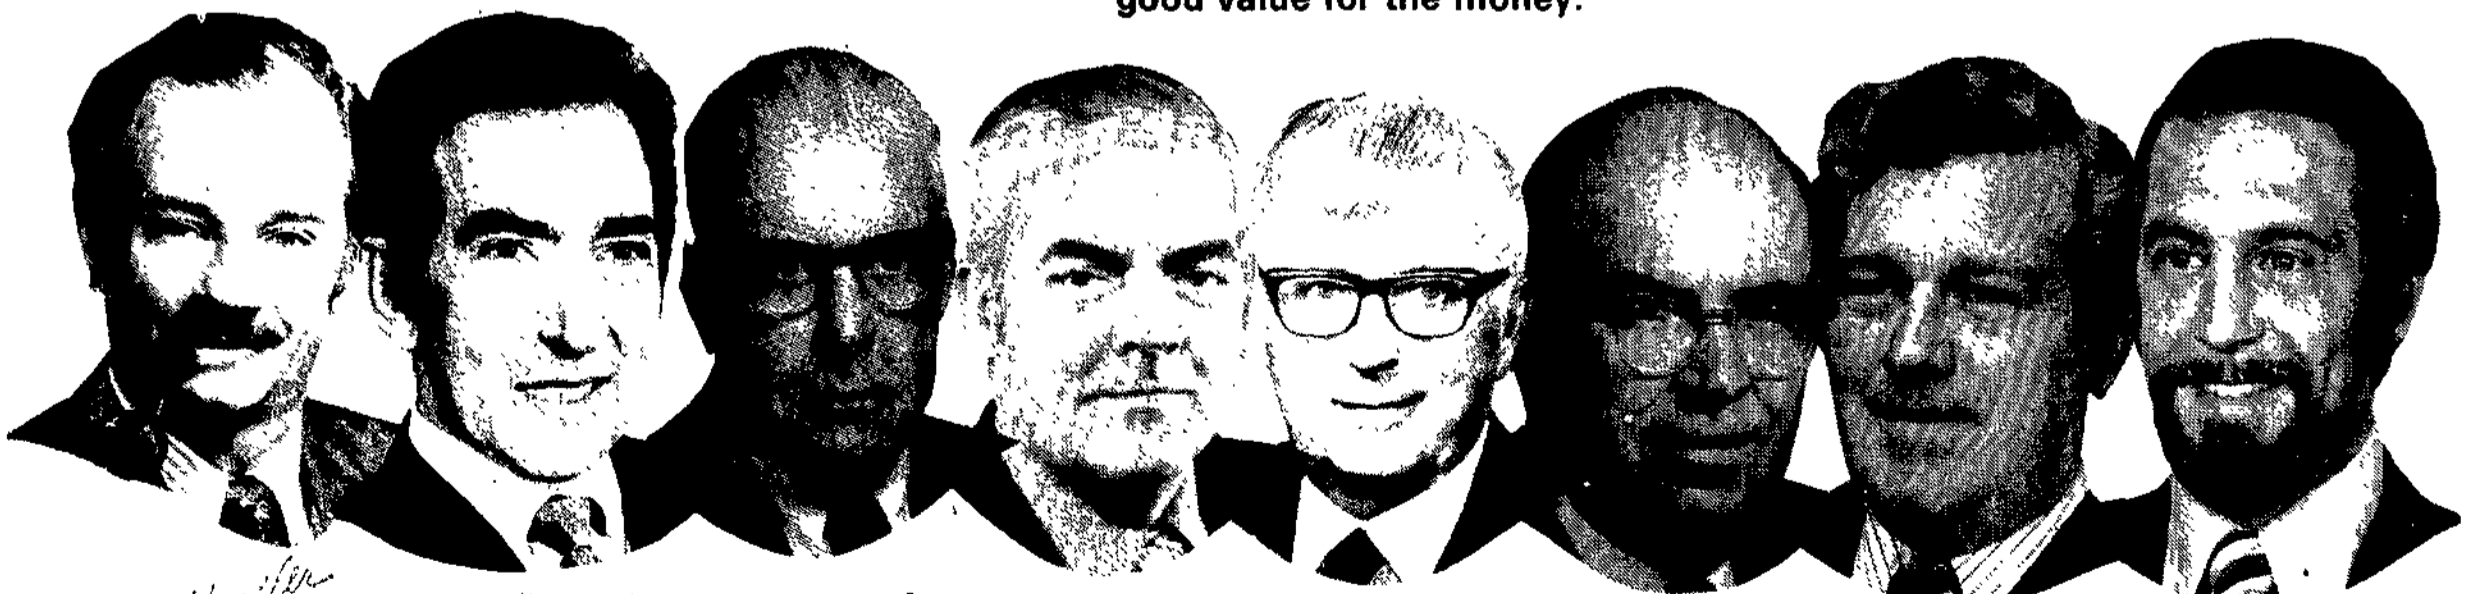

All cars perform well, especially the new 1974 cars. They have been designed and engineered to increase your driving safety, comfort and happiness. Cars get better every year and 1974 is no exception.

Comfort:

Everyone likes comfort when they drive and there is really no comfort comparison between a standard six car and a compact or mini-size car. If you must drive, it costs very little more to add a lot more comfort to your life.

And, Oh Yes Gas Mileage:

The general thinking is "the new 1974 bigger cars give POOR gas mileage." The fact is that gas mileage is greatly dependent upon the driving habits of the driver. If you drive in excess speeds, if you tend to accelerate quickly at stop signs and traffic lights, and if you like to "push" your car through traffic and get ahead of everyone, you will get poor mileage from any size car. A full size car engine can be tuned to allow your maximum mileage only if you observe economical driving habits. Now, add up all the factors and then let us help you decide on a new 1974 car . . . they're really a very good value for the money.

IF YOU WANT SUCCESS!

Real Success is a direct result of knowledge & hard work. I would be interested in talking to some young men who have been selling for 2 or 3 yrs. & have achieved some degree of success, yet are not satisfied with the results of their efforts.

By definition of a complete salesman is that individual who is a creative prospect who can make a professional demonstration & has the ability to close sales. Our Company has two protective territories open for two men who have gained some knowledge in direct sales & are not afraid of the sacrifices that success demands. The income available is considerable but you can be the judge of that.

Could you give me some information on Ben Murphy? I saw him in person and think he is the greatest! Please print his picture.

T.S.
Elk Grove Village

Ben Murphy

Ben has another series on his cancelled list, the latest being GRIFF in which he played the part of S. Michael Murdoch. We shouldn't have to worry much about his reappearing on the tube, because he has been in demand ever since he quit school to fulfill the demands of work. He was studying toward a M.A. when he co-starred in THE NAME OF THE GAME series.

Murphy's credits include roles in numerous TV series, guesting on MOD SQUAD, LOVE, AMERICAN STYLE, and MEDICAL CENTER. He has a couple of TV films to his credit also — "The Letters" and more recently "Runaway." Between studies and acting, Ben enjoys traveling and has filled several notebooks with his impressions. He one day wants to write a book about his travels. A bachelor, Ben likes swimming, skiing, horseback riding, and tennis.

Would you please print a picture of Chad Everett? Tell me where I can write to him. How old is he? Is he married? If so, what is his wife's name?

L.P.
Des Plaines

Of Scotch and English descent, Chad was born to Mr. and Mrs. Crampton in South Bend, Indiana on the 13th of June, 36 years ago. Everett excelled in sports during his high school days and received 15 college football scholarship offers! Though he enjoyed the sport, he already knew that the training schedule wouldn't permit time for college dramatics. His dedication to acting paid off when, during his senior year at Wayne University, he was selected as one of twelve

Chad Everett

Little Theatre actors to tour India in repertory for the U.S. State Department.

May, 1966, Chad married actress Shelby Grant in Tucson, where he was filming "Return of the Gunfighter." They live on a seven acre ranch with their daughters, Katherine Kerrie and Shannon Kimberly. You may send letters to Chad in care of CBS-TV, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90036.

Minsky made it all happen

Jason Robards and Britt Ekland star in "The Night They Raided Minsky's," a comedy on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" January 26 on the NBC Television Network. Elliott Gould and Norman Wisdom co-star in the 1968 United Artists release.

Bill Minsky (Gould), owner of New York's famous National Winter Garden Burlesque Theater, finds that in 1925, big shoe, baggy pants burlesque is languishing as an art form and consequently, his box office receipts are slipping badly.

Minsky's top comics, Raymond Paine (Robards) and Chick Williams (Wisdom) are too broke to offer their boss a loan, but Paine does come up with an idea: Rachel Schpitendavel (Miss Ekland), a stage-struck Amish girl who aspires to be a dancer, has approached Paine about appearing at Minsky's.

Impervious to the warnings of her strict father, Jacob (Harry Andrews), Rachel prepares to make her debut. When she is about to walk on stage, Jacob accidentally rips her dress. Undaunted, she goes on with unexpected results that are to revolutionize traditional burlesque.

"The Night They Raided Minsky's" was produced by Norman Lear and directed by William Friedkin from a screenplay by Arnold Schulman, Sidney Michaels and Lear.

Construction may start by April

Oak Creek condominiums' groundbreaking in spring

by JOE FRANZ

Groundbreaking for Phase III of the Oak Creek development in Buffalo Grove is scheduled for this spring. The project will consist of 154 condominiums.

The development is being built by Albert Frank, a local developer and principal of Gregg Builders, a construction firm. The project is patterned after Oak Creek West in Aurora.

The entire development, which was approved by the village in 1971, calls for 830 units on 40 acres bordered by Golfview Terrace on the north and west, Buffalo Grove Road on the east and the Ranch Mart and Dundee Road on the south.

THE FIRST TWO phases, which are now complete, consist of 330 apartments. The remainder of the project, which probably will take another three years to complete, will be divided between apartments and condominiums.

Kenneth Rodeck of Gregg Builders, told the commission Wednesday night his firm decided to switch to some condominiums because it found it was not making enough profit on the rental units. Although there have been no problems renting the units, he said the return on investment was not what was originally anticipated.

Phase III will consist of five two-story buildings on 11 acres fronting on Golfview Terrace. Like the apartments, all the units will have one and two bedrooms. The condominiums will be priced between $27,000 and $37,000, Rodeck said.

Although the condominiums will be "architecturally compatible" with the rest of the development, he said the units will be somewhat larger than the apartments. The exterior of the building will be done with southern antique face brick, with a mansard roof.

Rodeck said his firm hopes to begin construction of Phase III by April and have the models ready by mid-July. The first two phases of the development have recreation facilities, but Rodeck said the condominiums will have none.

RODECK WAS before the plan commission to receive final plat approval which will clear the way for construction of the third phase. However, before getting final approval, Gregg Builders must submit additional information to the plan commission concerning the final plan.

Three years ago when public hearings on the Oak Creek development were being held by the village, many residents opposed it. They opposed the density, height and traffic flow in the development.

The residents received some concessions regarding traffic flow and building heights, but the density of the project is still going to be about 22 units per acre. The project, upon completion, is expected to house nearly 2,000 persons.

Albert Frank built the Ranch Mart Shopping Center and the first 500 homes in Buffalo Grove. He also was instrumental in incorporating the village in 1958. He is a former village trustee.

CINDY SCHICK, a student at Cooper Junior High School in Buffalo Grove, completes a lineoleum block

print. Art activities are designed to encourage art appreciation by allowing students to explore all media.

Creativity colors their art classes

by JILL BETTNER

Inside these laboratories, familiar colors are mixed in strange concoctions, creating new colors. A hunk of pure white plaster is explored and striking shapes discovered. A knife is put to an ordinary block of linoleum and the kitchen flooring becomes a printing tool.

The experiments are endless in these workrooms because there are no limits to a child's imagination and no restrictions placed on his creativity in art classes in School Dist. 21.

Students are given the freedom to investigate media and materials to develop new uses for common items such as paper, paint, cloth, metal — anything available. Under their hands, they become unique art forms.

"I think the most important thing in teaching art to children this age — or any age — is that we're teaching them an entirely different way to think," said Myrtle Fitterer, art teacher at Cooper Junior High School in Buffalo Grove. "We teach certain principles, but they're encouraged to invent their own way of putting them together."

THE PROBLEM-SOLVING approach to art in Dist. 21 is intended to encourage students to use both their intellect and emotions to develop their own creations and evaluate the works of others.

"I guess you could say we're trying to teach kids how to see in a different way," said Len Presley, Dist. 21 art coordinator. "They have the ability — it's just a matter of bringing it out."

On the elementary level, part of the process of developing this awareness is to help students sharpen their senses, enabling them to take a closer look at their world.

Activities are designed to allow children to learn how experiences are interpreted through the senses and how they can be recreated in various art media.

IN BOTH ELEMENTARY and junior high classes, art is stressed as part of the total human experience. Frequently, for example, students study the art of a par-

Car Care owner drops dealership zoning bid

The owner of General Car Care on Dundee Road in Buffalo Grove has withdrawn his request for zoning to allow operation of an auto dealership on his property.

The owner, Joseph Bulgarelli, told village officials this week he probably will not need a zoning change because he will not, at least for the time being, get the Renault dealership he had requested. Renault Inc. recently has placed a moratorium on the granting of franchises.

In the event Bulgarelli is granted the franchise, officials said the zoning change probably will be considered by the village. Bulgarelli also has been attempting to get another car dealership for the site.

Bulgarelli requested the dealership because he has space on his property that is currently not being used. The car dealership would help supplement his income, he said.

The property is zoned for business with a special-use permit to allow the sale of tires, gasoline, auto parts and the operation of a car wash and auto repair center.

IF A CAR dealership is granted, Bulgarelli said three autos would be kept in a small showroom near the front of the property. Three gasoline pumps recently were removed to make room for the cars.

Several members of the plan commission have said the current zoning of the property probably will not allow an auto dealership. The zoning probably would have to be changed to B-4 (business), a less restrictive zoning. Most of the commissioners said they would be reluctant to change the zoning to that classification because it allows too many undesirable uses.

There is still another problem because B-4 zoning requires at least four acres and Bulgarelli's site is less than an acre. However, the village board could grant the zoning with a variation to allow the smaller lot or the owner could purchase additional property.

The plan commission was also fearful the area would become cluttered with new and used cars as a result of the dealership. Bulgarelli, however, has said he probably would be selling only a few cars a month.

THERE WOULD BE only about 12 autos parked on the premises at a time, he said, and there is room for 45. Most of the used cars would be sold to a wholesaler soon after being obtained and would not accumulate on the property, Bulgarelli said.

Several members of the commission said before agreeing to the dealership, they would want an agreement signed limiting the number of cars to be parked on the property.

Wife, son charged in conspiracy to murder husband

by STIRLING MORITA

A 31-year-old Schaumburg woman and her 13-year-old son were charged yesterday with conspiring to murder the woman's husband, U. S. Air Force Maj. Duane Swimley Sr., who reportedly is worth $500,000.

Charged with solicitation to commit murder were Darlene Swimley, 322 Meacham Rd., Schaumburg, and her son from a prior marriage, Joseph Enderle. Mrs. Swimley was arrested at about 11 a.m. yesterday in the parking lot of the Woodfield Theatre in the Woodfield Shopping Center after a month-long investigation by Schaumburg police, police reported. The youth was arrested at a nearby school.

A COOK COUNTY State's Attorney's investigator, posing as a "hit" man, had arranged to collect a $500 advance on a $5,000 "contract" at a meeting outside the theater, according to Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy. He said Mrs. Swimley passed $100 to the investigator and promised more at a later date.

Schaumburg police uncovered the alleged plot when a Schaumburg man contacted Youth Officer Terry McGraw and said a friend in Rochester, N. Y., told him by telephone that a male reported to be named Swimley had inquired about a murder contract, Conroy said.

Subsequent investigation followed, and police went to the state's attorney's office Wednesday for assistance and for a court order for "eavesdropping" on the Swimley residence.

THE INVESTIGATOR, Joseph Saladino, telephoned the residence and identified himself as the man in Rochester, Conroy said. The youth talked freely about the contract, and a female voice was heard in the background "coaching" the youth, the police chief said. A $5,000 contract was agreed upon in the conversation, authorities said.

Saladino arranged a meeting at the theater, giving a description of himself and taking a description of the vehicle to be driven to the shopping center, Conroy added.

McGraw, Schaumburg Sgt. John Barabas and Det. Tom Ostermann staked

Some firms offer matching service

by LEA TONKIN

Morning rush hour is no longer every man for himself. A new breed of commuters, with some encouragement from high gasoline prices and maybe from their employers, is getting together to pool it.

It's not unusual to see someone in the passenger seat of the car in front. Your headlights may even pick out a whole backseatful of poolers, scrunched shoulder-to-shoulder in the pre-dawn ride to work.

"I told them right from the start, that we have to be flexible," said one pool member. "And we turned out to be very compatible."

There's the problem of Wally Phillips vs. Newradio, the guy who likes a morning cigar vs. the non-smoker, and of course where to stop for a drink after work, but car poolers are finding in this time of energy crisis that riding with the guys isn't bad at all.

Figures are hard to come by, say Northwest suburban firms that now encourage cooperative commuting, but employee interest is growing. Top executives in many cases are leading the way.

AT THE MOTOROLA Inc. Communications Division plant in Schaumburg, a Ridefinder program has been in operation for three years. A computer is used to match up interested employees with others who live nearby and work the same schedule. "One man said he cut his gas bill by more than a third, by being in a car pool," said a Motorola representative.

No figures are available on how many employees recently joined car pools, but "quite a few executives and plant personnel" share rides. The company is discussing a possible joint car pool program with other firms in the vicinity.

At the Western Electric regional headquarters in Rolling Meadows, management offers car pooling information forms to interested employees. Some 125 persons signed up so far in the new Share-a-Ride program. "More will sign up, but they're waiting to see if new names are added to the lists," said a spokesman there. Employees can spot other workers who live in the vicinity through the use of a grid system on a map of the Chicago metropolitan area.

Manager Dick Lane at the Aristocrat of Chicago plant in Elk Grove Village reports car pooling and the use of mass transportation is boosted by the company.

AT THE KEMPER Insurance complex in Long Grove, heavy promotion of car pools brought a number of responses from employees. The personnel department works with potential car poolers to match riding habits. "We started last week to match up, so it will be another week before we can tell exactly how many people got into car pools," said a representative. Some 200 employees indicated interest.

William Krick, director of community relations for the Union 76 division of Union Oil Co. of Calif., Palatine, said a number of people have signed up for car pools in the past six weeks. The company leaves it up to the employee to make arrangements. Economics and hope, patriotism, prompt car pooling, said Krick.

United Air Lines, Inc., Elk Grove township, signs up potential drivers and riders. Special decals are offered to car poolers with three or more members, allowing them to use reserved parking space near the office facilities. Approximately 80 employees are recent car pool members.

Henry Koehler, director of administrative services at Universal Oil Products Co. in Des Plaines, said the company is considering the use of reserved parking spaces for car poolers. "We circulated a questionnaire a couple of months ago which had as part of it a question about car pools," he said. "The response was sufficient to lead us to display maps in the cafeteria area." Employees who signed up for car pools could arrange car pools on their own.

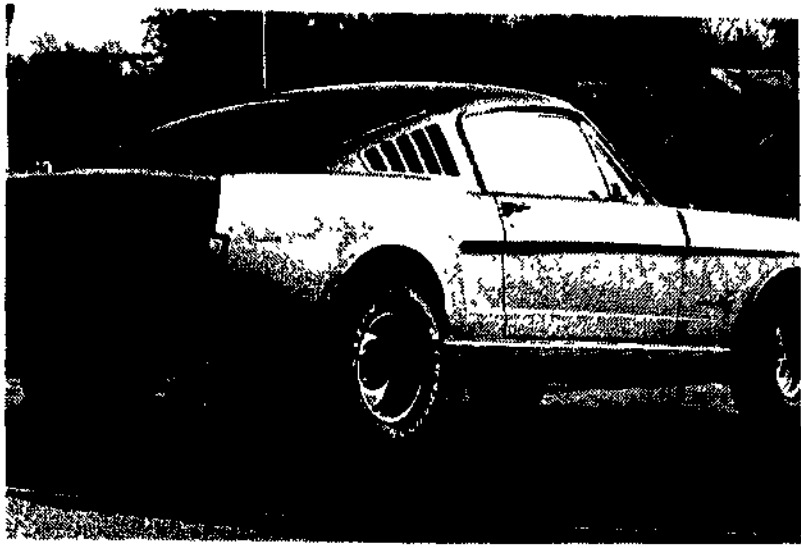

Rebates for gasoline expenses are offered to employees of Plymouth Minnesota, Inc. At the company's outlet in Arlington Heights, manager Roger Pegg said four out of six employees joined a car pool.

"VERY LITTLE response" was reported by Dick Reimann of FBK Realtors firm in Arlington Heights, to the company's offer of matching up area residents interested in car pooling. "We still

HIGHJACKERS OUTLAWED. The new state vehicle code has banned cars with highrise rear ends. Cars with more than a three-inch lift or

"rake" can no longer be operated on the streets. A hot rodding era passed with the new year.

Charges against youth in fatal mishap dropped

All charges against a Buffalo Grove youth stemming from a Dec. 2 fatal automobile accident in Mount Prospect were dropped this week in Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

The driver, Douglas A. Richter, 17, of 299 Hiawatha Dr., Buffalo Grove, had been charged with illegally crossing the center line of the road, failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident and driving with an unsafe (bald) tire. Killed in the accident was a passenger, Richard L. Hanan, 18, of Neshanic Station, N.J.

Richter told police he was northbound on River Road, near Woodview Drive, when he swerved to avoid hitting a deer which was crossing the highway. The car afterwards struck several trees, a fence and a telephone pole before overturning.

Richter was admitted to Holy Family Hospital after the accident and a second passenger, James O'Donnell, 18, of 11 Crestview Terr., Buffalo Grove, was not injured.

Two charged in murder plot

out the parking lot and took videotape film from an undercover truck, Conroy said.

THE VEHICLE described in the telephone conversation — a black 1972 Lincoln Continental Mark IV — drove in and passed the theater a couple times, the chief reported. The car stopped, and Saladino entered the vehicle, Conroy said.

The woman driving the car handed over $100 and promised to pay $400 of the advance today.

The woman reportedly said, "It's worth $5,000 to kill my husband." Swimley was reported to be in Germany. Police contacted the Air Force base in Rantoul, Ill., for a message relay to him.

AUTHORITIES DID not immediately know the motive for the alleged plot, but said Mrs. Swimley told Saladino Swimley was worth about a half million dollars.

The man in New York is from this area and called his friend in Schaumburg, who relayed it to police because "he did not know at the time who the victim was," Conroy said.

Mrs. Swimley has two other sons who were brought to the Schaumburg police station temporarily until police could find a place for them.

Joseph was taken to the Audy Home pending a hearing in Family Court.

Mrs. Swimley was being held in Cook County Jail in lieu of $15,000 bond pending an appearance 9:30 a.m. Feb. 28 in Cook County Circuit Court, 26th and California streets.

ticular period they are exploring in social studies class.

Sometimes, art activities are even done in other classes to illustrate how the same principles apply to more than one discipline. A fourth grade music class at Hawthorn School recently studied the concepts of contrast and rhythm. After a discussion of the way the two principles function in music, the class made ceramic bowls featuring designs that reflected contrasts and rhythms.

"We're trying to say that art is not a separate subject, nor is music a separate subject, but all areas are interwoven," Presley said. "It's the idea that we live with art."

ANOTHER OBJECTIVE of the art program is to acquaint children with the art of various cultures that have contributed to the American melting pot of art.

As part of the bilingual program in the district, Spanish children are studying the art in their cultural heritage. Currently, a group of bilingual Spanish students at Twain School in Wheeling are constructing a large papier mache bull in connection with culture studies.

The over-all goal of the entire art program is to develop in students a lifelong appreciation of all art forms, according to Presley.

"We're not training students to be artists, but intelligent consumers of art," he said. "By trying to do things themselves, I think they really learn what's involved and it increases their respect for artists and their work."

Sad news for hotrodders

Cars with 'raked' front ends illegal

by JOE SWICKARD

The hotrodders can start crying in their malts at the local drive-in.

The revised Illinois Vehicle Code, effective Jan. 1, has banned cars with the "raked" front ends and the jacked-up tails.

According to the Illinois Secretary of State's office, cars with modified suspension systems that raise the body more than three inches from its original position, or cars with more than a three-inch difference between the height of the front and rear bumper cannot be legally operated on the roads.

As a result of the new code, those hot cars with the high-rise rear ends that look like fuel-injected bloodhounds snuffing the pavement will be confined to garages, custom auto shows or the dragstrip.

Sgt. Jack Weber, of the Arlington Heights police traffic division, said his department was unaware of the new ruling. He said there may be some trouble enforcing the new law until the department receives formal notification.

OTHER POLICE departments said they were holding back until they received notification from the state.

Mount Prospect police said they "know about the law," but no tickets were being issued until they received the revised statutes.

Lt. Thomas Conte of the Wheeling police, said his men were not going to stop the raked cars until they get it in writing from the state.

However, the streetrodders had better steer clear of Buffalo Grove, because police there are aware of the law.

The law is being enforced "whenever we see them," said Sgt. Ronald Gozdecki, of the Buffalo Grove police. Palatine and Rolling Meadows police are aware of the new law. Rolling Meadows policemen each have a copy of the statute and are on the lookout for offenders.

SCULLY'S Kustom Shop of Wheeling does body customizing, but the manager said the raked fronts and jacked backs have fallen from favor.

"You'll see those in 'American Graffiti' when you go to the movie. They're not doing that too much any more. It was a fad and it's pretty much died out. You may see a couple like that once in a while, though," he said.

He said the extreme rake was "impractical."

"It would affect the steering and your visibility was messed up. It also threw your braking system out of line. On a damp day if you had to hit the brakes hard, you'd find your rear end in front of you," he said.

Scully's assessment of the custom-car scene is accurate. The February issue of Hot Rod magazine shows the only cars with the extreme profiles roaring down the dragstrip in the "funny car" class. Those drivers probably figure they would rather take their chances on the strips than battle the commuter's daily double.

Temporary 'cold-patch' method

City streets getting the once-over

by STEVE BROWN

Freeze and thaw, freeze and thaw — the constantly changing winter weather has local highway crews working at patching streets which look more like swiss cheese in recent days.

Road crews in Des Plaines have been working for over a week to patch all of the major potholes along both city and state streets.

"We have had about four or five trucks out every day patching the holes," said Wally Schaefer, the city's assistant public works commissioner.

He explained the crews have been using a "cold patch" process to fill in the holes and ruts in recent days.

They have been working regular routes of the city's major streets and also working where residents have called in complaints.

BUT THE PROCESS is a never-ending battle. Schaefer said the "cold patch" is only a temporary remedy.

"We try to make sure there is no water in the holes before applying the sealer, but this is hard and frequent weather changes can cause the material to pop right out."

"We just repeatedly try to keep the streets patched," he added.

While state highway crews have also been out working on local roads, Schaefer said the city also tries to fill holes there, too.

AREA DRIVERS may be bounding around a little more than usual recently. Heavy snow, sub-zero temperatures and last week's thaw have combined to be the major villain in the battle of the bounce.

"If we are lucky, the cold patch might last for a week," Schaefer said. He said the moisture that is frozen into the roadbed begins to seep through cracks as the temperature rises.

Continual traffic loads become the final blow to making the streets take on the appearance of a bombed out runway.

"Besides the potholes we sometimes get a wash board effect," Schaefer said. The problem gives drivers the feeling they are taking the Belgian blocks test for a tire company.

"When this happens the crews have to stop every few feet to fill in the ruts," Schaefer said.

PERMANENT RELIEF to many of the roadway problems probably will not come until spring, when the temperature rises enough to dry out the pavement.

"We will put hot blacktop material in the holes when the weather warms. This will last longer," he said.

"I sure hope that comes soon," he added.

Wife and son charged in plot to slay husband

by STIRLING MORITA

A 31-year-old Schaumburg woman and her 13-year-old son were charged yesterday with conspiring to murder the woman's husband, U. S. Air Force Maj. Duane Swimley Sr., who reportedly is worth $500,000.

Charged with solicitation to commit murder were Darlene Swimley, 322 Meacham Rd., Schaumburg, and her son from a prior marriage, Joseph Enderle.

Mrs. Swimley was arrested at about 11 a.m. yesterday in the parking lot of the Woodfield Theatre in the Woodfield Shopping Center after a month-long investigation by Schaumburg police. police reported. The youth was arrested at a nearby school.

A COOK COUNTY State's Attorney's investigator, posing as a "hit" man, had arranged to collect a $500 advance on a $5,000 "contract" at a meeting outside the theater, according to Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy. He said Mrs. Swimley passed $100 to the investigator and promised more at a later date.

Schaumburg police uncovered the alleged plot when a Schaumburg man contacted Youth Officer Terry McGraw and said a friend in Rochester, N. Y., told him by telephone that a male reported to be named Swimley had inquired about a murder contract, Conroy said.

Subsequent investigation followed, and police went to the state's attorney's office Wednesday for assistance and for a court order for "eavesdropping" on the Swimley residence.

THE INVESTIGATOR, Joseph Saladino, telephoned the residence and identified himself as the man in Rochester, Conroy said. The youth talked freely about the contract, and a female voice was heard in the background "coaching" the youth, the police chief said. A $2,000 contract was agreed upon in the conversation, authorities said.

Saladino arranged a meeting at the theater, giving a description of himself

Some firms offer matching service

by LEA TONKIN

Morning rush hour is no longer every man for himself. A new breed of commuters, with some encouragement from high gasoline prices and maybe from their employers, is getting together to pool it.

It's not unusual to see someone in the passenger seat of the car in front. Your headlights may even pick out a whole backseatful of poolers, scrunched shoulder-to-shoulder in the pre-dawn ride to work.

"I told them right from the start, that we have to be flexible," said one pool member. "And we turned out to be very compatible."

There's the problem of Wally Phillips vs. Newsradio, the guy who likes a morning cigar vs. the non-smoker, and of course where to stop for a drink after work, but car poolers are finding in this time of energy crisis that riding with the guys isn't bad at all.

Figures are hard to come by, say Northwest suburban firms that now encourage cooperative commuting, but employee interest is growing. Top executives in many cases are leading the way.

AT THE MOTOROLA Inc. Communications Division plant in Schaumburg, a Ridefinder program has been in operation for three years. A computer is used to match up interested employees with others who live nearby and work the same schedule. "One man said he cut his gas bill by more than a third, by being in a car pool," said a Motorola representative.

No figures are available on how many employees recently joined car pools, but "quite a few executives and plant personnel" share rides. The company is discussing a possible joint car pool program with other firms in the vicinity.

At the Western Electric regional headquarters in Rolling Meadows, management offers car pooling information forms to interested employees. Some 125 persons signed up so far in the new Share-a-Ride program. "More will sign up, but they're waiting to see if new names are added to the lists," said a spokesman there. Employees can spot other workers who live in the vicinity through the use of a grid system on a map of the Chicago metropolitan area.

Manager Dick Lane at the Aristocrat of Chicago plant in Elk Grove Village reports car pooling and the use of mass transportation is boosted by the company.

AT THE KEMPER Insurance complex in Long Grove, heavy promotion of car pools brought a number of responses from employees. The personnel department works with potential car poolers to match riding habits. "We started last week to match up, so it will be another week before we can tell exactly how many people got into car pools," said a representative. Some 200 employees indicated interest.

William Krick, director of community relations for the Union 76 division of Union Oil Co. of Calif., Palatine, said a number of people have signed up for car pools in the past six weeks. The company leaves it up to the employee to make arrangements. Economics and hopefully, patriotism, prompt car pooling, said Krick.

United Air Lines, Inc., Elk Grove township, signs up potential drivers and riders. Special decals are offered to car poolers with three or more members, allowing them to use reserved parking space near the office facilities. Approximately 80 employees are recent car pool members.

Henry Koehler, director of administrative services at Universal Oil Products Co. in Des Plaines, said the company is considering the use of reserved parking spaces for car poolers. "We circulated a questionnaire a couple of months ago which had as part of it, a question about car pools," he said. "The response was sufficient to lead us to display maps in the cafeteria area." Employees who signed up for car pools could arrange car pools on their own.

Rebates for gasoline expenses are offered to employees of Plymouth Minnesota, Inc. At the company's outlet in Arlington Heights, manager Roger Pegg said four out of six employees joined a car pool. "VERY LITTLE response" was reported by Dick Reimann of FBK Realtors firm in Arlington Heights, to the company's offer of matching up area residents interested in car pooling. "We still

"POOLING IT" is economical. To help employees form car pools, Motorola Inc. has started a Ridefinder service. Hal Wand and Debbie Cooper check employee applications.

Employees, manager locked in freezer

Restaurant robbed of $460

Two gunmen escaped with $460 in cash after robbing a Des Plaines drive-in restaurant and locking two employees and a manager in a freezer before they fled.

According to reports, the bandits, one wearing a ski mask, entered the Burger King, 860 Elmhurst Rd., at about 9:40 p.m. Wednesday through an unlocked rear door.

The restaurant manager, Jerome Abend, told police the men were carrying pistols and ordered two other employees to the back of the store. After collecting $5 from the employees, the bandits forced Abend to hand over money from a cash register.

The robbers then forced the workers into a freezer but allowed them to take their coats with them.

DES PLAINES police Lt. Lee Alfano said yesterday the bandits stuck a pin-like object through a hole in the handle of the door locking the victims inside.

They freed themselves after 10 minutes, however, by managing to work the object loose.

One of the holdup men was described to police as about 5 feet 5 inches tall, 30 years old, weighing 170 pounds.

Police suspect the man may have been wearing a black hair wig and a false mustache.

The masked gunman was said to be about 5 feet 8 inches tall, 30 to 40 years old and weighing about 220 pounds. Police said he wore a blue jacket and green pants.

A MOUNT PROSPECT policeman in the area shortly before the holdup was reported to have seen a man matching the description of one of the gunmen in a van outside the drive-in.

Wednesday's holdup marks the second drive-in restaurant in Des Plaines to be robbed this year. Henry's drive-in, Mannheim and Higgins roads, was robbed Jan. 11 by two men who fled in a late model auto with $80 in cash.

Two Chicagoans, Henry Cellak, 25, of 1616 Wood, and Chester Kanafoski, 24, of 1913 Cortland, were later arrested and charged with the holdup.

Township fire losses jump by 163%

Fire losses in the North Maine Fire Protection District more than doubled last year from those of 1972, according to figures released this week.

Statistics showed an increase of 163 per cent in losses totaling $139,638 for 1973, compared with $53,000 in losses for 1972.

The district serves approximately 28,000 residents in unincorporated Maine Township.

Chief Dale Moore cited one blaze last year that caused $25,000 damage as one reason for the jump, but he also said increased value of buildings in the area was a factor in rising fire losses.

"If you break it down," said Moore, "you'd find we have a very low fire loss among people in the district. When we started out here four years ago, we had only about 12,000 people, but now we have more people and more construction," he said.

TOTAL ALARMS answered by North Maine firefighters jumped only a slight 2.11 per cent from 687 in 1972 to the 1973 level of 701. Of that figure, about 43 per cent or 306 were ambulance alarms. Ambulance alarms showed a 7 per cent drop for the two yearly periods.

Moore said his men answered 281 calls for alarms including grass, brush fires and fire investigations.

Also answered were 13 alarms for single-family residential fires while 88 calls were answered for blazes in apartment buildings in the township last year.

North Maine vehicles were sent out to assist other departments on mutual aid on 13 occasions last year, according to Moore.

Two charged in murder plot and taking a description of the vehicle to be driven to the shopping center, Conroy added.

McGraw, Schaumburg Sgt. John Barabas and Det. Tom Ostermann staked out the parking lot and took videotape film from an undercover truck, Conroy said.

THE VEHICLE described in the telephone conversation — a black 1972 Lincoln Continental Mark IV — drove in and passed the theater a couple of times, the chief reported. The car stopped, and Saladino entered the vehicle, Conroy said.

The woman driving the car handed over $100 and promised to pay $400 of the advance today.

The woman reportedly said, "It's worth $5,000 to kill my husband."

Swimley was reported to be in Germany. Police contacted the Air Force base in Rantoul, Ill., for a message relay to him.

AUTHORITIES DID not immediately know the motive for the alleged plot, but said Mrs. Swimley told Saladino Swimley was worth about a half million dollars.

The man in New York is from this area and called his friend in Schaumburg, who relayed it to police because "he did not know at the time who the victim was," Conroy said.

Mrs. Swimley has two other sons who were brought to the Schaumburg police station temporarily until police could find a place for them.

Joseph was taken to the Audy Home pending a hearing in Family Court.

Mrs. Swimley was being held in Cook County Jail in lieu of $15,000 bond pending an appearance 9:30 a.m. Feb. 28 in Cook County Circuit Court, 28th and California streets.

Vote at meeting on new Oakton site evenly split

Twenty-seven Oakton Community College students, faculty and staff members came to hear the college's plans for a permanent campus Wednesday night. Their votes divided almost evenly between two sites now being considered by college officials.

Thirteen of those present said they want the college to build on the present campus at 7900 N. Nagle in Morton Grove. The 14 others want the campus in an unincorporated area in the northwest corner of the college district.

The audience asked to vote after hearing an hour-long presentation by college officials on the pros and cons of both sites. The college board of trustees will choose one of the sites when it meets Feb. 19.

THE BOARD scheduled Wednesday's meeting to hear the views of Oakton students and staff on the two sites and will hold a similar meeting for the public and for local government officials on Feb. 6. Oakton plans to go before the Illinois Community College Board to seek approval of a site on March 22.

College Pres. William Koehnline said attendance at Wednesday's meeting was low because the third night of classes at the beginning of the semester is "an awkward night to get college people out."

The temporary campus would be expanded to 23 acres if the college decides to build there. It is located close to the center of population in the college district and would cost the college about $18.4 million.

The other site, located between Central and Golf roads east of the Des Plaines River in unincorporated Maine Township, is 170 acres. Because it is in the river's flood plain, the college would have to build a 20-acre retention pond to develop the property. The site is located in the northwest corner of Oakton's district and would cost the college about $17.5 million.

Fire guts vacant house; arson probe under way

Fire early yesterday gutted a vacant, two-story wooden house at 746 Fourth Ave., and caused an undetermined amount of damage. Fire officials suspect arson as the cause of the blaze, saying evidence of two separate blazes was found.

According to reports, the flames broke out shortly before 2 a.m. in the building owned by a Des Plaines man, William Rieck, 725 Fifth Ave.

Firemen said neighbors discovered flames coming from the building early yesterday and notified Rieck, who turned in the alarm.

The house, reportedly being used for storage was enveloped in flames and had burned through the roof when about 20 firefighters from two Des Plaines stations arrived.

The blaze was extinguished less than two hours later and according to reports, traces of fires being set on the lower and upper levels of the house were found.

An arson investigation was underway and a damage estimate was being compiled yesterday.

Catherine Ward earns her degree

Catherine Ward, wife of Des Plaines Ald. Richard Ward (8th), will receive her college degree this Sunday.

Mrs. Ward, who will graduate from De Lourdes College, had her education interrupted in 1960 by marriage. She had attended Rosary College.

She has earned her bachelor's degree in elementary education. She will be teaching at Stevenson School in Dist. 63.

The Wards have three children and reside at 1410 Miami Ln.

Township OKs bus purchase for seniors

The Elk Grove Township Board, encouraged by the early success of its senior-citizen bus service program, has approved the purchase of a bus prior to making the service a permanent township program.

The board tentatively approved $6,980 to buy a 14-passenger "mini-bus" from Lattot Chevrolet in Arlington Heights.

The township has been renting a mini-bus and driver since Dec. 1 in an effort to test the demand for a senior citizens' bus service. To date, the service has averaged about 30 to 35 riders a week.

Township Supervisor Richard Hall said the township will hire its own driver, once the bus arrives. The senior-citizen bus service now operates five days a week, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Township citizens over 65 can arrange to be picked up at their home by the bus, by calling 437-0300.

The township board also has approved a resolution against the proposed Regional Transit Authority.

The resolution cites the unlimited taxing power of the RTA governing board; the private, uncompetitive sale of up to $500 million in bonds which could be sold by the RTA, and the disproportionate share of revenue which would go to subsidize the Chicago Transit Authority as some of the reasons for not supporting RTA.

The resolution further states the township board will recommend township voters vote "no" in the RTA referendum March 19.

Rape charge dismissed against Wisconsin man

A rape charge against a Green Bay, Wis., man was dismissed yesterday after a hearing in Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Sven Ebsen, 35, had been arrested and charged by Des Plaines police last November and appeared yesterday before Associate Judge Marvin J. Peters who ordered the charge dropped.

Ebsen had been accused of assaulting a Des Plaines woman in her apartment.

Police said the two had met each other through a business contact. He had been staying at the Des Plaines Holiday Inn, Mannheim Road and Touhy Ave., a few days after the woman reported the incident to police.

East, North at home tonight

Victories a rarity for the Maines

by MIKE KLEIN
You've really got to love basketball to pay admission for Maine West at Niles East, Highland Park at Maine East or New Trier West at Maine North.

But if you're wild about the hoop game, those three contests appear on tonight's Central Suburban schedule, all beginning at approximately 8 p.m.

At least one figures to be a blowout with New Trier West a decided favorite over Maine North. The other two games involve four teams going no place.

New Trier's Cowboys are a much classier basketball team than an 8-6 record would indicate. Give Mel Sheets credit for pulling his club through a rugged nonconference schedule.

The Cowboys ended their non-CSL season at 3-5, beating Evanston, Peoria Spalding and Adlai Stevenson. Losses were to Conant, New Trier East, Proviso East, Aurora East and East Leyden.

It's been within the league that New Trier West has proven you can get tough by playing tough people. The Cowboys are 5-1, having lost by just a point to Glenbrook North which is 14-1 overall, the league's best mark.

That places New Trier second behind GBN and Maine South who are undefeated with six conference wins apiece.

Sheets, a sophomore cage coach for one year at Glenbrook North, has brought New Trier along through teamwork and balanced scoring.

If they have a star, it's probably 6-foot-7 center Gunnar Thors who averages 14.5 points in league games. Right behind is guard Al Bartelstein (one of few white kids who can grow a decent Afro) at 14.3 per game.

But lately, a cross-country runner who hails from Cincinnati, Ohio, has been setting off the scoreboard. Six-foot-four junior Paul McCosker has 16 and 20 points in New Trier's most recent CSL games. His average is up to 12.4.

Maine North, which long ago surpassed the luxury of being only snakebit, is trying to start over with just eight games left before regionals.

Now without junior center Derek Brown who will re-enroll after high school in Chicago, coach Jerry Nelson says, "We wanted to use Highland Park and Glenbrook South to square off in the conference. Our goals were that first division and they still are."

The Norsemen lost to Highland Park, 73-47, and Glenbrook South, 68-59, sending their conference down to 1-5. They are 3-10 overall, having beaten Schaumburg, Niles West and Rolling Meadows.

The most encouraging note about North's program is that the sophomores are 5-1 in CSL games and 7-5 overall. The frosh are among Central Suburban leaders. Of course, Maine withdraws from the league after this season.

Maine West carries its ongoing search for stability and a second forward over to Niles East, a club that needs only one win to reach .500. Maine if 4-11 overall, including Tuesday night's 12-point loss at Wheeling, and Niles is 7-8. Maine, with a 2-4 CSL record, has a one-game lead on Niles' Trojans who've beaten only Niles West.

The Warriors are an incredibly puzzling team. They look huge from all sides and will occasionally play a good game, such as their four-point loss to New Trier East.

But their deficits have prevailed too often. Dan Myska, their smallest guard, has great quickness and enormous desire. But he's not an offensive threat. Glen Heiden, the other guard, is a tremendous outside shooter but refuses to go inside and sometimes lacks defense.

Gosh knows where they'd be without Steve Zuccarini, the 6-2 junior forward who's given the Warriors 17.6 points per game, many rebounds and a never give-up attitude.

Doug Myers, the 6-9 center, has worked hard, perhaps too hard, because it often appears that he's playing "tight."

It's been that other forward that has been unsettled all year and will likely stay that way. Head coach Caston Freeman has tried John Clark, Tom Grueter, Bill Makuch and John O'Connor. There have been sporadic bright spots for all, but consistency from none.

Highland Park is looking for someone to start a winning streak against and takes that search to Maine East. The Demons will have a weakened Keith Larson, if he plays at all.

Larson, their 6-3 senior guard, contracted flu almost two weeks ago and hasn't shaken it fully. He's also lost about six pounds.

Highland Park shared a CSL title with Maine South and New Trier West last year. Thus far, they're just 2-4 in CSL games and 6-8 overall.

"It's funny, I won a title with a bunch of individuals who don't care about the team," said head coach Chuck Schramm. "Here, we've got a bunch who think and worry about the team."

"I don't think they could adjust when we lost the big kid (Victor Venturi) who could hustle. You can't beat hustle. And he's quick as a cat!"

Venturi sustained a broken wrist in December and could have his cast removed soon. Despite it, he's remained in practice. "If it wasn't for the rule, I'd play him in a cast. He's that good in practice," Schramm said.

My weekend picks: Had a perfect 6-0 mark last week and am 25-10 on the season. Tonight, make it New Trier West 25 over Maine North, Maine South 15 over Deerfield, Highland Park eight over Maine East, Niles North 18 over Niles West, Glenbrook North 20 over Glenbrook South and Maine West four over Niles East.

In a game next Tuesday, we'll take Glenbrook North eight over Highland Park.

East captures track double duel

Maine East's varsity trackmen won the mile relay plus six individual firsts last weekend during a double dual indoor sweep. The Blue Demons scored 80 points, Riverside-Brookfield 52 and Niles West 30.

Mike Kallel, Scott Peota, Sam Rea and Joe Zimmerman awarded the Demons their final first place points with a 3:37.0 effort in the mile relay.

Previously, Kallel had won the 50-yard dash (5.8) and Zimmerman was an easy winner in the 440 (53.7).

Maine's other winners were Mike Haber in pole vault (12-4), Brian Nathanson in long jump (19-3), Mike Smith in high jump (6-3) and Jerry Melinger in shot put (47-8½).

The Blue Demons also won on both lower levels. Sophomore scores were Maine East 87, Niles West 45 and Riverside-Brookfield three. On the frosh level, it was Maine 70, Niles West 40 and Riverside-Brookfield 24.

Can Schmelzer, Boesen take Hawks to Champaign? Burmaster hopes not

"You see that man standing over there. He's the reason this team wins basketball games." — Jerry Jones, March 9, 1973.

by MIKE KLEIN

An innocent question about team play prompted that remark last winter when Jones began explaining Maine South's regional championship victory over Notre Dame.

In plain terms, Jones credited Bernie Brady, the Hawks' only head basketball coach to date, with success that has brought Maine South a 106-48 record since the doors first swung open in 1964.

But seven days later, all the laughter died in sorrow, as Lance Rentzel might document it, for the Hawks were beaten in sectional finals by Niles West.

The sorrow had stricken many times before. Five Maine South teams have reached sectional finals but only one has been successful.

Last year seemed a great opportunity for the only trip that really matters in Illinois prep basketball — the trip to Champaign. "I thought we had a good shot, I really did," Brady remembered this week. "I think this year we've got almost as good a shot."

The Maine South Hawks, using a new double post offense of Pete Boesen and Pete Schmelzer, are back. They're 13-1 overall, having lost only to Aurora East, and are ranked third statewide by United Press International.

But are the Hawks for real? Or will they choke again? Listen to Highland Park's Chuck Schramm:

"The only team we've played that could stay with Maine South is Waukegan," he said. "We played our best against those two clubs and they still beat us."

Highland Park was an 86-53 loser to Maine South just four days before Christmas. Waukegan beat the Little Giants, 76-61 last Saturday.

"You know, I thought Maine South was really tough," Schramm continued. "Then we saw this Waukegan. The way that Jerome Whitehead is going, you'd think he's Kareem Abdul-Jabbar."

Whitehead is the 6-foot-8 senior center (better than LaGrange-Lyons' Owen Brown, says Maine East's Paul McClelland) who's made Waukegan a potential super-sectional finalist. And on Saturday, Feb. 2, Whitehead will display his awesome talents at Maine South.

Now listen to Jack Burmaster of Evanston who was a three point loser to Maine South, also last Saturday:

"I'd be hard pressed to rate them against Proviso East . . . or Bloom and East Aurora which I haven't seen," Burmaster began. "They're not a flashy team but fundamentally sound and they attacked out defenses without much hesitation."

Burmaster was especially chagrined when told the Hawks and Evanston will both feed into the Arlington Sectional if they win regional titles, Maine at Notre Dame and Evanston at Niles East.

"I'm really sorry to hear that," Burmaster added. "I thought maybe Maine South would be going somewhere else."

Brady, the good people of Park Ridge and many Central Suburban fans thought he'd get the Hawks downstate last year. There seemed to be so much veteran talent, starting with Jones and filtering down through Bob Westman, Bill Harback and Tony Riebel to the young sophomore center — Boesen.

And as Brady said last winter, "We've got a golden opportunity . . . We don't have to beat the super ball team to get downstate. That's the way I feel about it right now."

But along came Niles West, beating Maine South by a single point, 59-57, in Elk Grove sectional finals. The dream was shattered. Again.

Perhaps a late season 15-point loss to Glenbrook North was credited with less importance than it really deserved. Today, Brady says, "Last year, the kids let down occasionally. That's why we lost to Glenbrook. I don't think for another mental letdown."

"These kids hustle, they fight, they come up with some key baskets and good passes. They don't seem to rattle." And he'll prefer it stays that way when the Hawks seek their seventh Central Suburban win tonight at Deerfield.

The Hawks built their current success against an ambitious schedule. Indeed, they'd probably hold the top UPI state ranking except for that 71-64 loss to No. 2 ranked Aurora East.

The Tomcats had been beaten for their only defeat before facing Maine South. And Chicago Heights-Bloom, UPI's top team, would lose in January to Moline. Had the Hawks beaten East Aurora, you can bet the rankings would read differently.

But it has been an ambitious schedule, one in which the "breathers" have been against CSL foes such as Glenbrook South (85-49) and Niles East (74-47).

The Hawks challenged and beat 1973 state runner-up New Trier East by 14 points in their second game. Elgin, East Leyden and now Evanston were all cast aside during major non-conference tests. Waukegan, a sleeping giant, lies ahead for next Saturday.

How has it come about? Especially when some critics have said, before pleading "No quote," that the Hawks don't have enough talent beyond 6-foot-8 Boesen and 6-7 Schmelzer.

"We've put an accent on defense and that's been one of our strong points," Brady said. His club is giving only 54.3 points per game.

And the veteran coach, now in his 20th varsity year and somewhere near 400 career wins, takes exception to talk about the ballplayers who accompany Boesen and Schmelzer — kids like Tim Bopp, Denry Kladis, Bob McCarthy and Rich Magnuson.

"Last year, if we had a weakness, it was that," Brady said when asked about perimeter shooting. "This year, we've got some good shooters. I think we're at almost 50 per cent in field goals and right near 70 on free throws."

But when you penetrate below the surface, there is Boesen. And there is Schmelzer.

Boesen, the junior who transferred into Maine South last year from Loyola Academy, is a deadly offensive baseline player who's averaged 22.5 points in CSL games. He's a bonafide All-State candidate.

However, people have quickly learned the name "Pete Schmelzer." The big, wiry kid was named Most Valuable Player out at the East Aurora holiday tournament.

And Highland Park's Schramm termed Schmelzer, "... the best big man from the outside that I've seen in a long time."

Said Evanston's Burmaster: "It seems I'm getting numb to the name Schmelzer. There's a number on the sophomore team (Russ), and there was an older one (Greg). You come to identify Maine South with the name Schmelzer."

Hands down, Boesen and Schmelzer are the Central Suburban's best big men. There is a wide difference between them and the others.

But are they enough? What about the others? And what about 186-48? And 13-1? And can they make the state tourney?

The Hawks' regional includes Notre Dame. They could bump up against Wheeling, Arlington, Forest View, Hersey, Niles North or Evanston in sectionals.

Waukegan could lie in wait a second time at super-sectionals. Or New Trier East . . . Glenbrook North . . . Zion-Benton . . . New Trier West . . . or North Chicago.

It is, as they say, a long road to Champaign.

Maine West tankers in 109-59 win

Maine West won both the relay and six individual freestyle during a 109-59 win over Niles West in Central Suburban League varsity swimming.

It was last weekend's only conference win by local CSL teams. Glenbrook North beat Maine East, 102-70, and Glenbrook South defeated Maine North, 109-60.

George Erickson, Jim Stenstrom, Bill Sump and Stewart Sealholm gave Maine West a good start with their 1:56.6 win in 200 medley relay.

And Maine finished up with a 3:50.7 win in 400 freestyle relay behind Dave Gaffrick, Sealholm, Tom Ptach and Paul Dyer.

Ptach, a freshman, won both long freestyles, taking the 200-yarder in 2:03.9 and the new 500-yard freestyle in 5:36.1. He was Maine's only double winner.

Other firsts were by Sump in 100 butterfly (1:04.3), Dyer in 100 freestyle (55.5), Erickson in 100 backstroke (1:04.7) and Stenstrom in 100 breaststroke (1:12.7).

Wayne Westman was Maine East's only double winner during its 102-70 loss to Glenbrook North. Westman took the 200 individual medley (2:13.3) and 100 backstroke (1:00.2).

Other Blue Demon wins were by diver Chris Dickson with 151.20 points and Scott Strauss in 100 butterfly (59.0). East captured one relay, the 400 freestyle in 3:38.0, behind Strauss, Rick Reeve, Carl Anderson and Matt Kane.

John Monaghan set two school records during Maine North's 109-60 loss to Glenbrook South. Monaghan swam the 200 individual medley in 2:13.6 and the 100 butterfly in 57.9, winning both events.

Maine North's other individual winners were Mike Vernon in 50 freestyle (24.9) and Don Polz in 100 breaststroke. The Norsemen took the opening 200 medley relay in 1:50.9 behind Larson, Polz, Monaghan and Vernon.

Maine West hosts girls' gym quad

Maine East's varsity girls' gymnastics team will carry an 8-1 record into this afternoon's Maine Township Quad, their final tune-up for the Central Suburban championships next weekend at Highland Park.

The quad, for Maines East, West, North and South, will begin at 2 p.m., today at West. The hosts have compiled a 4-2 season record and North is 0-6.

Aside from an 8-1 record, the only defeat to Highland Park, Maine East won the Niles West Invitational. Other entrants at that meet included Highland Park and Deerfield, expected to be Maine's toughest competition next weekend at CSL finals.

Maine East's lineup today will include

Little action taken in year on village's health survey

by JERRY THOMAS

More than a year after completion of a comprehensive health survey and health plan for Elk Grove Village, both studies and money to implement the plan sit gathering dust.

The survey was received enthusiastically by the village board in 1973 when it was reviewed.

Board members discussed possible financing with federal revenue sharing funds in addition to village funds, however, none were earmarked for such use from the village's last allocation.

George Coney, Elk Grove Village finance director, said the village is beginning to compile budget information for the coming 1974-75 fiscal year and the health plan should be included.

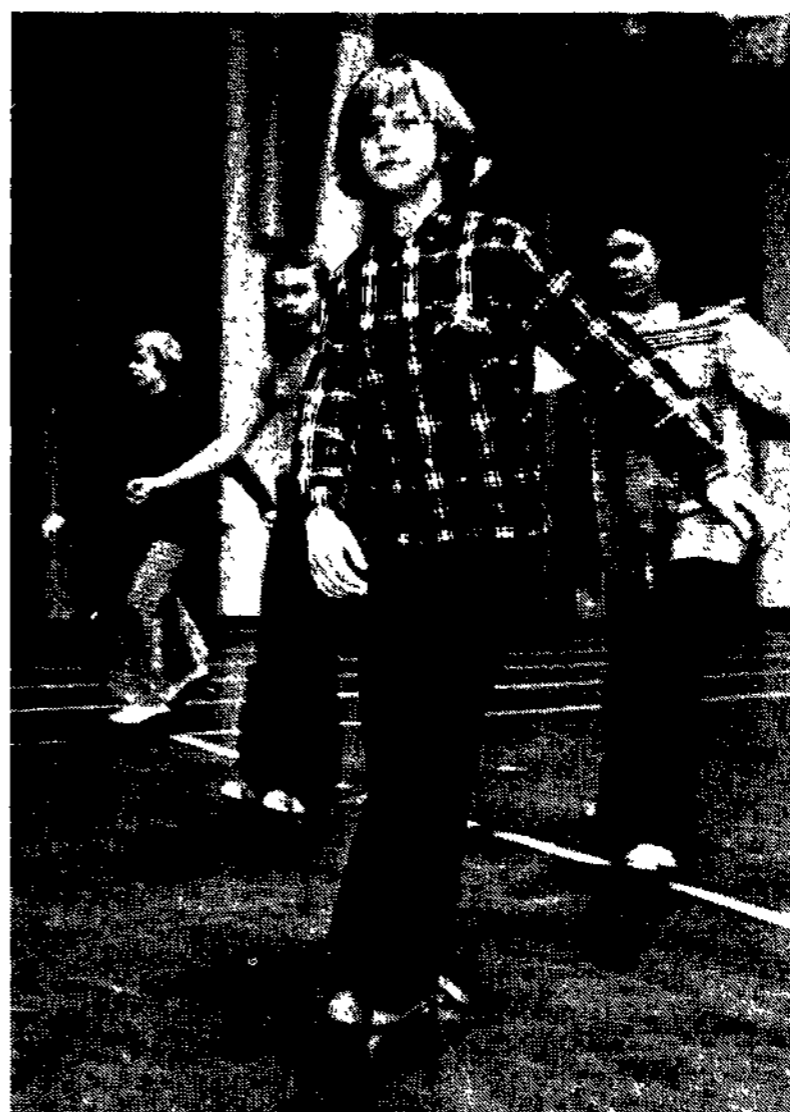

DONNA FARLEY, A member of the village board of health and chief author of the survey that has been praised as a model study of a community's present and expected health needs, said she "is impatient but not critical of the delay."

"When we handed over the survey to the village board we knew money to implement it had to be budgeted and a health coordinator hired," she said. "That takes time," she added.

In April, 1973, board members budgeted $10,000 for the hiring of a health coordinator.

"At that point the money was there, but, Village Mgr. Charles Willis had to write up a job description for the new Mental health center plans 5 seminars

Plans for five seminars, covering a variety of topics, have been announced by the Elk Grove-Schaumburg Townships Mental Health Center.

The first seminar will be Saturday, Feb. 16, at Collins School, 407 S. Summit Dr., Schaumburg, according to Jordan Rosen, executive director of the center.

The first seminar, "Understanding Child Development — The Years From Three to Five," will be conducted by Margery Fridstein, director of mental health education at the Irene Josselyn Clinic in Northfield.

According to Rosen, the clinic will be geared toward teachers of preschool and nursery school classes. "Community members who have children in that age bracket are also welcome to come," Rosen added.

The workshop will start at 9 a.m. with coffee and rolls. The seminar will run from 9:30 a.m. to noon, according to Rosen.

Preregistration is necessary and there will be a $1 fee to cover registration costs. To register or for further information contact the mental health center at 593-6690.

The seminars will run once a month till June according to Rosen. Tentative topics for other seminars include rearing children; death, grieving and mourning; and communication in marriage.

Theater 'giveaway' coming?

Pancoe reaffirms his offer to give parks his Cinema

by BOB GALLAS

The Elk Grove Park District may have failed in its attempts to construct an ice skating facility in the village but it may be getting something most park districts don't have — its own movie theater.

Walter Pancoe, owner of the Elk Grove Cinema, yesterday reaffirmed his offer to "give" his theater to the village or a connected agency, such as the Elk Grove Park District.

Pancoe charged earlier this month he had been "coerced" into canceling a showing of the X-rated movie, "The Devil in Miss Jones," by village officials. An anti-obscenity ordinance prohibiting the showing of such movies was passed a few days later in a special Sunday session of the Elk Grove Village board.

Pancoe said he needed to show the film, which attracted large crowds, to recoup losses he had suffered in the two years he has operated the theater, further revealing he had been losing money steadily while showing "family" type films.

PANCOE SAID he was willing to give the theater away to the village or park district as long as the new owner took over the mortgage. Pancoe said he would have to check with his accountants to see how much money still was owed on the theater, but he did say, "It's nowhere near the original cost of the theater, which was $320,000."

"I'm just biding my time, waiting to hear from the village president and board," Pancoe said. "Mr. Zettek repeated several times that he and the board would take some positive action to help keep the theater in operation."

Village officials discussed Pancoe's situation at Tuesday's village board meeting, but failed to come up with any ideas for helping the theater continue operation.

"I'd hate to see the facility not continue in operation," Pancoe said. "But I've had to come up with $70,000 out of my own pocket over the past two years and I have to do something. I don't intend to provide recreation to the village at my expense," he said.

PANCOE REFUSED to speculate on what he would do if the village fails to come out with any ideas to help the theater, saying only "I do have some ideas."

Park district officials were receptive to the idea of taking over a theater facility, but emphasized they would want to study the matter.

"If the people want to pay for it, we're quite willing to investigate it," said Lew Smith, president of the Elk Grove Park Board. A university survey conducted five years ago showed the village thought a movie theater to be the second most pressing need for the community behind swimming pools," he said.

Smith added the park district would not have to make money on the facility, but would only have to "break even."

JACK CLAES, director of parks and recreation, speculated that the park district might be able to operate the theater along the lines of one in Des Plaines, which charges only 60 cents for admission and is relatively successful.

"It would be a shame to let it go to waste," said Claes. "I'd hate to see a family theater taken away from the village," he added.

NEED SOME WHEELS? Plenty are available Sunday afternoons from 1 to 5 at Elk Grove High School's fieldhouse. The Elk Grove Park District sponsors open skating there every Sunday. For more information, call 437-8780.

Woman, son charged in murder plot

by STIRLING MORITA

A 31-year-old Schaumburg woman and her 13-year-old son were charged yesterday with conspiring to murder the woman's husband, U. S. Air Force Maj. Duane Swimley Sr., who reportedly is worth $500,000.

Charged with solicitation to commit murder were Darlene Swimley, 322 Meacham Rd., Schaumburg, and her son from a prior marriage, Joseph Enderle.

Mrs. Swimley was arrested at about 11 a.m. yesterday in the parking lot of the Woodfield Theatre in the Woodfield Shopping Center after a month-long investigation by Schaumburg police, police reported. The youth was arrested at a nearby school.

A COOK COUNTY State's Attorney's investigator, posing as a "hit" man, had arranged to collect a $500 advance on a $5,000 "contract" at a meeting outside the theater, according to Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy. He said Mrs. Swimley passed $100 to the investigator and promised more at a later date.

Schaumburg police uncovered the alleged plot when a Schaumburg man contacted Youth Officer Terry McGraw and said a friend in Rochester, N. Y., told him by telephone that a male reported to be named Swimley had inquired about a murder contract, Conroy said.

Subsequent investigation followed, and police went to the state's attorney's office Wednesday for assistance and for a court order for "eavesdropping" on the Swimley residence.

THE INVESTIGATOR, Joseph Saladino, telephoned the residence and identified himself as the man in Rochester, Conroy said. The youth talked freely about the contract, and a female voice was heard in the background "coaching" the youth, the police chief said. A $5,000 contract was agreed upon in the conversation, authorities said.

Saladino arranged a meeting at the theater, giving a description of himself and taking a description of the vehicle to be driven to the shopping center, Conroy added.

McGraw, Schaumburg Sgt. John Barabas and Det. Tom Ostermann staked out the parking lot and took videotape film from an undercover truck, Conroy said.

THE VEHICLE described in the telephone conversation — a black 1972 Lincoln Continental Mark IV — drove in and passed the theater a couple times, the chief reported. The car stopped, and Saladino entered the vehicle, Conroy said.

The woman driving the car handed over $100 and promised to pay $400 of the advance today.

The woman reportedly said, "It's worth $5,000 to kill my husband."

Swimley was reported to be in Germany. Police contacted the Air Force base in Rantoul, Ill., for a message relay to him.

AUTHORITIES DID not immediately know the motive for the alleged plot, but said Mrs. Swimley told Saladino Swimley was worth about a half million dollars.

Some firms offer matching service

by LEA TONKIN

Morning rush hour is no longer every man for himself. A new breed of commuters, with some encouragement from high gasoline prices and maybe from their employers, is getting together to pool it.

It's not unusual to see someone in the passenger seat of the car in front. Your headlights may even pick out a whole backseatful of poolers, crunched shoulder-to-shoulder in the pre-dawn ride to work.

"I told them right from the start, that we have to be flexible," said one pool member. "And we turned out to be very compatible."

There's the problem of Wally Phillips vs. Newsradio, the guy who likes a morning cigar vs. the non-smoker, and of course where to stop for a drink after work, but car poolers are finding in this time of energy crisis that riding with the guys isn't bad at all.

Figures are hard to come by, say Northwest suburban firms that now encourage cooperative commuting, but employee interest is growing. Top executives in many cases are leading the way.

AT THE MOTOROLA Inc. Communications Division plant in Schaumburg, a Ridefinder program has been in operation for three years. A computer is used to match up interested employees with others who live nearby and work the same schedule. "One man said he cut his gas bill by more than a third, by being in a car pool," said a Motorola representative.

No figures are available on how many employees recently joined car pools, but "quite a few executives and plant personnel" share rides. The company is discussing a possible joint car pool program with other firms in the vicinity.

At the Western Electric regional headquarters in Rolling Meadows, management offers car pooling information forms to interested employees. Some 125 persons signed up so far in the new Share-a-Ride program. "More will sign up, but they're waiting to see if new names are added to the lists," said a spokesman there. Employees can spot other workers who live in the vicinity through the use of a grid system on a map of the Chicago metropolitan area.

Manager Dick Lane at the Aristocrat of Chicago plant in Elk Grove Village reports car pooling and the use of mass transportation is boosted by the company.

AT THE KEMPER Insurance complex in Long Grove, heavy promotion of car pools brought a number of responses from employees. The personnel department works with potential car poolers to match riding habits. "We started last week to match up, so it will be another week before we can tell exactly how many people got into car pools," said a representative. Some 200 employees indicated interest.

William Krick, director of community relations for the Union 76 division of Union Oil Co. of Calif., Palatine, said a number of people have signed up for car pools in the past six weeks. The company leaves it up to the employee to make arrangements. Economics and hopefully, patriotism, prompt car pooling, said Krick.

United Air Lines, Inc., Elk Grove township, signs up potential drivers and riders. Special decals are offered to car poolers with three or more members, allowing them to use reserved parking space near the office facilities. Approximately 80 employees are recent car pool members.

Henry Koehler, director of administrative services at Universal Oil Products Co. in Des Plaines, said the company is considering the use of reserved parking spaces for car poolers. "We circulated a questionnaire a couple of months ago which had as part of it, a question about car pools," he said. "The response was sufficient to lead us to display maps in the cafeteria area." Employees who signed up for car pools could arrange car pools on their own.

Rebates for gasoline expenses are offered to employees of Plywood Minnesota, Inc. At the company's outlet in Arlington Heights, manager Roger Pegg said four out of six employees joined a car pool.

"VERY LITTLE response" was reported by Dick Reimann of FBK Realtors firm in Arlington Heights, to the company's offer of matching up area residents interested in car pooling. "We still

"FOOLING IT" is economical. To help employes form car pools, Motorola Inc. has started a Ridefinder service. Hal Wand and Debbie Cooper check employe applications.

'Raked' autos now outlawed in Illinois

by JOE SWICKARD

The hotrodders can start crying in their malts at the local drive-in.

The revised Illinois Vehicle Code, effective Jan. 1, has banned cars with the "raked" front ends and the jacked-up tails.

According to the Illinois Secretary of State's office, cars with modified suspension systems that raise the body more than three inches from its original position, or cars with more than a three-inch difference between the height of the front and rear bumper cannot be legally operated on the roads.

As a result of the new code, those hot cars with the high-rise rear ends that look like fuel-injected bloodhounds snuffing the pavement will be confined to garages, custom auto shows or the dragstrip.

Sgt. Jack Weber, of the Arlington Heights police traffic division, said his department was unaware of the new ruling. He said there may be some trouble enforcing the new law until the department receives formal notification.

OTHER POLICE departments said they were holding back until they received notification from the state.

Mount Prospect police said they "know about the law," but no tickets were being issued until they received the revised statutes.

Lt. Thomas Conte of the Wheeling police, said his men were not going to stop the raked cars until they get it in writing from the state.

However, the streetrodders had better steer clear of Buffalo Grove, because police there are aware of the law.

The law is being enforced "whenever we see them," said Sgt. Ronald Gozdecki, of the Buffalo Grove police. Palatine and Rolling Meadows police are aware of the new law. Rolling Meadows policemen each have a copy of the statute and are on the lookout for offenders.

SCULLY'S Kustom Shop of Wheeling does body customizing, but the manager said the raked fronts and jacked backs have fallen from favor.

"You'll see those in 'American Graffiti' when you go to the movie. They're not doing that too much any more. It was a fad and it's pretty much died out. You may see a couple like that once in a while, though," he said.

He said the extreme rake was "impractical."

"It would affect the steering and your visibility was messed up. It also threw your braking system out of line. On a damp day if you had to hit the brakes hard, you'd find your rear end in front of you," he said.

Scully's assessment of the custom-car scene is accurate. The February issue of Hot Rod magazine shows the only cars with the extreme profiles roaring down the dragstrip in the "funny car" class. Those drivers probably figure they would rather take their chances on the strips than battle the commuter's daily double.

Youths still being sought in Dryden fire investigation

Arlington Heights police are pressing their search for two juveniles wanted for questioning in connection with the Dryden Apartments fire Monday night that left 24 families homeless.

Lt. Paul Buckholz of the police juvenile division said his men are concentrating their efforts in trying to find two Boy Scouts who may have information about the youths being sought.

Buckholz said the scouts tried to tell police and fire officials at the scene of the blaze they had seen the two youths in question. Apparently, Buckholz said, officials were too busy to immediately listen to the Scouts' information.

"When they (officials) got a minute, they couldn't find the Scouts," Buckholz said.

THE FIRE IS believed to have been the work of arsonists. Field investigations by the police and fire departments indicate a flammable liquid was poured on the basement floor and then ignited.

May be included in '74-'75 budget position," said Mrs. Farley. "Willis submitted his version of what a health coordinator should do to the board of health for its review this past week," she added.

"WE'VE REVISED manager Willis' job description and some members of the board of health and Mr. Willis will meet in the next few days to finalize that job description," said Mrs. Farley.

After that "we start looking for the person who fills the bill," said Mrs. Farley.

She predicted the health coordinator would be hard at work in a few months. The coordinator's first task will be to select priorities outlined in the survey submitted by the special committee appointed by the board of health.

THE SURVEY and comprehensive health plan suggested:

- Identification of health problems and needs.
- Solutions and recommendation of services to meet those needs.
- Coordination of all health-related services available to the village.

Girl Scout Council

Donald Birgerson of Elk Grove Village is serving as community chairman in the Northwest Cook County Girl Scout Council's 1974 sustaining membership enrollment now in progress.

Under Birgerson's leadership, troop enrollers will contact Girl Scout families in Elk Grove Village to ask for their assistance in supporting the programs in this area. The goal for Northwest Cook County is $33,000.

Birgerson, a sales representative for the American Optical Corp., has resided in Elk Grove Village for seven years. He has three daughters, his wife is a former Girl Scout leader, and he has served as a member of the campsites and facilities committee of the council's board.

Open house at Frisby

R. J. Frisby Manufacturing Co., 1500 Chase St., Elk Grove Village, will show off its new factory to suppliers and customers during a 12 p.m. ribbon-cutting ceremony and open house Sunday.

The 100,000-square-foot factory employs 200 persons who manufacture precision parts and components. U.S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-12th, will be speaker at the ceremony.

Police have been attempting to track down two youths reportedly seen fleeing the building. They were described as being about 11 or 12 years old, having long hair, and were wearing ski jackets and blue jeans.

Buckholz said school children in the area have been questioned; so far without positive results. He said local Boy Scout troops are also being screened to find the two Scouts from the fire scene.

Buckholz has asked the Scouts to contact him, or any juvenile officer, at 253-2240, ext. 278 or 279. He also asked other persons with information about the fire to contact his division of the police.

The Dryden Apartments, across from the Arlington Market Shopping Center, have been plagued with fires since last April when another building in the complex was burned. It, too, could have been the result of arson, police said.

Prior to Monday night's fire, residents reported a series of trash and mailbox fires during the weekend.

Antonik interim health board chief

Brother Ferdinand Leyva, administrator of Alexian Brothers Medical Center, has been temporarily relieved as chairman of the Elk Grove Village Board of Health.

Village Pres. Charles Zettek appointed member Alan Antonik, interim chairman in Brother Ferdinand's absence.

The survey contained a summary of the committee's investigative work and a series of recommendations for each area of study. If implemented, the recommendations would constitute a comprehensive health plan for Elk Grove Village.

MRS. FARLEY said the survey and plan were total assessments of local health and health care facilities and investigated all factors which influence health care.

Night school is for those who care

by KATHERINE BOYCE

"They teach too many useless things in school," says Gary, who was expelled from High School Dist. 211.

Gary just didn't like school and he couldn't see the need for many of his classes. But he thought he'd better get his diploma, so after he was expelled he enrolled in Dist. 211's night school program. Now he has nothing but praise for these classes. As he sums it up, "I go because I like the class. If I didn't, I wouldn't come."

As the mother of a 17-year-old, June was frightened and embarrassed when she walked into her first night school class. Now she says she feels comfortable in the class and gets along with both her teenage and adult classmates. She wants to finish high school so she can go to college.

"Even if I want to be a sales girl, I would need that diploma," she says. What is even more important to June is the personal fulfillment she gets from going back to school. "Being in that class makes you more aware of who you are," she says.

Marie attended high school in Chile, 11 years ago, before coming to America with her husband. When she gets her diploma from Dist. 211, she plans to enroll in keypunch operating courses at Harper College.

Laurie and her four-year-old son came from Hawaii to live with her parents so she could attend Dist. 211 night classes. After finishing high school, she wants to become a nurse and go back to the island of Kauai where she was born. It's an effort to go to night school, says Laurie, but it's worth it. "When you apply for a job and tell them you went to night school they look at you and say, 'You must really care,'" she says.

THERE ARE 150 students in Dist. 211's night school program. About two percent of the students in High School Dist. 211 are expelled or drop out of school each year, but like Gary many eventually enroll in night school. Between 60 and 70 percent of the students are under 21.

The night school program includes courses in English, American history, social science and vocational studies. The average size of classes is between 15 and 20 students and most classes are held at Fremd High School in Palatine. They meet for two hours, twice a week for 15 weeks.

John Breaull, social science teacher in the night school program, says most night classes are taught differently from day classes. Although the content of the day time social science course and Breaull's course are about the same, he says the approach is different. The classroom atmosphere is more casual and lectures are more closely tied to current events.

Township OKs bus purchase for seniors

The Elk Grove Township Board, encouraged by the early success of its senior-citizen bus service program, has approved the purchase of a bus prior to making the service a permanent township program.

The board tentatively approved $6,800 to buy a 14-passenger "mini-bus" from Lattot Chevrolet in Arlington Heights.

The township has been renting a mini-bus and driver since Dec. 1 in an effort to test the demand for a senior citizens' bus service. To date, the service has averaged about 30 to 35 riders a week.

Township Supervisor Richard Hall said the township will hire its own driver, once the bus arrives. The senior-citizen bus service now operates five days a week, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Township citizens over 65 can arrange to be picked up at their home by the bus, by calling 437-9300.

The township board also has approved a resolution against the proposed Regional Transit Authority.

The resolution cites the unlimited taxing power of the RTA governing board; the private, uncompetitive sale of up to $500 million in bonds which could be sold by the RTA, and the disproportionate share of revenue which would go to subsidize the Chicago Transit Authority as some of the reasons for not supporting RTA.

The resolution further states the township board will recommend township voters vote "no" in the RTA referendum March 19.

"However, we didn't go to the people to see what they want to see in health care," said Mrs. Farley.

"This is probably going to be the health coordinator's first major task," she added.

A community survey takes staff and time and since our study was a volunteer job we were not able to do that phase of it although we think it is important to the total study, said Mrs. Farley.

NIGHT SCHOOL classes at High School Dist. 211 include students aged 16 to 45, says teacher John Breaull. Whether they are teen-age dropouts or housewives, they have one goal in mind — a high school diploma. Night classes usually are "less academic," he says.

cigaretts in the lounge during breaks and the tardy rules, rigidly enforced during the day, are more flexible at night. No one gets upset if a student walks into class five minutes late, he says.

Other attendance rules are enforced. If a student misses more than three classes a semester, he is dropped from the course, says Breaull. "We stick close to that."

Breaull doesn't use a textbook in his class. He gives lectures instead and requires students to take notes. It gets them more involved in the lecture and encourages them to ask more questions,

Hypnotism demonstration

If you've ever wondered just how hypnotism works, or had the urge to experience it yourself, your chance to find out and to try it is coming up Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Elk Grove Village Public Library.

Richard Calisch, head of the humanities division of Elk Grove High School, will speak on hypnotism and demonstrate his powers to the audience. Calisch has been practicing hypnotism for 22 years, and lectures on the subject for psychology classes at the school. He will hypnotize volunteers from the audience. Potential subjects under 18 must bring written parental permission.

Hicks road widening job may start in August

The widening of Hicks Road between Baldwin and Rand roads in Palatine is expected to start this summer.

Bids on the Hicks Road improvement project are scheduled to be let June 28, Henry Yamanaka, a mobility study engineer with the Illinois State Highway Department, said yesterday. A contract would be awarded three to four weeks after the bids are let and construction probably would start in early August, he said.

The plans call for the widening of the road from two to four lanes divided by a 16-foot median, left-turn lanes at major intersections, curbs and a closed drainage system.

The improvement project will cost an estimated $1.9 million. Seventy per cent of the project will be funded from a Federal Aid-Urban grant and the remainder by the state.

THE PROJECT was given top priority for FAU funds in November, 1972, and the decision was reaffirmed on Jan. 10 by the Northwest Council of Mayors, an arm of the Chicago Area Transportation Study, which is the transportation planning agency for this area for federal funding.

Under the FAU system, funds for roadways in urbanized areas are allocated to a region and local agencies in the region then determine priorities for their use.

There is approximately $6 million available in FAU funds to the Northwest area over the next three years. When matching funds are added to this sum it means nearly $9 million of road work can be done in the area over the next three years.

Pebble Creek Drive will be closed off from Hicks Road as part of the project. The closing was requested by the village board and residents of Pebble Creek subdivision primarily to prevent additional traffic from Sellergren's Old Madrid apartments from traveling through the subdivision.

Provisions for the Palatine Park District bicycle path under the Hicks Road bridge over Salt Creek also have been included in the plans. The bicycle path will be part of the Salt Creek drainage channel and will be flooded during wet weather, said Yamanaka.

Completion of the improvement project is expected to take two years, said Les Swieca, north area programmer of the Illinois State Highway Department.

THE WORK IS part of a three-phase project calling for the widening of more than a six-mile stretch of Hicks Road from Euclid Avenue in Rolling Meadows to Rand Road.

The second phase of the project calls for widening of Northwest Highway between Hicks and Rohlwing roads from four to six lanes.

This project is under consideration for the five-year FAU program along with several other road improvement projects in the Northwest area, said James Pitt of the Illinois State Department of Highways. The decision on whether it will be done rests with the mayors in the area who establish priorities for the FAU funds, said Pitt.

Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones said he would push to have the second phase of the Hicks Road improvement project given a high priority so that it can be completed within five years. He said a few businesses may be forced to relocate or move parking to the back of their buildings.

The third phase of the project is for improvements on Hicks Road from Euclid Avenue to the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks. This phase is several years off.

Husband, an Air Force major, was target

Woman, son charged in murder plot

by STIRLING MORITA

A 31-year-old Schaumburg woman and her 13-year-old son were charged yesterday with conspiring to murder the woman's husband, U. S. Air Force Maj. Duane Swimley Sr., who reportedly is worth $500,000.

Charged with solicitation to commit murder were Darlene Swimley, 322 Meacham Rd., Schaumburg, and her son from a prior marriage, Joseph Enderle.

Mrs. Swimley was arrested at about 11 a.m. yesterday in the parking lot of the Woodfield Theatre in the Woodfield Shopping Center after a month-long investigation by Schaumburg police, police reported. The youth was arrested at a nearby school.

A COOK COUNTY State's Attorney's investigator, posing as a "hit" man, had arranged to collect a $500 advance on a $5,000 "contract" at a meeting outside the theater, according to Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy. He said Mrs. Swimley passed $100 to the investigator and promised more at a later date.

Schaumburg police uncovered the alleged plot when a Schaumburg man contacted Youth Officer Terry McGraw and said a friend in Rochester, N. Y., told him by telephone that a male reported to be named Swimley had inquired about a murder contract, Conroy said.

Subsequent investigation followed, and police went to the state's attorney's office Wednesday for assistance and for a court order for "eavesdropping" on the Swimley residence.

THE INVESTIGATOR, Joseph Saladino, telephoned the residence and identified himself as the man in Rochester, Conroy said. The youth talked freely about the contract, and a female voice was heard in the background "coaching" the youth, the police chief said. A $5,000 contract was agreed upon in the conversation, authorities said.

Saladino arranged a meeting at the theater, giving a description of himself and taking a description of the vehicle to be driven to the shopping center, Conroy added.

McGraw, Schaumburg Sgt. John Barabas and Det. Tom Ostermann staked out the parking lot and took videotape film from an undercover truck, Conroy said.

THE VEHICLE described in the telephone conversation — a black 1972 Lincoln Continental Mark IV — drove in and passed the theater a couple times, the chief reported. The car stopped, and Saladino entered the vehicle, Conroy said.

The woman driving the car handed over $100 and promised to pay $400 of the advance today.

The woman reportedly said, "It's worth $5,000 to kill my husband."

Swimley was reported to be in Germany. Police contacted the Air Force base in Rantoul, Ill., for a message relay to him.

AUTHORITIES DID not immediately know the motive for the alleged plot, but said Mrs. Swimley told Saladino Swimley was worth about a half million dollars.

The man in New York is from this area and called his friend in Schaumburg, who relayed it to police because "he did not know at the time who the victim was," Conroy said.

Mrs. Swimley has two other sons who were brought to the Schaumburg police station temporarily until police could find a place for them.

Joseph was taken to the Audy Home pending a hearing in Family Court.

Mrs. Swimley was being held in Cook County Jail in lieu of $15,000 bond pending an appearance 9:30 a.m. Feb. 28 in Cook County Circuit Court, 26th and California streets.

26 cents per gallon? Not quite...

by JOE SWICKARD

It looks like manna from heaven, until the motorists raise their eyes to hand-lettered signs on the pumps, at the Phillips 66 station on Euclid Avenue at Northwest Highway.

The price on the meter is 26 cents for regular, but the signs clearly inform customers the price is only for a half gallon.

Station manager Dan Palenske explained the situation: "We aren't trying to mislead anybody. The price is 52 cents a gallon and the pump computers only go to 49.9 cents. We have the signs up and if anybody looks confused, we try to explain it to them right away."

Palenske said the problem is rooted in the company price increase to the dealers and the age of the pumps.

"Phillips and Standard were the only two companies to make the big boost in January into the 50-cents-a-gallon range. These pumps were installed when the station opened in 1959. I understand most pumps that are 10 years old or older don't go above 49.9," he said.

PALENKE SAID his station was going to be remodeled by July. The renovation is to include new pumps to handle the higher prices and to serve unleaded gasoline.

"In the meantime, I ordered 12 new price computers for the pumps. I ordered 12 but got only two. I understand Standard ordered 20,000 new ones for their pumps," he said.

Palenske said another source of confusion is the amount due after the car has been filled.

"You see the gallonage is correct, but because the price is for half a gallon we have to double the price shown to get the final price," he said.

"We get some people who really get confused when they ask for $2 worth and the pump only reads a buck," he said.

Some firms offer matching service

by LEA TONKIN

Morning rush hour is no longer every man for himself. A new breed of commuters, with some encouragement from high gasoline prices and maybe from their employers, is getting together to pool it.

It's not unusual to see someone in the passenger seat of the car in front. Your headlights may even pick out a whole backseatful of poolers, crunched shoulder-to-shoulder in the pre-dawn ride to work.

"I told them right from the start, that we have to be flexible," said one pool member. "And we turned out to be very compatible."

There's the problem of Wally Phillips vs. Newsradio, the guy who likes a morning cigar vs. the non-smoker, and of course where to stop for a drink after work, but car poolers are finding in this time of energy crisis that riding with the guys isn't bad at all.

Figures are hard to come by, say Northwest suburban firms that now encourage cooperative commuting, but employee interest is growing. Top executives in many cases are leading the way.

AT THE MOTOROLA Inc. Communications Division plant in Schaumburg, a Ridesharing program has been in operation for three years. A computer is used to match up interested employees with others who live nearby and work the same schedule. "One man said he cut his gas bill by more than a third, by being in a car pool," said a Motorola representative.

No figures are available on how many employees recently joined car pools, but "quite a few executives and plant personnel" share rides. The company is discussing a possible joint car pool program with other firms in the vicinity.

At the Western Electric regional headquarters in Rolling Meadows, management offers car pooling information forms to interested employees. Some 125 persons signed up so far in the new Share-a-Ride program. "More will sign up, but they're waiting to see if new names are added to the lists," said a spokesman there. Employees can spot other workers who live in the vicinity through the use of a grid system on a map of the Chicago metropolitan area.

Manager Dick Lane at the Aristocrat of Chicago plant in Elk Grove Village reports car pooling and the use of mass transportation is boosted by the company.

AT THE KEMPER Insurance complex in Long Grove, heavy promotion of car pools brought a number of responses from employees. The personnel department works with potential car poolers to match riding habits. "We started last week to match up, so it will be another week before we can tell exactly how many people got into car pools," said a representative. Some 200 employees indicated interest.

William Krick, director of community relations for the Union 76 division of Union Oil Co. of Calif., Palatine, said a number of people have signed up for car pools in the past six weeks. The company leaves it up to the employee to make arrangements. Economics and hopefully, patriotism, prompt car pooling, said Krick.

United Air Lines, Inc., Elk Grove township, signs up potential drivers and riders. Special decals are offered to car poolers with three or more members, allowing them to use reserved parking space near the office facilities. Approximately 80 employees are recent car pool members.

Henry Koehler, director of administrative services at Universal Oil Products Co. in Des Plaines, said the company is considering the use of reserved parking spaces for car poolers. "We circulated a questionnaire a couple of months ago which had as part of it, a question about car pools," he said. "The response was sufficient to lead us to display maps in the cafeteria area." Employees who signed up for car pools could arrange car pools on their own.

Rebates for gasoline expenses are offered to employees of Plymouth Minnesota, Inc. At the company's outlet in Arlington Heights, manager Roger Pegg said four out of six employees joined a car pool.

"VERY LITTLE response" was reported by Dick Reimann of FBK Realtors firm in Arlington Heights, to the company's offer of matching up area residents interested in car pooling. "We still

"POOLING IT" is economical. To help employees form car pools, Motorola Inc. has started a Ridesharing service. Hal Wand and Debbie Cooper check employee applications.

Annexation corridor sought in trade

by TONI GINETTI

The Rolling Meadows park district may be setting in motion a chain of events preliminary to the annexation of the Plum Grove Countryside Park District.

Representatives from the Rolling Meadows district and the Salt Creek Park District have agreed to a closed-door meeting tomorrow morning to discuss a trade-off that could lead to the acquisition of the Countryside district by the Rolling Meadows district within the year.

If successful, the trade-off would provide the Rolling Meadows district with an annexation corridor to the $4 million-assessed Countryside district. The Rolling Meadows district could then move to absorb the Countryside district through a referendum. Voters in the Countryside district would have to approve such a referendum before the actual annexation could be made.

The Countryside district encompasses an approximate four-acre site bounded by Winnetka Avenue on the north, Kirchoff Road on the south, Hicks Road on the east and Meacham Road on the west. The district, formed as a protective taxing body in 1967, includes an estimated 300 single-family homes and the Kings Walk Apartments.

COUNTRYSIDE residents usually have been allowed to take part in Rolling Meadows district events at in-district rates due to yearly negotiations between 1st Ward Aldermen Thomas Scanlan, Merrill Wuersch and Rolling Meadows park officials.

The Rolling Meadows district for years has sought to annex the Countryside area but has been barred because the two districts are separated by a parcel of land, near Hicks Road and Euclid Avenue, owned by the Salt Creek district.

State laws require taxing bodies to border on property which they seek to annex.

In the past, the Salt Creek district, which has also entertained ideas of an-nexing the Countryside district, has refused to relinquish the land necessary for the city district's desired annexation.

THE TRADE-OFF to be discussed tomorrow would apparently involve the Salt Creek district giving the Rolling Meadows district the land it needs to get to the Countryside district in exchange for reduced rates for Salt Creek residents at Rolling Meadows park facilities.

The Salt Creek district may also ask for a portion of a $6.9 million industrial park now owned by the Rolling Meadows district to make up for the loss in assessed valuation for relinquishing the annexation corridor.

The industrial park is the same one the two districts fought for in a two-year legal battle. The area was illegally annexed by the Rolling Meadows district in 1959, but a final court ruling several months ago allowed the district to keep taxing control of the land.

"This has been talked about for the past few years," Salt Creek Dir. James DeVos said yesterday of the Countryside annexation. "They (the Rolling Meadows district) are in a situation where they need the (Countryside) land. But we would definitely want an equal footing. I know we're not going to give up (the land) for nothing."

"I think we're looking for a break on programming," he added. The arrangement would probably allow Salt Creek residents to take part in Rolling Meadows activities at in-district rather than out-of-district rates, he said.

COUNTRYSIDE Park District Board Pres. Ernest Martin said yesterday, however, that the annexation talk may be premature.

"I think a number of our residents do desire to become part of the Rolling Meadows park district," Martin said. "But I think the problem is we really don't know if the majority want to. Basically it is a question of taxation."

If the area is annexed, Countryside homeowners will be required to pay substantially higher real estate taxes since the tax rate paid to the park district would climb from about 21 cents per $100 assessed valuation to 45 cents per $100.

The increase would mean at least $24 more on a home assessed at $10,000.

"It's not a question of the facilities, but a question of the debt the residents would assume," Martin said. He said before the board would act on an annexation move, residents would be informally polled. "The board would follow the directions of the majority of the residents," he said.

ACCORDING TO Rolling Meadows Park District Dir. Steve Person, the annexation is being sought for three reasons:

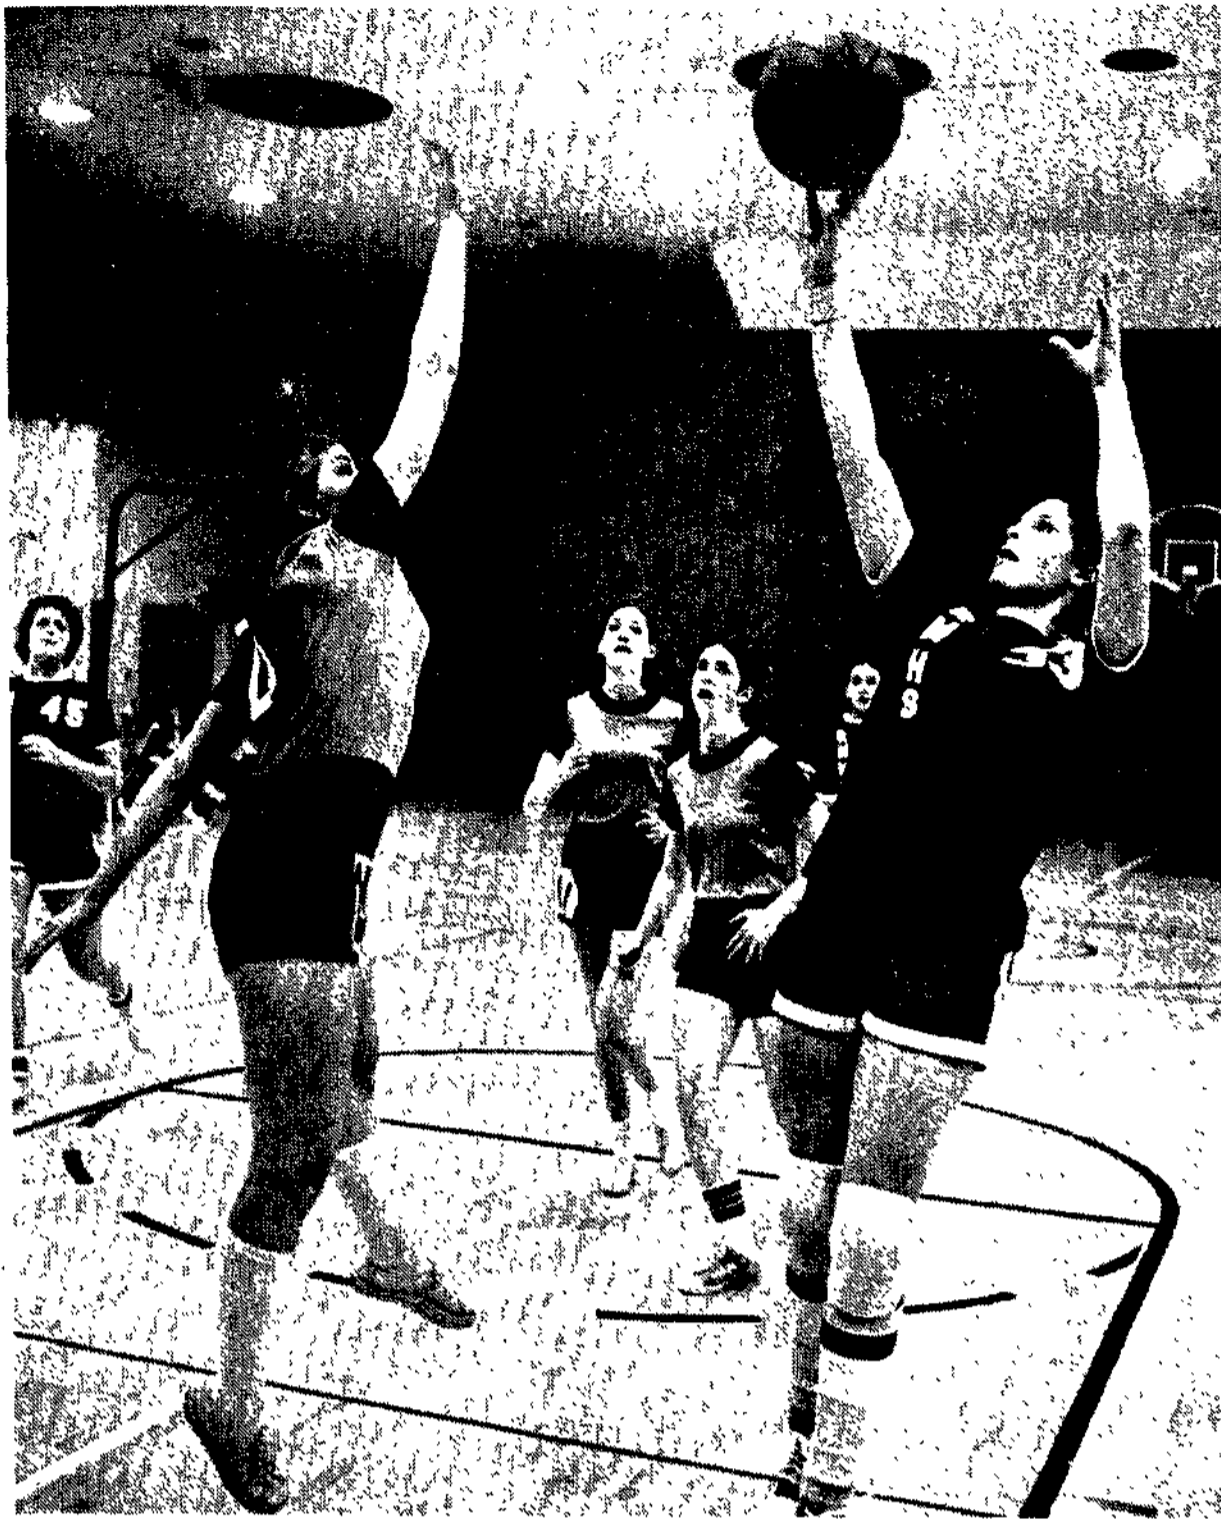

- So that the Rolling Meadows district, which is a separate taxing body in the city, can cover the entire city.
- So the park district can grow westward with the city.
- So the income of the district will increase and help offset an expected budget deficit.

Person added he expects the Countryside district to be part of the city district "within a year."

IF THE ANNEXATION comes about, it would mean the city would have only one park district instead of the present three. Scanlan has been critical in the past of the fragmentation of park districts in the city and last month attempted to start action to have the city government take control of the city districts.

The attempt died, however, when the city council voted to support the financially-ailing Rolling Meadows district by waiving a $10,000 fee for police patrol of its parks.

Salt Creek's agreement to the meeting tomorrow apparently means that that district has given up thought of annexing the Countryside area. "I think those people (in Countryside) are more aligned with Rolling Meadows," DeVos said. "I think the majority would rather go to Rolling Meadows."

SHOOTING AT CLOSE range is a player from Rolling Meadows High School in a non-league girls' basketball game with rival and host Sacred Heart High School Tuesday night. Sacred Heart won 35-26.

'Raked' autos now outlawed in Illinois

by JOE SWICKARD

The hotrodders can start crying in their mits at the local drive-in.

The revised Illinois Vehicle Code, effective Jan. 1, has banned cars with the "raked" front ends and the jacked-up tails.

According to the Illinois Secretary of State's office, cars with modified suspension systems that raise the body more than three inches from its original position, or cars with more than a three-inch difference between the height of the front and rear bumper cannot be legally operated on the roads.

As a result of the new code, those hot cars with the high-rise rear ends that look like fuel-injected bloodhounds sniffing the pavement will be confined to garages, custom auto shows or the dragstrip.

Sgt. Jack Weber, of the Arlington Heights police traffic division, said his department was unaware of the new ruling. He said there may be some trouble enforcing the new law until the department receives formal notification.

OTHER POLICE departments said they were holding back until they received notification from the state.

Mount Prospect police said they "know about the law," but no tickets were being issued until they received the revised statutes.

Lt. Thomas Conte of the Wheeling police, said his men were not going to stop the raked cars until they get it in writing from the state.

However, the streetrodders had better steer clear of Buffalo Grove, because police there are aware of the law.

The law is being enforced "whenever we see them," said Sgt. Ronald Gozdeck, of the Buffalo Grove police. Palatine and Rolling Meadows police are aware of the new law. Rolling Meadows policemen each have a copy of the statute and are on the lookout for offenders.

SCULLY'S Kustom Shop of Wheeling does body customizing, but the manager said the raked fronts and jacked backs have fallen from favor.

"You'll see those in 'American Graffiti' when you go to the movie. They're not doing that too much any more. It was a fad and it's pretty much died out. You may see a couple like that once in a while, though," he said.

He said the extreme rake was "impractical."

"It would effect the steering and your visibility was messed up. It also threw your braking system out of line. On a damp day if you had to hit the brakes hard, you'd find your rear end in front of you," he said.

Scully's assessment of the custom-car scene is accurate. The February issue of Hot Rod magazine shows the only cars with the extreme profiles roaring down the dragstrip in the "funny car" class. Those drivers probably figure they would rather take their chances on the strips than battle the commuter's daily double.

Park district may acquire Countryside within year

by TONI GINETTI

The Rolling Meadows park district may be setting in motion a chain of events preliminary to the annexation of the Plum Grove Countryside Park District.

Representatives from the Rolling Meadows district and the Salt Creek Park District have agreed to a closed-

Park district cuts back on public ice skating hours

Public skating at the Rolling Meadows Sports Complex was practically eliminated in the new spring-summer schedule approved by the Park District Recreation Committee.

The committee Wednesday night tentatively decided to limit public skating sessions for spring and summer to two hours on Saturday nights. Last summer, the park district had 17 hours of public skating per week.

The recreation committee also agreed to drop five skating sessions in mid-March in favor of hockey games. No public skating will be held March 19, 20, 21, 23 and 24, if the whole park board approves the committee's decision, Feb. 14.

To compensate for the cut, admission to the hockey games on March 19 and 21 will cost only 25 cents instead of the usual 75 cents per student and $1 per adult.

THE FINAL decision on both the new schedule and the changes in public skating sessions will be made at the Feb. 14 park board meeting, which begins at 8:30 p.m. in the park district office, 1 Park Meadow Pl.

Public skating has been facing a deficit since last year. Though Friday and Saturday public skating hours are well attended, the park district is losing money on the weekday and Sunday night session.

Steve Person, superintendent of parks and recreation, recently revealed that the park district was considering dropping the Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday night sessions in future programming. He said no changes would be made during the winter-spring schedule which expires April 14.

The other skating program, learn-to-skate, hockey and special practice sessions have been showing a profit. Person said profits from the ice arena support the rest of the sports complex, including the newly established free recreation center which offers games such as paddleball, ping pong, air hockey and table tennis.

If the Tuesday, Thursday, and Sunday night sessions were eliminated that would cut the existing weekly skating schedule by 10 hours, leaving a total 14 hours per week for skating.

NELSON SAID that the cut in public skating hours in the spring-summer schedule did not mean that future public skating hours would be limited. "That has nothing to do with next fall," he said.

He added that a decision on the fall-winter schedule will probably be made during the April recreation committee meeting, which has not been scheduled yet.

The recreation committee meeting, which was originally scheduled for Jan. 31, was rescheduled for Wednesday night with little prior warning. This is apparently in violation of the Illinois Open Meeting Law which states that notice of special meetings or changes in scheduled meetings must be posted and that newspapers must be informed 24 hours ahead of time.

Hockey sessions for men, boys and girls were also established by the recreation committee. For the first time, Rolling Meadows has established a girls' learn-to-play hockey program which will run for two weeks starting June 17.

The girls will learn to play hockey and have "developmental" games — which Nelson defined as games where learning instead of competition is emphasized.

Cost is $15 per girl for 15 sessions. "This is unbelievably cheap," Nelson said. He added that the park district is starting this as an experimental program and if it is successful, costs will increase to about the same amount as boys' hockey.

THE BOYS' AND men's hockey sessions will consist of competition games. Nelson said the park district is planning to scour the surrounding neighborhood for teams to participate.

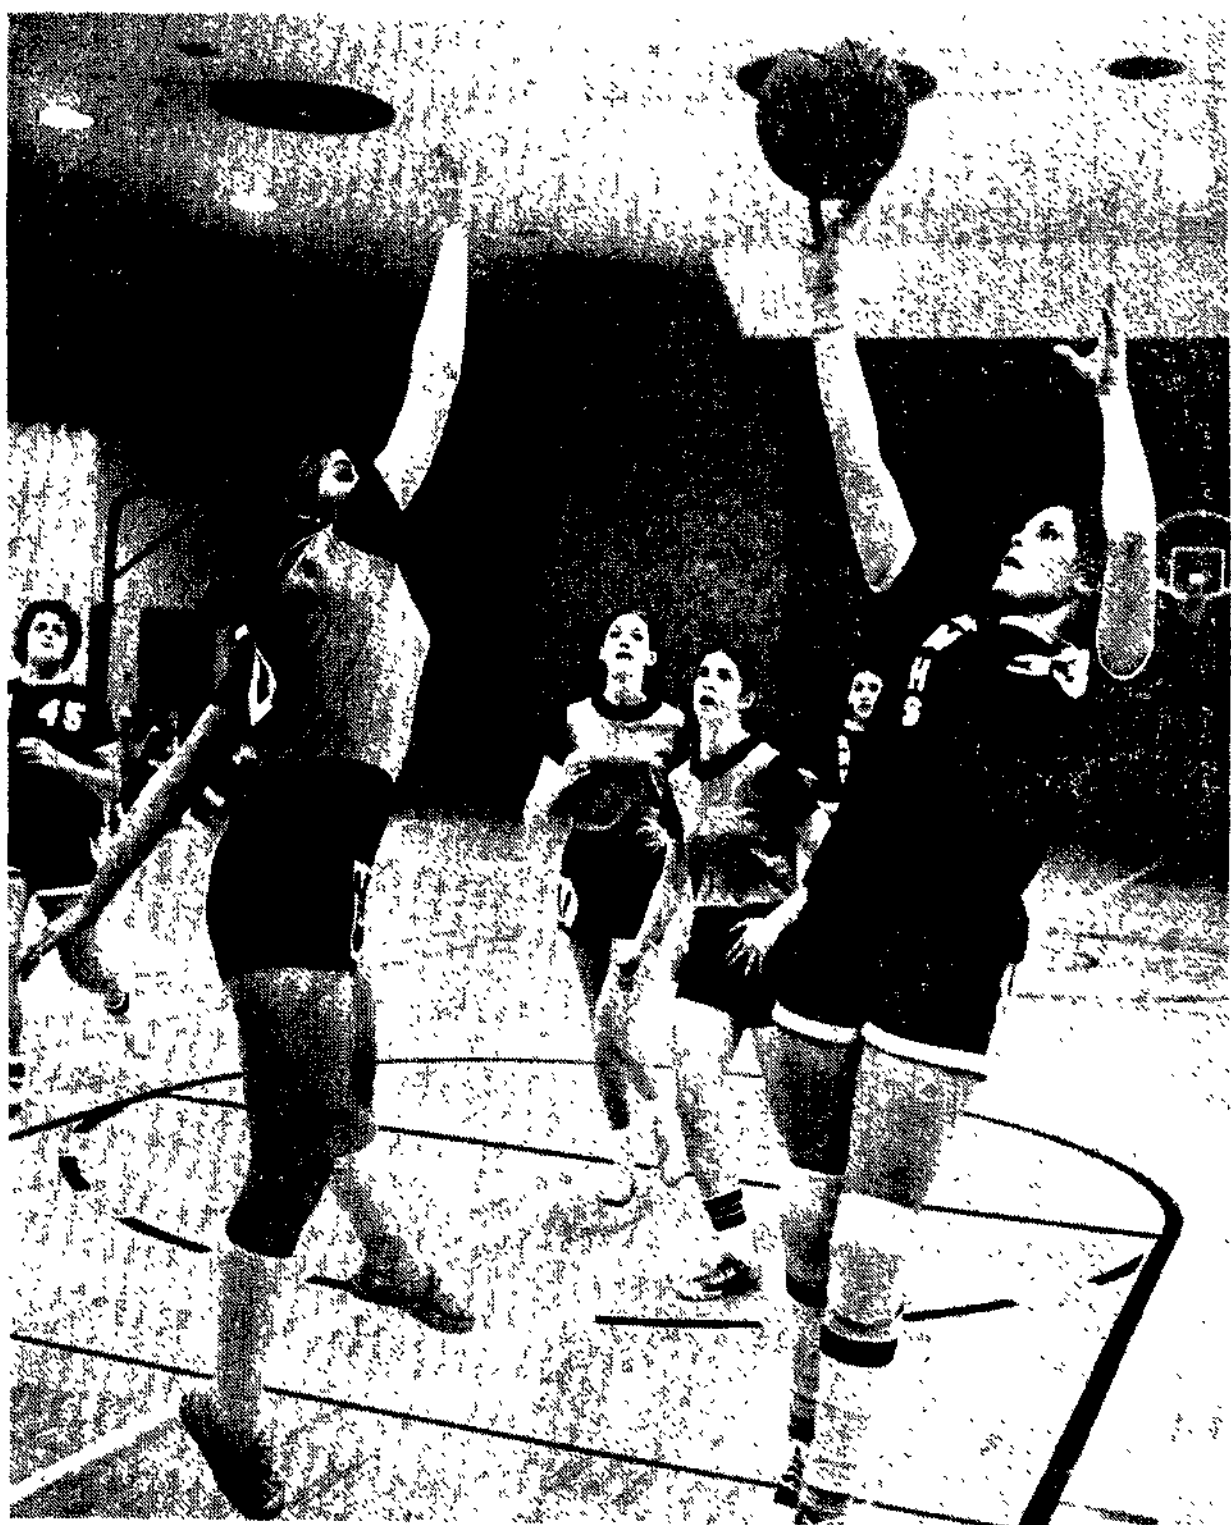

Cost per team for the 8 week schedule ranges from $300 for the youngest teams to $700 for adults.

Special hours have been set up for skating practice. For the entire eight-week session, 18 hours per week are scheduled for patch and free style. After June 6, an additional 10 hours are scheduled weekly. The eight-week cost is $275 per person and the two-week session costs $40 per person.

"I think we've got a solid program that will sell," Nelson said. In past summers, the summer skating program has been losing money.

by STIRLING MORITA

A 31-year-old Schaumburg woman and her 13-year-old son were charged yesterday with conspiring to murder the woman's husband, U. S. Air Force Maj. Duane Swimley Sr., who reportedly is worth $500,000.

Charged with solicitation to commit murder were Darlene Swimley, 322 Meacham Rd., Schaumburg, and her son from a prior marriage, Joseph Enderle. Mrs. Swimley was arrested at about 11 a.m. yesterday in the parking lot of the Woodfield Theatre in the Woodfield Shopping Center after a month-long investigation by Schaumburg police, police reported. The youth was arrested at a nearby school.

A COOK COUNTY State's Attorney's investigator, posing as a "hit" man, had arranged to collect a $500 advance on a $5,000 "contract" at a meeting outside the theater, according to Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy. He said

Mrs. Swimley passed $100 to the investigator and promised more at a later date.

Schaumburg police uncovered the alleged plot when a Schaumburg man contacted Youth Officer Terry McGraw and said a friend in Rochester, N. Y., told him by telephone that a male reported to be named Swimley had inquired about a murder contract, Conroy said.

Subsequent investigation followed, and police went to the state's attorney's office Wednesday for assistance and for a court order for "eavesdropping" on the Swimley residence.

THE INVESTIGATOR, Joseph Saladino, telephoned the residence and identified himself as the man in Rochester, Conroy said. The youth talked freely about the contract, and a female voice was heard in the background "coaching" the youth, the police chief said. A $5,000 contract was agreed upon in the conversation. Some firms offer matching service

More commuters make move to pools

by LEA TONKIN

Morning rush hour is no longer every man for himself. A new breed of commuters, with some encouragement from high gasoline prices and maybe from their employers, is getting together to pool it.

It's not unusual to see someone in the passenger seat of the car in front. Your headlights may even pick out a whole backseatful of poolers, scrunched shoulder-to-shoulder in the pre-dawn ride to work.

"I told them right from the start, that we have to be flexible," said one pool member. "And we turned out to be very compatible."

There's the problem of Wally Phillips vs. Newsradio, the guy who likes a morning cigar vs. the non-smoker, and of course where to stop for a drink after work, but car poolers are finding in this time of energy crisis that riding with the guys isn't bad at all.

Figures are hard to come by, say Northwest suburban firms that now encourage cooperative commuting, but employee interest is growing. Top executives in many cases are leading the way.

AT THE MOTOROLA Inc. Communications Division plant in Schaumburg, a Ridefinder program has been in operation for three years. A computer is used to match up interested employees with others who live nearby and work the same schedule. "One man said he cut his gas bill by more than a third, by being in a car pool," said a Motorola representative.

No figures are available on how many employees recently joined car pools, but "quite a few executives and plant personnel" share rides. The company is discussing a possible joint car pool program with other firms in the vicinity.

At the Western Electric regional headquarters in Rolling Meadows, management offers car pooling information forms to interested employees. Some 125 persons signed up so far in the new Share-a-Ride program. "More will sign up, but they're waiting to see if new names are added to the lists," said a spokesman there. Employees can spot other workers who live in the vicinity through the use of a grid system on a map of the Chicago metropolitan area.

Manager Dick Lane at the Aristocrat of Chicago plant in Elk Grove Village reports car pooling and the use of mass transportation is boosted by the company.

AT THE KEMPER Insurance complex in Long Grove, heavy promotion of car pools brought a number of responses from employees. The personnel department works with potential car poolers to match riding habits. "We started last week to match up, so it will be another week before we can tell exactly how many people got into car pools," said a representative. Some 200 employees indicated interest.

William Krick, director of community relations for the Union 76 division of Union Oil Co. of Calif., Palatine, said a number of people have signed up for car pools in the past six weeks. The company leaves it up to the employee to make arrangements. Economies and hopefully, patriotism, prompt car pooling, said Krick.

United Air Lines, Inc., Elk Grove township, signs up potential drivers and riders. Special decals are offered to car poolers with three or more members, allowing them to use reserved parking space near the office facilities. Approximately 80 employees are recent car pool members.

Henry Koehler, director of administrative services at Universal Oil Products Co. in Des Plaines, said the company is considering the use of reserved parking spaces for car poolers. "We circulated a questionnaire a couple of months ago which had as part of it, a question about car pools," he said. "The response was sufficient to lead us to display maps in the cafeteria area." Employees who signed up for car pools could arrange car pools on their own.

Rebates for gasoline expenses are offered to employees of Plywood Minnesota, Inc. At the company's outlet in Arlington Heights, manager Roger Pegg said four out of six employees joined a car pool.

"VERY LITTLE response" was reported by Dick Reimann of FBK Realtors firm in Arlington Heights, to the company's offer of matching up area residents interested in car pooling. "We still

"POOLING IT" is economical. To help employees form car pools, Motorola Inc. has started a Ridefinder service. Hal Wand and Debbie Cooper check employee applications.

26 cents per gallon? Not quite...

by JOE SWICKARD

It looks like manna from heaven, until the motorists raise their eyes to hand-lettered signs on the pumps, at the Phillips 66 station on Euclid Avenue at Northwest Highway.

The price on the meter is 26 cents for regular, but the signs clearly inform customers the price is only for a half gallon.

Station manager Dan Palenske explained the situation: "We aren't trying to mislead anybody. The price is 52 cents a gallon and the pump computers only go to 49.9 cents. We have the signs up and if anybody looks confused, we try to explain it to them right away."

Palenske said the problem is rooted in the company price increase to the dealers and the age of the pumps.

"Phillips and Standard were the only two companies to make the big boost in January into the 50-cent-a-gallon range. These pumps were installed when the station opened in 1959. I understand most pumps that are 10 years old or older don't go above 49.9," he said.

PALENKE SAID his station was going to be remodeled by July. The renovation is to include new pumps to handle the higher prices and to serve unleaded gasoline.

"In the meantime, I ordered 12 new price computers for the pumps. I ordered 12 but got only two. I understand Standard ordered 20,000 new ones for their pumps," he said.

Palenske said another source of confusion is the amount due after the car has been filled.

"You see the gallonage is correct, but because the price is for half a gallon we have to double the price shown to get the final price," he said.

"We get some people who really get confused when they ask for $2 worth and the pump only reads a buck," he said.

'Treasury' store slated for a March 6 opening

The J. C. Penney Treasury store and food center under construction at Golf and Algonquin roads in Rolling Meadows is scheduled to open March 6, district manager Harold R. Stone said.

The 160,000-square-foot complex will include a department store, supermarket, auto center, cafeteria and pharmacy.

The store will include Penney's brands as well as name brand items.

A six-bay auto center will offer automotive maintenance as well as the sale of tires and automotive accessories. A gasoline sales island also will be located near the store.

The 30,000-square-foot supermarket section will feature a special checkout system in which items will be checked out by electronic point-of-sale terminals, then bagged and sent via conveyor to the outside pickup station where they may be claimed at a customer's convenience.

A 100-seat cafeteria will be included in the store along with a snack bar located near the front of the store.

Prescription drugs will also be available in the store's pharmacy. The pharmacy will be operated by Thrift Drug Co., a subsidiary of J. C. Penney Co.

Some 250 employees will be used at the new facility, 60 per cent of whom will be used in sales and the remainder in office capacities.

'Raked' autos now outlawed in Illinois

by JOE SWICKARD

The hotrodders can start crying in their malts at the local drive-in.

The revised Illinois Vehicle Code, effective Jan. 1, has banned cars with the "raked" front ends and the jacked-up tails.

According to the Illinois Secretary of State's office, cars with modified suspension systems that raise the body more than three inches from its original position, or cars with more than a three-inch difference between the height of the front and rear bumper cannot be legally operated on the roads.

As a result of the new code, those hot cars with the high-rise rear ends that look like fuel-injected bloodhounds sniffing the pavement will be confined to garages, custom auto shows or the dragstrip.

Sgt. Jack Weber, of the Arlington Heights police traffic division, said his department was unaware of the new ruling. He said there may be some trouble enforcing the new law until the department receives formal notification.

OTHER POLICE departments said they were holding back until they received notification from the state.

Mount Prospect police said they "know about the law," but no tickets were being issued until they received the revised statutes.

Lt. Thomas Conte of the Wheeling police, said his men were not going to stop the raked cars until they get it in writing from the state.

However, the streetrodders had better steer clear of Buffalo Grove, because police there are aware of the law.

The law is being enforced "whenever we see them," said Sgt. Ronald Gozdecki, of the Buffalo Grove police. Palatine and Rolling Meadows police are aware of the new law. Rolling Meadows policemen each have a copy of the statute and are on the lookout for offenders.

SCULLY'S Kustom Shop of Wheeling does body customizing, but the manager said the raked fronts and jacked backs have fallen from favor.

"You'll see those in 'American Graffiti' when you go to the movie. They're not doing that too much any more. It was a fad and it's pretty much died out. You may see a couple like that once in a while, though," he said.

He said the extreme rake was "impractical."

"It would effect the steering and your visibility was messed up. It also threw your braking system out of line. On a damp day if you had to hit the brakes hard, you'd find your rear end in front of you," he said.

Scully's assessment of the custom-car scene is accurate. The February issue of Hot Rod magazine shows the only cars with the extreme profiles roaring down the dragstrip in the "funny car" class. Those drivers probably figure they would rather take their chances on the strips than battle the commuter's daily double.

HIGHJACKERS OUTLAWED. The new state vehicle code has banned cars with highrise rear ends. Cars with more than a three-inch lift or "rake" can no longer be operated on the streets. A hot rodding era passed with the new year.

THE TRADE-OFF to be discussed tomorrow would apparently involve the Salt Creek district giving the Rolling Meadows district the land it needs to get to the Countryside district in exchange for reduced rates for Salt Creek residents at Rolling Meadows park facilities.

Schaumburg woman, son, 13, are charged in murder plot

Saladino arranged a meeting at the theater, giving a description of himself and taking a description of the vehicle to be driven to the shopping center, Conroy said.

McGraw, Schaumburg Sgt. John Barabas and Det. Tom Ostermann staked out the parking lot and took videotape dents at Rolling Meadows park facilities.

The Salt Creek district may also ask for a portion of a $6.9 million industrial park now owned by the Rolling Meadows district to make up for the loss in assessed valuation for relinquishing the annexation corridor.

The industrial park is the same one the two districts fought for in a two-year legal battle. The area was illegally annexed by the Rolling Meadows district in 1959, but a final court ruling several months ago allowed the district to keep taxing control of the land.

"This has been talked about for the past few years," Salt Creek Dir. James DeVos said yesterday of the Countryside annexation. "They (the Rolling Meadows district) are in a situation where they need the (Countryside) land. But we would definitely want an equal footing. I know we're not going to give up (the land) for nothing."

"I think we're looking for a break on programming," he added. The arrangement would probably allow Salt Creek residents to take part in Rolling Meadows activities at in-district rather than out-of-district rates, he said.

COUNTRYSIDE Park District Board Pres. Ernest Martin said yesterday, however, that the annexation talk may be premature.

"I think a number of our residents do desire to become part of the Rolling Meadows park district," Martin said. "But I think the problem is we really don't know if the majority want to. Basically it is a question of taxation."

If the area is annexed, Countryside homeowners will be required to pay substantially higher real estate taxes since the tax rate paid to the park district would climb from about 21 cents per $100 assessed valuation to 45 cents per $100.

The increase would mean at least $24 more on a home assessed at $10,000.

"It's not a question of the facilities, but a question of the debt the residents would assume," Martin said. He said before the board would act on an annexation move, residents would be informally polled. "The board would follow the directions of the majority of the residents," he said.

ACCORDING TO Rolling Meadows Park District Dir. Steve Person, the annexation is being sought for three reasons:

- So that the Rolling Meadows district, which is a separate taxing body in the city, can cover the entire city.

- So the park district can grow westward with the city.

- So the income of the district will increase and help offset an expected budget deficit.

Person added he expects the Countryside district to be part of the city district "within a year."

IF THE ANNEXATION comes about, it would mean the city would have only one park district instead of the present three. Scanlan has been critical in the past of the fragmentation of park districts in the city and last month attempted to start action to have the city government take control of the city districts.

The attempt died, however, when the city council voted to support the financially-ailing Rolling Meadows district by waiving a $10,000 fee for police patrol of its parks.

Salt Creek's agreement to the meeting tomorrow apparently means that that district has given up thought of annexing the Countryside area. "I think those people (in Countryside) are more aligned with Rolling Meadows," DeVos said. "I think the majority would rather go to Rolling Meadows."

Husband, an Air Force major, was target

Schaumburg woman, son are charged in murder plot

by STIRLING MORITA

A 31-year-old Schaumburg woman and her 13-year-old son were charged yesterday with conspiring to murder the woman's husband, U. S. Air Force Maj. Duane Swimley Sr., who reportedly is worth $500,000.

Charged with solicitation to commit murder were Darlene Swimley, 322 Meacham Rd., Schaumburg, and her son from a prior marriage, Joseph Enderle.

Mrs. Swimley was arrested at about 11 a.m. yesterday in the parking lot of the Woodfield Theatre in the Woodfield Shopping Center after a month-long investigation by Schaumburg police, police reported. The youth was arrested at a nearby school.

A COOK COUNTY State's Attorney's investigator, posing as a "hit" man, had arranged to collect a $500 advance on a $5,000 "contract" at a meeting outside the theater, according to Schaumburg

Police Chief Martin Conroy. He said Mrs. Swimley passed $100 to the investigator and promised more at a later date.

Schaumburg police uncovered the alleged plot when a Schaumburg man contacted Youth Officer Terry McGraw and said a friend in Rochester, N. Y., told him by telephone that a male reported to be named Swimley had inquired about a murder contract, Conroy said.

Subsequent investigation followed, and police went to the state's attorney's office Wednesday for assistance and for a court order for "eavesdropping" on the Swimley residence.

THE INVESTIGATOR, Joseph Saladino, telephoned the residence and identified himself as the man in Rochester, Conroy said. The youth talked freely about the contract, and a female voice was heard in the background "coaching" the youth, the police chief said. A $5,000 contract was agreed upon in the conversation, authorities said.

Saladino arranged a meeting at the theater, giving a description of himself and taking a description of the vehicle to be driven to the shopping center, Conroy added.

McGraw, Schaumburg Sgt. John Barabas and Det. Tom Ostermann staked out the parking lot and took videotape film from an undercover truck, Conroy said.

THE VEHICLE described in the telephone conversation — a black 1972 Lincoln Continental Mark IV — drove in and passed the theater a couple times, the chief reported. The car stopped, and Saladino entered the vehicle, Conroy said.

The woman driving the car handed over $100 and promised to pay $400 of the advance today.

The woman reportedly said, "It's worth $5,000 to kill my husband."

Swimley was reported to be in Germany. Police contacted the Air Force base in Rantoul, Ill., for a message relay to him.

AUTHORITIES DID not immediately know the motive for the alleged plot, but said Mrs. Swimley told Saladino Swimley was worth about a half million dollars.

The man in New York is from this area and called his friend in Schaumburg, who relayed it to police because "he did not know at the time who the victim was," Conroy said.

Mrs. Swimley has two other sons who were brought to the Schaumburg police station temporarily until police could find a place for them.

Joseph was taken to the Audy Home pending a hearing in Family Court.

Mrs. Swimley was being held in Cook County Jail in lieu of $15,000 bond pending an appearance 9:30 a.m. Feb. 28 in Cook County Circuit Court, 28th and California streets.

Damage estimated at $10,000

2 injured in fire on Braintree Drive

Two Schaumburg men were injured yesterday morning when a fire swept through their split-level home at 915 S. Braintree Dr.

Ken Fabbri, 27, was in good condition yesterday at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, suffering from smoke inhalation, a fractured toe and second-degree burns on the neck and shoulders.

His roommate, Kevin Bergman, 20, was released from the same hospital after being treated for smoke inhalation.

Fire Chief Lloyd Abrahamsen said the damage to the home was about $10,000. He said the cause is still under investigation, but that candles on top of stereo equipment might have been responsible.

Firefighters were summoned to the house at 8:30 a.m. when a neighbor telephoned there were flames shooting out of the windows. Three fire trucks responded, and the fire was extinguished in a half hour, Abrahamsen said. The Hanover Park Fire Department stood by at one of the stations.

ABRAHAMSEN SAID the fire apparently started in the living room and spread along the ceiling to other parts of the house.

Fabbri said he did not know the circumstances of the fire, but added that his roommate woke him up and that he could not exit through the hallway because of dense smoke. He went to the window, jumped one-story down.

Abrahamsen said there were buckets and a garden hose in the house and that it appeared that someone had tried to use them to extinguish the blaze.

He added that the fire had gotten a good start and that the damage to the structure might have been less if the fire department were notified a little sooner. The fire chief said when the trucks arrived, dense smoke was already coming from the interior.

About two hours later, firefighters were summoned back to the fire because someone had spotted smoke still coming from the house. Firemen could not find any rekindled flames.

More commuters make move to pools

by LEA TONKIN

Morning rush hour is no longer every man for himself. A new breed of commuters, with some encouragement from high gasoline prices and maybe from their employers, is getting together to pool it.

It's not unusual to see someone in the passenger seat of the car in front. Your headlights may even pick out a whole backseatful of poolers. Scrunched shoulder-to-shoulder in the pre-dawn ride to work.

"I told them right from the start, that we have to be flexible," said one pool member. "And we turned out to be very compatible."

There's the problem of Wally Phillips vs. Newsradio, the guy who likes a morning cigar vs. the non-smoker, and of course where to stop for a drink after work, but car poolers are finding in this time of energy crisis that riding with the guys isn't bad at all.

Figures are hard to come by, say Northwest suburban firms that now encourage cooperative commuting, but employee interest is growing. Top executives in many cases are leading the way.

AT THE MOTOROLA Inc. Communications Division plant in Schaumburg, a Ridefinder program has been in operation for three years. A computer is used to match up interested employees with others who live nearby and work the same schedule. "One man said he cut his gas bill by more than a third, by being in a car pool," said a Motorola representative.

No figures are available on how many employees recently joined car pools, but "quite a few executives and plant personnel" share rides. The company is discussing a possible joint car pool program with other firms in the vicinity.

At the Western Electric regional headquarters in Rolling Meadows, management offers car pooling information forms to interested employees. Some 125 persons signed up so far in the new Share-a-Ride program. "More will sign up, but they're waiting to see if new names are added to the lists," said a spokesman there. Employees can spot other workers who live in the vicinity through the use of a grid system on a map of the Chicago metropolitan area.

Manager Dick Lane at the Aristocrat of Chicago plant in Elk Grove Village reports car pooling and the use of mass transportation is boosted by the company.

AT THE KEMPER Insurance complex in Long Grove, heavy promotion of car pools brought a number of responses from employees. The personnel department works with potential car poolers to match riding habits. "We started last week to match up, so it will be another week before we can tell exactly how many people got into car pools," said a representative. Some 200 employees indicated interest.

William Krick, director of community relations for the Union 76 division of Union Oil Co. of Calif., Palatine, said a number of people have signed up for car pools in the past six weeks. The company leaves it up to the employee to make arrangements. Economics and, hopefully, patriotism, prompt car pooling, said Krick.

United Air Lines, Inc., Elk Grove township, signs up potential drivers and riders. Special decals are offered to car poolers with three or more members, allowing them to use reserved parking space near the office facilities. Approximately 80 employees are recent car pool members.

Henry Koehler, director of administrative services at Universal Oil Products Co. in Des Plaines, said the company is considering the use of reserved parking spaces for car poolers. "We circulated a questionnaire a couple of months ago which had as part of it, a question about car pools," he said. "The response was sufficient to lead us to display maps in the cafeteria area." Employees who signed up for car pools could arrange car pools on their own.

Rebates for gasoline expenses are offered to employees of Plywood Minnesota, Inc. At the company's outlet in Arlington Heights, manager Roger Pegg said four out of six employees joined a car pool.

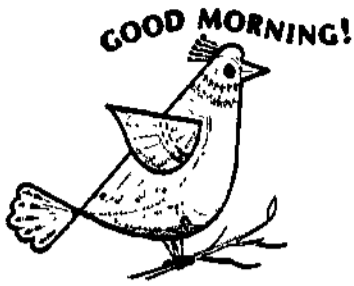

"VERY LITTLE response" was reported by Dick Reimann of FBK Realtors firm in Arlington Heights, to the company's offer of matching up area residents interested in car pooling. "We still

4,500-unit development on Rob Roy site

Apartment-condo complex plans told

by MARCIA KRAMER
Plans were unveiled last night for construction of 4,500 apartment and condominium units on the Rob Roy Golf Course north of Mount Prospect.

The proposed $177,213,000 development would house an estimated 10,922 persons in low-, mid- and high-rise buildings as tall as 12 stories upon its completion in 15 years.

OFFICIALS OF Kenroy Inc., Skokie, outlined plans for the vast project before a capacity crowd of about 75 residents, including three village trustees, in the Mount Prospect Village Hall.

Disclosure of the plans confirmed a Herald report Tuesday that Kenroy would seek to build 4,500 units on the 180-acre golf course and 20-acre adjoining driving range, and substantiated a Herald report on Aug. 17 that up to 4,600 units would be sought.

Initial reaction of residents who attended the public hearing, as expected, appeared to be negative, with most residents especially concerned about the density and flood potential of the property.

THE GOLF COURSE lies east of Wheeling Road between Camp McDonald Road and Euclid Avenue in unincorporated Wheeling Township. It is surrounded mostly by single-family homes and is among the few large undeveloped tracts in the Mount Prospect area.

Kenroy is asking the village to annex the huge tract and to rezone it R-4, planned unit development. It is currently zoned for single-family use.

Following Kenroy's 1½-hour presentation of plans last night by six witnesses, Carolyn Krause, chairman of the zoning board of appeals, continued the public hearing to Feb. 21, when a barrage of questions is expected to be leveled at the developers by area residents.

One resident, Marie L. Caylor, chairman of the Northwest Suburban Council of Associations, an umbrella group incorporating eight subdivisions in the vicinity of Rob Roy, characterized the proposed development as "terrible."

They've got a nine-hole golf course mix-up right in with those buildings," she said. "And the density is much too much."

Two of the village trustees who attended the hearing, George B. Anderson and Richard N. Hendricks, also questioned the density. The third trustee, O. T. Gustus, said he wanted to further study the plans.

HERE'S BASICALLY how the project was described by the developers: The 4,501 units — some apartments and some condominiums with no numerical breakdown determined as yet — would be contained in a series of buildings laid out in a "pyramid effect," with lower structures on the outer rim of the property, leading up to the taller buildings in the center.

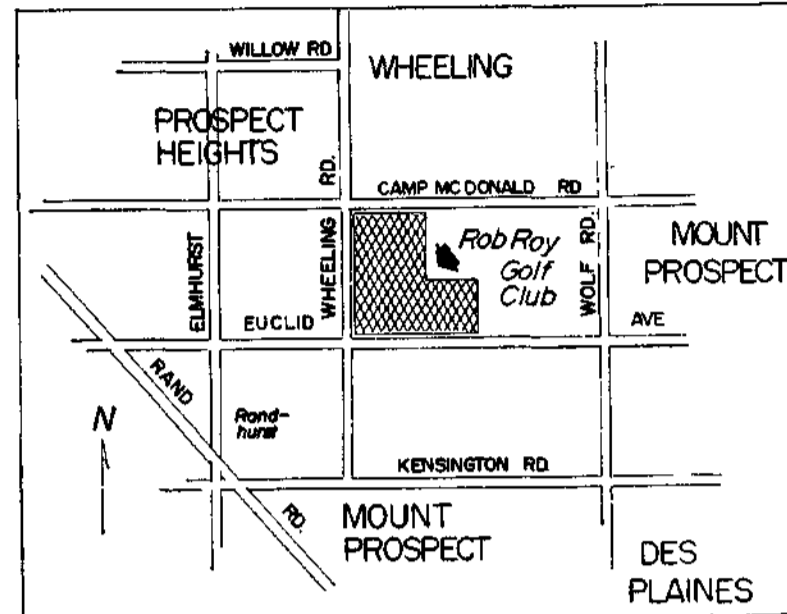

Some 285 one- and two-story townhouses would be scattered around the perimeter of the property. Thirty-six four-story buildings and 14 six-story buildings would form an inner ring.

Clustered toward the center of the development would be five 12-story buildings, with 1½ stories of parking beneath. Maximum height of each tower was estimated at 140 feet.

A BREAKDOWN of the number of units: 1,271 one-bedroom; 2,271 two-bedroom; and 1,059 three-bedroom. Projected costs range from $28,000 to $53,000 per unit.

A main road running north and south would cut through the project, with tributary roads looping the property. Access would be provided on all three adjacent streets: Camp McDonald, Wheeling and Euclid.

Roy Gottlieb, chairman of the board of directors of Kenroy, stated that the project would have "no adverse effect on either the living enjoyment or property values of surrounding property owners." He said construction would be spread over 15 years, with approximately 300 units built each year, to lessen the impact of the project on the surrounding area.

DEVELOPMENT of the Rob Roy Golf Course will have an impact on four nearby towns — Mount Prospect, where the developers are petitioning for annexation; as well as Prospect Heights, Wheeling and Des Plaines.

Unionized Mount Prospect policemen may seek a meeting with village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley to discuss alleged discrimination against them by police Chief Bert Giddens.

Members of the local Combined Counties Police Association (CCPA) chapter will meet Sunday night to decide on a course of action. The CCPA's official magazine this month called for Giddens' resignation in an editorial.

The decision to consult the rank-and-file union members was made late yesterday at a meeting between CCPA head John Flood and elected officials of the local union chapter. The meeting was held at CCPA headquarters in Mount Prospect.

"We're looking to meet with some of the higher echelon of the village to discuss problems in the police department," said Patrolman Warren Fischer, president of the local CCPA chapter. "There is a definite lack of communication," Fischer said, referring to the handling of patrolmen's complaints.

FLOOD SAID he was surprised to read in the Herald that Eppley was unaware of discontent among policemen. "Certainly, he (Eppley) should have known the climate," Flood said.

The Herald reported exclusively yesterday that the union was calling for Giddens' ouster as police chief. In the CCPA editorial, it was stated, "Chief Giddens still finds time to make insulting and disparaging remarks to his supervisors, play one man against another by promising them good positions, discriminate against CCPA members, and generally treat his men in an arbitrary and capricious manner."

Flood said yesterday the editorial was authorized by the elected officials of the Mount Prospect union chapter. However, Fischer would not disclose for publication any specifics of the alleged acts of discrimination by Giddens. Fischer said, "That will come out later. Let's keep it general for now."

Approximately 30 patrolmen belong to the Mount Prospect chapter. The chapter was formed in May, 1972, and recognized by the village in October, 1972.

Village Trustee Alice Harms:

'New ways needed to make developers pay their way'

by KURT BAER
The Village of Arlington Heights needs to know the cost of growing up.
The cost of adding another thousand persons to the population.
The toll in village services taken by each new shopping center.
That is the opinion of Trustee Alice Harms who has urged that new ways be found to charge developers for the cost of the municipal services their projects consume.

The alternative to higher fees for developers is to continue passing on the costs of added growth to every village taxpayer, said Mrs. Harms.

"I do not think we can continue smacking homeowners for what it costs when developers tap on to existing services," she told a recent meeting of the village finance committee.

The existing fee scale does not begin to cover the cost of adding more people, commerce and industry to the Village of Arlington Heights, she said.

"I don't advocate a no-growth policy for Arlington Heights. But there have been court cases upon court cases where municipalities have been able to say they will not provide services until they're able to do so."

"We've been leapfrogging that for years," she said.

A YEAR AGO, Arlington Heights enacted a series of tap-on fees for new connections to the village water system. The charges, which vary between apartment, commercial and single-family buildings, help pay for the continued expansion of the water supply network.

A total of $242,000 has been collected over the year's time.

Similar fees could be charged for sewer connections, police and fire protection, planning advice, street maintenance and a host of other municipal services, Mrs. Harms suggested.

The financial needs of the school and park districts also could be taken into account, she said.

Additional costs to builders ultimately will be passed on in the sale or rental price of the property. But this may be preferable to continually taxing the whole village to pay the cost of new projects.

The Village of Schaumburg, and the development department in Naperville already have a series of capital assessments worked out for new building Mrs. Harms said.

SEVERAL OBJECTIONS were raised to feasibility of applying higher fees to development in Arlington Heights, particularly single-family projects which are already an economic dinosaur on the verge of extinction here.

Trustee Frank Palmieri said that a policy of "blackmail" is probably more applicable in Schaumburg where a number of high-profit industrial and commercial developments have been built.

"I'm not talking about blackmail. I'm talking about a rational basis for making charges," Mrs. Harms countered.

Another trustee, J. Burton Thompson, said, in Arlington Heights higher costs will only bring requests for higher density building, which in turn will put increased demand on village services.

The result, he said, would be a vicious circle that would discourage the development of new single-family housing.

"Large areas of Schaumburg are going to be used for commercial, retail and industrial purposes," Thompson said. "I think there's a big difference between that and a bedroom, single-family community like Arlington Heights."

VILLAGE PRES. Jack Walsh said determining the cost of additional growth would be relatively easy to do, but also would be of relatively little value because the formula would ignore political considerations.

"What if it turns out that apartments are a big bargain in terms of cost to the community. That still isn't going to convince people they ought to be built everywhere," he said.

"Statistics answer only a very small part of the question," he added.

Palmieri said there are other ways to recover the costs of new development besides high building fees.

He pointed to the village's 5 per cent utility tax as a way of making up the difference between costs and the money received from property taxes.

But despite differences over details of Mrs. Harms' proposal, the committee agreed that the village administration should investigate areas where building fees might be raised.

Youths still being sought in Dryden fire investigation

Arlington Heights police are pressing their search for two juveniles wanted for questioning in connection with the Dryden Apartments fire Monday night that left 24 families homeless.

Lt. Paul Buckholz of the police juvenile division said his men are concentrating their efforts in trying to find two Boy Scouts who may have information about the youths being sought.

Buckholz said the scouts tried to tell police and fire officials at the scene of the blaze they had seen the two youths in question. Apparently, Buckholz said, officials were too busy to immediately listen to the Scouts' information.

"When they (officials) got a minute, they couldn't find the Scouts," Buckholz said.

THE FIRE IS believed to have been the work of arsonists. Field investigations by the police and fire departments indicate a flammable liquid was poured on the basement floor and then ignited.

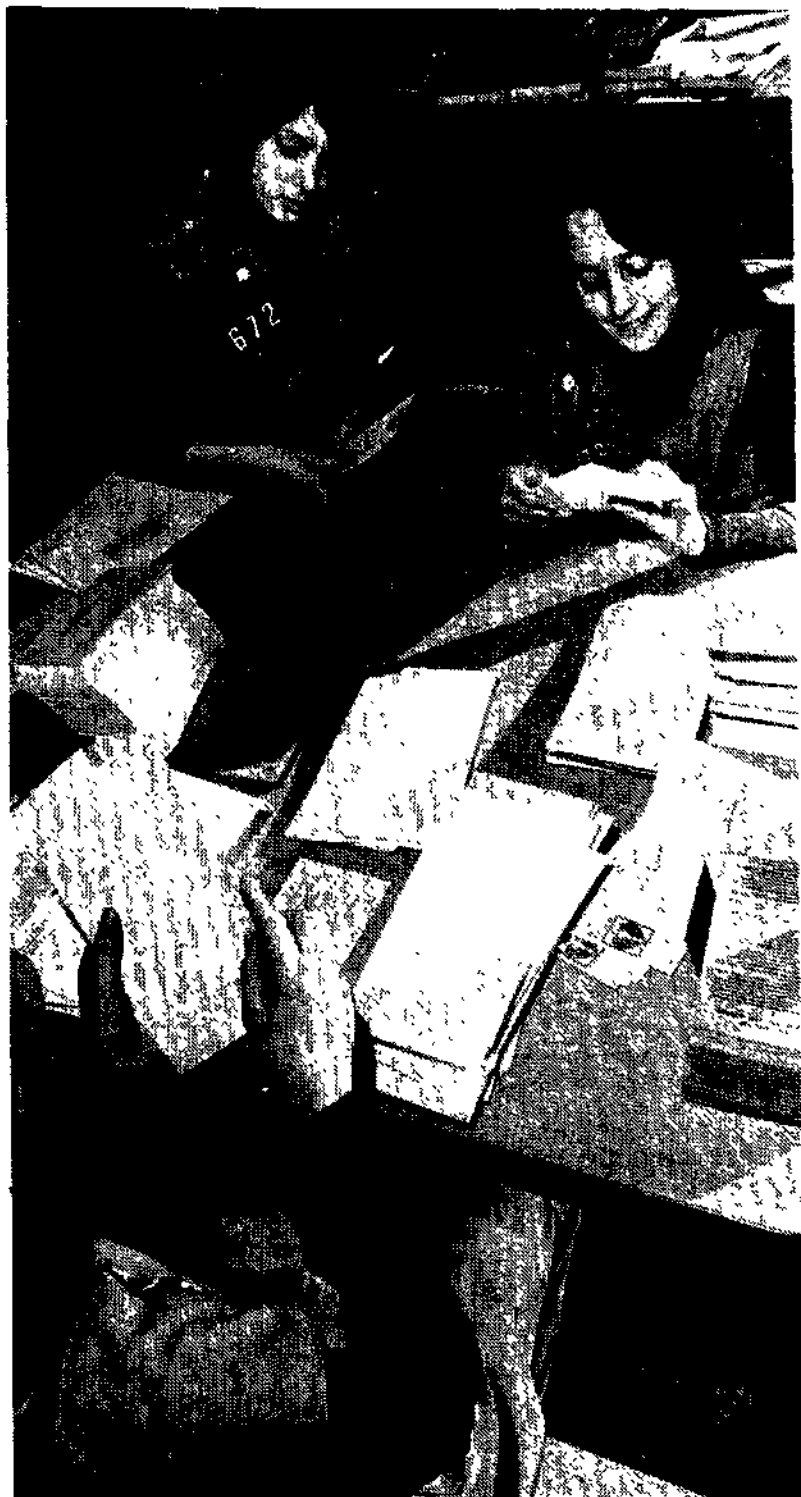

Police have been attempting to track down two youths reportedly seen fleeing the building. They were described as being about 11 or 12 years old, having long hair, and were wearing ski jackets and blue jeans.

Buckholz said school children in the area have been questioned; so far without positive results. He said local Boy Scout troops are also being screened to find the two Scouts from the fire scene.

Buckholz has asked the Scouts to contact him, or any juvenile officer, at 253-2340, ext. 278 or 279. He also asked other persons with information about the fire to contact his division of the police.

The Dryden Apartments, across from the Arlington Market Shopping Center, have been plagued with fires since last April when another building in the complex was burned. It, too, could have been the result of arson, police said.

Prior to Monday night's fire, residents reported a series of trash and mailbox fires during the weekend.

LINDA HOWLETT, left, and Kim Williams are pitching in to help with the upcoming drive for the Heart Fund in Arlington Heights. They are members of Girl Scout Troop 672 and are shown stuffing envelopes at Juliet Low School.

26 cents per gallon? Not quite...

by JOE SWICKARD

It looks like manna from heaven, until the motorists raise their eyes to hand-lettered signs on the pumps, at the Phillips 66 station on Euclid Avenue at Northwest Highway.

The price on the meter is 26 cents per gallon, but the signs clearly inform customers the price is only for a half gallon.

Station manager Dan Palenske explained the situation: "We aren't trying to mislead anybody. The price is 52 cents a gallon and the pump computers only go to 49.9 cents. We have the signs up and if anybody looks confused, we try to explain it to them right away."

Palenske said the problem is rooted in the company price increase to the dealers and the age of the pumps.

"Phillips and Standard were the only two companies to make the big boost in January into the 50-cents-a-gallon range. These pumps were installed when the station opened in 1959. I understand most pumps that are 10 years old or older don't go above 49.9," he said.

PALENESKE said his station was going to be remodeled by July. The renovation is to include new pumps to handle the higher prices and to serve unleaded gasoline.

"In the meantime, I ordered 12 new price computers for the pumps. I ordered 12 but got only two. I understand Standard ordered 20,000 new ones for their pumps," he said.

Palenske said another source of confusion is the amount due after the car has been filled.

"You see the gallonage is correct, but because the price is for half a gallon we have to double the price shown to get the final price," he said.

"We get some people who really get confused when they ask for $2 worth and the pump only reads a buck," he said.

Wife, son charged in conspiracy to murder husband

by STIRLING MORITA

A 31-year-old Schaumburg woman and her 13-year-old son were charged yesterday with conspiring to murder the woman's husband, U. S. Air Force Maj. Duane Swimley Sr., who reportedly is worth $500,000.

Charged with solicitation to commit murder were Darlene Swimley, 322 Meacham Rd., Schaumburg, and her son from a prior marriage, Joseph Enderle.

Mrs. Swimley was arrested at about 11

a.m. yesterday in the parking lot of the Woodfield Theatre in the Woodfield Shopping Center after a month-long investigation by Schaumburg police, police reported. The youth was arrested at a nearby school.

A COOK COUNTY State's Attorney's investigator, posing as a "hit" man, had arranged to collect a $500 advance on a $5,000 "contract" at a meeting outside the theater, according to Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy. He said

Mrs. Swimley passed $100 to the investigator and promised more at a later date.

Schaumburg police uncovered the alleged plot when a Schaumburg man contacted Youth Officer Terry McGraw and said a friend in Rochester, N. Y., told him by telephone that a male reported to be named Swimley had inquired about a murder contract, Conroy said.

Subsequent investigation followed, and police went to the state's attorney's office Wednesday for assistance and for a court order for "eavesdropping" on the Swimley residence.

THE INVESTIGATOR, Joseph Saladin, telephoned the residence and identified himself as the man in Rochester, Conroy said. The youth talked freely about the contract, and a female voice was heard in the background "coaching" the youth, the police chief said. A $5,000 contract was agreed upon in the conversation.

At Wheeling Township Republican meet

Burditt tells Senate campaign plan

Wheeling Township Republicans last night turned out to give a vote of confidence to the GOP candidate for the U.S. Senate, former state representative George Burditt, and to hear two candidates for state treasurer appeal for their support.

Appearing with Burditt were Mrs. Jeanette Mullen of Barrington, former Constitutional Convention delegate, and Harry Page, Springfield high school administrator, who are contesting for the Republican nomination for treasurer in the March 19 primary election.

With nearly 100 members of the Wheeling Republican Township Organization present, Burditt asserted grass roots GOP organizations which can show that kind of strength hold the key to Republican hopes in the 1974 election.

Burditt said that while campaign issues will center on the economy and the energy crisis, the major problems facing Republicans are general apathy on the part of the electorate and a general lack of confidence among the public — not only toward government but toward the press and industry.

BURDITT SAID THE apathy could be overcome by assembling "organizations like you have here," and that confidence could be restored by "looking at things that can be done, taking action on them, and following it through."

In appealing for their primary election support, Page told the Republicans that in spite of the shattered public confidence over the Watergate scandal, "People are not tired of the Republican party, they're just tired of politicians."

Acknowledging Mrs. Mullen as "a qualified candidate" for the treasurer's job, he appealed for support as the only candidate for state office from "a line south of Cook County." Pointing out that Democratic incumbent Alan Dixon is the only state officeholder from Downstate, Page warned that independents and Democratic "crossovers" would not vote in the primary for a Cook County candidate, although Mrs. Mullen actually lives in Lake County.

Mrs. Mullen pointed out that she is the first woman in Illinois to run for a major state office but declared that was not an issue in the contest. "Geographic location is not an issue either," she declared.

School board candidate interviews tomorrow

The Arlington Heights School Dist. 25 nominating committee will screen candidates for the spring school board election at 9:30 a.m. Saturday at the district's administration building, 301 W. South St.

Three candidates will be interviewed by members of the screening subcommittee. The candidates are Robert Kazlauskis, 630 N. Kaspar; James Foster of 1416 N. Walnut and Joan Klusmann of 3

E. Canterbury Kazlauskis and Mrs. Klusmann are incumbents.

According to the nominating committee's bylaws, the purpose of the interviews is to find well qualified candidates to run in the school elections. This year there are two openings on the board.

Results of the screening will be distributed to members of the nominating committee who, on Feb. 6, will vote to endorse two candidates.

The Arlington Teachers Assn. Wednesday interviewed Kazlauskis, Foster and Mrs. Klusmann and voted to endorse all three to run for the school board. The association represents more than 400 Arlington Heights elementary teachers.

The election is expected to be held April 13.

Schaumburg woman, son, 13, are charged in murder plot

sation, authorities said.

Saladino arranged a meeting at the theater, giving a description of himself and taking a description of the vehicle to be driven to the shopping center, Conroy added.

McGraw, Schaumburg Sgt. John Barabas and Det. Tom Ostermann staked out the parking lot and took videotape film from an undercover truck, Conroy said.

THE VEHICLE described in the telephone conversation — a black 1972 Lincoln Continental Mark IV — drove in and passed the theater a couple times, the chief reported. The car stopped, and Saladino entered the vehicle, Conroy said.

The woman driving the car handed over $100 and promised to pay $400 of the advance today.

The woman reportedly said, "It's worth $5,000 to kill my husband."

Swimley was reported to be in Germany. Police contacted the Air Force base in Rantoul, Ill., for a message relay to him.

AUTHORITIES DID not immediately know the motive for the alleged plot, but said Mrs. Swimley told Saladino Swimley was worth about a half million dollars.

The man in New York is from this area and called his friend in Schaumburg, who relayed it to police because "he did not know at the time who the victim was," Conroy said.

Mrs. Swimley has two other sons who were brought to the Schaumburg police station temporarily until police could find a place for them.

Joseph was taken to the Audy Home pending a hearing in Family Court.

Mrs. Swimley was being held in Cook County Jail in lieu of $15,000 bond pending an appearance 9:30 a.m. Feb. 28 in Cook County Circuit Court, 26th and California streets.

PTA notes

Ivy Hill PTA will sponsor a school forum Wednesday at 7:45 p.m. at the school, 2211 N. Burke Dr., Arlington Heights.

The program, second in the forum series, is "Discipline," and will consist of a dialogue between parents and school faculty. The forum series is designed to enable communication between parents and educators.

The function of a learning center will be the topic of a Riley School PTA meeting at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 29.

A slide program has been prepared by Ruth Hauschuld, learning center director, to show the purpose of the learning center and how it relates to classroom activities.

After the slide presentation and a business meeting, parents will have an opportunity to play "student" and go through a sampling of experiences in the learning center, similar to activities the children participate in during a school day.

DO YOU HAVE ENOUGH ENERGY?

Although the world is experiencing an energy crisis and it has imposed difficulties in the way most of us lead our everyday lives, there are still a few areas where energy should be plentiful. Do you wake up each morning with the personal "get-up and go," "I'm ready to face the day?" Or do you feel tired out before you start?

Sometimes a lack of energy can possibly be due to certain deficiencies in your system. Your physician can usually determine what it is and recommend a vitamin preparation or tonic to help you overcome it. We always have on hand a very large supply of these products.
